TV with soul: New ABC drama follows a man on a mission

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

Between tragic weather events, political tension and social unrest, it seems as if humanity is losing its way. While it may appear that bad news is everywhere, however, stories of compassion and hope are all around us. There are people devoted to making the world a better place, and a new fantasy drama follows a man on a journey to do just that.

Jason Ritter ("Joan of Arcadia") stars as Kevin Finn, a once selfish, materialistic young man on a mission to save humanity by performing acts of kindness and selflessness under the guidance of an unusual celestial being in "Kevin (Probably) Saves the World," airing Tuesday, Nov. 14, on ABC.

After an encounter with a meteorite that crash lands near his family home, Kevin meets Yvette (Kimberly Hébert Gregory, "Vice Principals"), the aforementioned celestial being. She informs him that she's here to guide and protect him as he saves humanity. Kevin is the only one who can see or hear Yvette, which can be awkward when someone catches him talking to her.

Of course, the plot may sound far-fetched to the average TV viewer, but the show has real heart. In a promo for the series, Gregory explains the meaning behind the drama's unconventional premise.

"It's about making ourselves better, and reaching out and making the world better," the actress said.

That's exactly what Kevin is tasked with doing, and he has an uphill climb. After hitting rock bottom, he returns to his childhood home to live with his widowed twin sister, Amy (JoAnna Garcia Swisher, "Once Upon a Time"), and her teenage daughter, Reese (Chloe East, "True Blood"). In the beginning, Kevin's relationship with Reese is strained at best, but Amy encourages her daughter to give him a chance.

While under Yvette's tutelage, Kevin learns that each generation contains 36 righteous souls who protect the human race merely with their existence. For whatever reason, Kevin is the only rightteous soul left in this generation, a statistic that has plunged the world into a state of crisis. The world needs the 36 to persevere and provide hope, and now it's Kevin's job to "power up" his soul so that he can find and anoint a new generation of righteous souls. For her part, Yvette serves as his drill sergeant, employing very un-angelic tactics to keep him on track.

She may be hard on Kevin, but he seems to need some tough love; he hasn't always behaved so saintly. As Ritter expressed in a promo, Kevin "certainly wouldn't seem like anyone's first choice to save the world" — but that may very well be the point. Even those with flaws and foibles can change the world, one act of kindness at a time.

For his part, Ritter has earned the respect of critics and fans for the work as the reluctant hero, which isn't his first regular series role. Son of the late, great actor John Ritter and actress Nancy Morgan, the young Ritter rose through the Hollywood ranks with roles in such films as "Freddy vs. Jason" (2003) and "Raise Your Voice" (2004), while also playing a main role in "Joan of Arcadia." His recurring role on NBC's "Parenthood" earned him an Emmy nomination. Other credits include "The Class" and "The Event."

Fresh off her breakout role as Dr. Belinda Brown in HBO's "Vice Principals," Ritter's co-star Gregory has appeared in some of the biggest hits on television, such as "Better Call Saul," "Brooklyn Nine-Nine" and "Devious Maids."

Garcia Swisher has been acting since the age of 10, having landed roles in such prominent series as "Are You Afraid of the Dark,"

"Freak and Geeks" and "Party of Five." She also appeared in "Reba," "Gossip Girl" and "Better With You," and has a recurring role in ABC's "Once Upon a Time" as mermaid Ariel.

Young actress East boasts a wealth of experience that belies her age. Her credits include "True Blood," "Liv and Maddie" and "Ice."

The supporting cast also includes India de Beaufort ("Veep") as Kristen Allen, J. August Richards ("Angel") as Sheriff Deputy Nathan Purcell, and Dustin Ybarra ("We Bought a Zoo," 2011) as Tyler Medina.

The team behind the scenes is just as impressive as the one in front of the camera. In an interview with IndieWire.com, co-creators Michele Fazekas and Tara Butters admitted that they knew the kooky premise and sense of humor was a bit of a stretch for a network drama, but they hope "Kevin (Probably) Saves the World" finds an audience. Luckily, they've had experience with unconventional dramas thanks to their work on "Marvel's Agent Carter," "Reaper" and "Resurrection." Their early careers trace back to "The X-Files," where they learned to mix stand-alone elements with serialized storylines, as in "Kevin (Probably) Saves the World."

While many of us struggle to find peace amidst the hustle and bustle of everyday life, this light-hearted drama can serve as a reminder that everyone — even the hapless "Kevins" out there — can make the world a better place. For inspiration and entertainment, check out "Kevin (Probably) Saves the World," airing Tuesday, Nov. 14, on ABC.

