Oscars roll out the red carpet for star quality

By Sarah Jamieson
TV Media

Millions of movie lovers and entertainment professionals tune in to the Oscars each year, cheering on the year's achievements in filmmaking. The 90th Annual Academy Awards, hosted once more by Jimmy Kimmel ("Jimmy Kimmel Live!"), airs live on ABC on Sunday, March 4.

Though the 89th Academy Awards ceremony is a whole year gone, no one has forgotten the Best Picture incident, when "La La Land" was mistakenly announced as the winner of the coveted award. The error was quickly corrected and "Moonlight" received the Oscar as due, but the blunder is now infamous. The snafu haunts Kimmel to this day — a promo video shows his nightmares and sudden phobia of envelopes.

Nevertheless, ABC Entertainment president Channing Dungey has great faith in bringing back Kimmel to host the event for a second time. "After just one year, we can't imagine anyone else hosting the Oscars," he said in a statement. "Jimmy's skillful command of the stage is invaluable on a night when anything can happen — and does."

This year, "The Shape of Water" leads the pack with 13 nominations: Best Director (Guillermo del Toro), Best Cinematography (Dan Laustsen), Best Lead Actress (Sally Hawkins), Best Supporting Actress (Olivia Spencer) and Best Supporting Actor (Richard Jenkins). It's also competing with "Dunkirk," "Lady Bird," "Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri," "Call Me by Your Name," "Darkest Hour," "Phantom Thread," "The Post" and "Get Out" for Best Picture.

The second out of the gate is "Dunkirk." It's up for awards in directing (Christopher Nolan), production design and sound editing, among others. Nolan is competing with Paul Thomas Anderson's "Phantom Thread," Greta Gerwig's "Lady Bird" and Jordan Peele's "Get Out" for Best Director. Peele is the fifth black director nominated for the award, and Gerwig is the fifth woman.

"Dunkirk" is also going up against "Star Wars: The Last Jedi" and "Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri" for Best Original Score. It won't be an easy win against John Williams, who scored "The Last Jedi" — the composer could fill an orchestra pit with the awards he's won.

"Jimmy Kimmel Live!" host Jimmy Kimmel hosts the 90th Annual Academy Awards

Netflix has already made Academy Award history as the first streaming service to land eight nominations, including four for its feature film "Mudbound." Mary J. Blige has gotten a nod for her performance as an actress in a supporting role. She's up against Laurie Metcalf in "Lady Bird," Leslie Manville in "Phantom Thread" and Allison Janney in "I, Tonya."

"Mudbound" also shares another milestone: the first nomination of a woman for achievement in cinematography for Rachel Morrison, who's up against "Darkest Hour," "Dunkirk," "The Shape of Water" and "Blade Runner 2049." Though Netflix has yet to completely win over the Academy with the Best Picture nomination (like Amazon's nomination for "Manchester By the Sea" last year), the platform is gaining momentum. It was nominated twice for Best Documentary Feature ("Icarus" and "Strong Island") this year.

"Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri" got seven nods, including one for leading actress Frances McDormand. Her biggest competition is Saoirse Ronan for "Lady Bird." "Three Billboards" also garnered a double nomination for Best Actor in a Supporting Role for Woody Harrelson and Sam Rockwell. Willem Dafoe joins them for the supporting actor nomination for his role in "The Florida Project." "Three Billboards" is also competing with "Lady Bird" for Best Original Screenplay, along with "The Big Sick," "Get Out" and "The Shape of Water."

Denzel Washington has another nomination this year for his leading role in "Roman J. Israel, Esq." He's going head to head with Gary

Oldman for "Darkest Hour," Daniel Kaluuya in "Get Out," Timothée Chalamet in "Call Me by Your Name" and Daniel Day-Lewis in "Phantom Thread."

The host joked that there were some snubs he didn't agree with, citing "Wonder Woman" as a prime example while venting on his show, "Jimmy Kimmel Live!" He also thought Steven Spielberg and Tom Hanks should have been nominated for "The Post," but the two nods the film did receive are certainly nothing to sneeze at.

In reality, Kimmel seems surprisingly calm about his hosting gig, despite what the promo implies about his lingering fear of envelopes. With the fallout from the recent Harvey Weinstein scandal, we can expect the air to be rife with tension, and for there to be a few speeches on the subject.

Of course, audiences should expect the long-standing gag between Kimmel and Matt Damon ("The Martian," 2015) to continue. Though it might be getting a little old at this point, Kimmel will (hopefully) trim the bit this year and give poor Damon a break from his chirping.