At a network that has what can feel like an entire stable full of stars, Guy Fieri really does stand out from the crowd, and not just thanks to his distinct spiky 'do or his larger-than-life personality. The host is definitely the face of Food Network, and his latest show just helps to cement that well-earned reputation.

"Guy's Big Project" premiered last week and continues Sunday nights on the culinary channel. For the host of "Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives," the new series must feel right at home — when it comes down to it, it's very much a cross between "Triple D" and "Food Network Star," another show that holds a special place in Guy's heart.

Before he was, well, a Food Network star, Guy competed for the chance to make his own show in season 2 of "Star" back in 2006 (then called "The Next Food Network Star"), which he won.

With the long-running success of "Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives," it seems that the powers that be at Food Network are looking for the next big culinary-travel series, and who better to help them find it than the king of the genre? "Guy's Big Project" features six hopefuls looking to land their own Food Network series. They've all come with a pitch for a new show, and over the course of six episodes, they have to sell not only the idea, but also themselves, to a team of Food Network veterans.

Fieri may be running the show, but he's not alone. Iron Chef Alex Guarnaschelli and veteran Food Network producer Mark Dissin are out on the road with the hopefuls, the three of them putting the prospects through their paces and showing them all the behind-the-scenes stuff that goes into making a show of this type.

After making full-fledged pilots in the finale, the winner will be announced and viewers at home will get a special treat as Food Network presents a sneak peek of the winner's new series. First, though, the hopefuls need to impress the "Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives" host and take his years of experience to heart. "Guy's Big Project" airs Sundays on Food Network.

Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: What happened to the Wyatt Earp show with Hugh O'Brian? It's not on anymore and I miss it!

A: It's never easy to answer these ones, because the decisions networks make about which shows to rerun and when are even more mysterious than the decisions about which new shows to keep and which to cancel.

The problem is, networks have 76 years of commercial TV broadcasting to choose from when picking shows to rerun (commercial TV began in the U.S. in 1941, bringing with it the first "TV shows" as we know them).

All this is to say that it's possible people have stopped airing "The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp" just to give something else a try for a while.

To be fair, the show has had its share of chances. It's been around almost as long as commercial TV — it debuted on ABC in 1955 and aired a whopping 226 episodes over six years. It's considered an early classic of the western TV genre (it debuted the same year as "Gunsmoke" and the two are often credited with pioneering the western TV boom that followed).

If you're aching for more of O'Brian in his most famous role, you can try looking up the TV movie he made in 1994, "Wyatt Earp: Return to Tombstone," or you can look up another appearance: In 1959, he appeared as Wyatt Earp for about a second in the Bob Hope comedy "Alias Jesse James."

As a very elaborate joke, the film's climactic shootout features brief, uncredited appearances by stars of popular western shows of the time. Others include Ward Bond as his "Wagon Train" character, Maj. Seth Adams, and James Arness as his "Gunsmoke" character Marshal Matt Dillon.

Q: Who is the lead guy from the first "Pitch Perfect" movie?

A: I believe the guy you're looking for is Skylar Astin, who played Jesse in the first two Pitch Perfect films, but not the upcoming third installment.

Not surprisingly, he started out as a musical-theater guy before scoring fame as Jesse in 2012's "Pitch Perfect," the surprise-hit comedy about an all-girl acapella singing group. Astin played a member of the rival male group, but also the love interest for star Anna Kendrick.

Despite his role, he ended up finding real-world love with the other Anna in the cast, Anna Camp, whom he married a year ago.

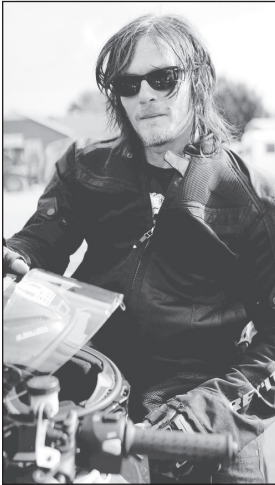

Along with appearing in "Pitch Perfect 2" in 2015, Astin has appeared in a number of other films and TV shows since. Most notably, he currently stars in the Epix comedy series "Graves" opposite Nick Nolte. On the big screen, he appeared in the indie comedy "21 & Over" in 2013, and in the ensemble cast of the 2016 comedy "Flock of Dudes."

Don't bother looking for him in "Pitch Perfect 3," due out in December — he won't be joining the ladies of the Barden Bellas singing group when they take off on a USO tour to Europe.

CBS
Young Sheldon
Nine-year-old Sheldon Cooper (Iain Armitage) may be a bona fide genius, but he still sometimes struggles to make sense of the world around him in a new episode of “Young Sheldon,” airing Thursday, Nov. 16, on CBS. A prequel to “The Big Bang Theory,” this comedy takes a look at Sheldon’s early years in East Texas.