It will also be interesting to see if Kimmel delivers food to the audience this year, which is quickly becoming a tradition. The first time, the emcee fed the crowd peanut butter and jelly sandwiches; the second round included parachutes of candy, cookies and doughnuts floating from the ceiling. What culinary display he comes up with this year remains to be seen, or he may drop the nibbles all together.

Don't miss the glamour and excitement of the red carpet when the 90th Annual Academy Awards airs Sunday, March 4, on ABC.

Set them free: The judges are let loose in 'Guy's Grocery Games'

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Quick, someone call store security — Flavortown Market's judges are running amok! At the best of times, "Guy's Grocery Games" can sometimes feel like organized chaos, but if the judges themselves abandon their posts, then it's anyone's guess as to what host Guy Fieri may be up to.

A new season of the cooking competition gets underway Sunday, March 4, on Food Network, with a very special episode titled "Judge vs. Judge." None of "Triple G's" long-established rules are safe as Guy tosses them out and challenges some of the show's most familiar judges to a series of one-on-one, head-to-head culinary battles.

In the first round, "Food Network Star" winner Justin Warner brings his new school style of cooking in a faceoff against celebrity chef Rocco DiSpirito's old school cuisine. Unlike a normal "Grocery Games" contest, though, the second round features an entirely new pair of competing judges, with grilled cheese master Eric Green-span battling it out for supermarket superiority against chef Aaron May. Finally, in Round 3, chef Carl Ruiz and restaurateur Antonia Lofaso go head to head.

Don't worry, though: "Guy's Grocery Games" hasn't permanently changed up its successful formula. After all, with an incredible 16 seasons behind it, it must be doing something right. This season's next episode, airing Wednesday, March 7, is a themed episode that's sure to get every carnivore's mouth watering: bacon. Four bacon-loving chefs are in Flavortown Market competing for a shot at the $20,000 prize, and Guy's ready to throw curveball after curveball at them as they zip around the supermarket shopping for their bacon-focused dishes.

Even when it veers off its well-worn path, "Guy's Grocery Games" never strays too far from its winning premise: chefs preparing amazing dishes in a supermarket, with fun twists and speed-bumps all tying into the all-too-familiar setting. It's that setting that's set "Triple G" apart from similar cooking competitions and helped it carve out its own unique identity. The new season premieres Sunday, March 4, on Food Network.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: Is Cesar Millan going to have new seasons of any of his shows?

A: At the moment, no, but it seems pretty certain someone's going to get back into the Cesar Millan business soon.

TV is in the midst of its first Cesar-free period since the famed dog trainer hit the airwaves in 2004 with "The Dog Whisperer." That show ran for a whopping 12 years until its end in 2016, but Millan's had numerous other shows on at the same time and since.

His most recent series, "Cesar Millan's Dog Nation," aired on Nat Geo Wild for a short season last spring, but it hasn't been heard of again.

The cable channel has since held its upfront presentation, in which it informs potential advertisers of its programming for the coming year, and "Dog Nation" wasn't included in it. That's not necessarily a cancellation, but it sure looks like one.

It's also pretty likely that before long, either Millan or someone at one of the cable networks will come up with a new, slightly different premise to get him back on TV.

Q: I'm wondering if a DVD of the movie "The Holly and the Ivy" is available in North America. The only one I can find is sold in the U.K. and can't be played here.

A: The short, and very unhelpful answer to your question is: I'm not sure.

What I know is that it is indeed hard to find North American DVD versions of "The Holly and the Ivy" (1952). I also know that there are a couple of sites that claim to be selling North American (also known as Region 1) versions, but if you look hard enough on the internet, you can find someone claiming to sell unicorn fur, too.

The fact that none of the major retailers — which you've probably already checked — don't seem to have copies suggests perhaps the claims are false. You have to ask yourself how BobsRareMovies.biz

(not a real site) has a copy when, say, Amazon doesn't.

That's not to say the other sites are lying — there are perfectly good reasons why they might have a copy while the majors don't — but you do need to be careful, and, unfortunately, that usually means being suspicious.

One of the reasons smaller sites might stock something bigger ones don't is supply and demand, which is the economic law at work here.

"The Holly and the Ivy" is a big deal in Europe, the land of Region 2 DVD players, but it isn't very well known over here. Thus, it may be that the company that owns the distribution rights (French media giant StudioCanal) has produced a Region 1 version, but the major retailers over here haven't bothered to stock it because they don't think it would sell. Unfortunately, the deals that distributors like StudioCanal have with their retailers generally mean they won't sell their wares directly to the public, so we can't know this for sure.
