Golden age of comedy: ‘I’m Dying Up Here’ returns for season 2

By Francis Babin
TV Media

Standup comedy is hard, and it’s definitely not for everyone. It takes a special someone to bare it all and try to make a crowd full of strangers laugh. Accurate depictions of standup comedy and comedians on the big and small screen are arguably even harder to pull off, but “I’m Dying Up Here” seems to have finally succeeded where many have failed before. The highs and lows of those trying to make it big in Hollywood continue in the second-season premiere of the comedy-drama, airing Sunday, May 6, on Showtime.

“I’m Dying Up Here” is hardly the first series to examine comedians working on their craft, but such shows generally tend to be over-the-top portrayals of behind-the-scenes antics. Fan favorites such as “30 Rock” and “The Larry Sanders Show” depict how comedy shows come together, but not the grueling lives of the comedians who work on them.

Based on the 2010 bestselling book by William Knoedelseder, the series produced by Jim Carrey (“Man on the Moon,” 1999) explores the famed Los Angeles standup scene of the 1970s and follows a group of young comedians attempting to make it big by performing on Johnny Carson’s “The Tonight Show.” Before they can go mainstream, however, these up-and-coming comics must succeed at Goldie’s comedy club.

When we were first introduced to Goldie (Melissa Leo, “The Fighter,” 2010) and the club that bears her name last season, they were on top of the comedy world. Her club was the place to be, and through her in-your-face toughness, encouragement and mentoring, she helped rising stars gain confidence and succeed, as we saw with fresh-faced Boston buds Eddie (Michael Angarano, “Sky High,” 2005) and Ron (Clark Duke, “Hot Tub Time Machine,” 2010). She also helped the comics get sit-com roles, radio gigs and other solid work, but by the end of the season, Goldie and her club were in a downward spiral.

The first season finished in a literal blaze of glory when rival club, King Theodore’s, was burned to the ground, and the new season picks up in the aftermath of the fire. Leading up to it, we saw many comics, including superstar in the making, Adam (RJ Cyler, “Power Rangers,” 2017), desert Goldie’s for Teddy’s due to the former’s policy of not paying comics.

The new season addresses the deserters and also explores Nick’s (Jake Lacy, “Girls”) sobriety and its influence on his new act. Will audiences accept his new, raw act, and, more importantly, will he manage to stay on the wagon? Cassie’s (Ari Graynor, “Bad Teacher”) television pilot, “Girls Are Funny, Too,” is once again a focal point of the new season. Additionally, we will see if Ralph (Erik Griffin, “Workaholics”) finally starts to incorporate his time in Vietnam into his act and transition into a more topical comic in the politically charged post-Watergate climate.

The second season promises a bevy of guest stars but also several new characters who play an important role in the lives of Goldie’s comics. The ever-talented Brad Garrett (“Everybody Loves Raymond”) is set for a season-long arc as Roy Martin, a veteran and comedy legend. Throughout the season, he will impart his wisdom on the young comics and, much like Goldie, he doesn’t shy away from dropping hurtful truth bombs and breaking a few spirits. Trying to recover from her downward spiral, Goldie tries to form a business partnership with the old pro in order to expand her comedy presence.

Making a particularly inopportune arrival this season is Goldie’s 17-year-old estranged and troubled daughter, Amanda (Stefania LaVie Owen, “Chance”), who reappears in her mother’s life after running away from home. Sure to cause trouble elsewhere is Gloria Whitfield (Nicole Ari Parker, “Time After Time”), a recently divorced, successful producer of the hit series “Soul Train” who becomes romantically involved with one of the comics.

Trying to make waves is Dawn Lima (Xosha Roquemore, “The Mindy Project”), a fearless preacher’s daughter who has something to prove to herself and the world. She’s recently arrived to L.A. after performing in Chicago and Detroit and finds herself struggling with her sexual identity.

Dana Gould (“Stan Against Evil”) is set to recur as Bruce, Adam’s alpha-male agent who doesn’t understand comedy or artistic integrity and is solely motivated by money. After the events of last season, Adam is in a very precarious position, and his agent can make or break him. Saul Hudson (Beau Mirchoff, “Awkward”) joins Bruce as an ancillary power player. A friend of Ralph’s, he’s a wannabe playboy and the son of a comic who is now a television producer.

In 1972, the mythical Johnny Carson moved the storied “Tonight Show” from New York City to Burbank, Calif., and the coast-to-coast move forever changed the landscape of the entertainment industry. Throngs of hungry comedians hoping to get discovered by Carson flocked to Los Angeles, instantly making it the comedy capital of the world. At the same time, The Improv (and later, The Comedy Store and the Laugh Factory) dominated the scene and provided future legends time and space to flourish. This is the world of “I’m Dying Up Here.” The dramedy continues to explore this fascinating era over the course of its sophomore season, premiering Sunday, May 6, on Showtime.

Fifty Shades Freed

Now happily married, Ana (Johnson) and Christian (Dornan) return early from their exotic and romantic honeymoon after they receive word of a break-in at Christian's company headquarters. When the security camera footage reveals that the trespasser was Jack Hyde (Eric Johnson), Ana's former boss who holds a deep grudge against her, Christian assigns a security detail as a precautionary measure, ultimately leading to an argument between the couple over Christian's controlling behavior and Ana's lust for freedom. When Ana reveals that she's pregnant, their argument escalates and leads to Christian contacting an ex-lover, further damaging the young couple's relationship. When Jack finally contacts Ana to demand ransom for a woman he has kidnapped, the situation may be the final straw that breaks the once-happy couple apart once and for all.

Best of the best

The pros compete in 'Best Baker in America'

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

What's something sweet, delicious and oh so entertaining? Why, it's Monday nights on Food Network, of course! The first weeknight is all about baking on the culinary channel, and things get even sweeter with yet another baking show added to the mix starting Monday, May 7.

That night sees "Best Baker in America" return for a second season with a new host, new bakers and new recipes over which the contestants must prove their mastery.

Regular "Chopped" judge Scott Conant takes over hosting duties from last season's Adam Rapoport (editor of Bon Appétit magazine) this time around, lending his typically knowledgeable and witty observations to the tasks set before the bakers. He's joined by returning judges Jason Smith and Marcela Valladolid, both of whom certainly know their way around a kitchen full of sweets.

Unlike similar baking competitions, such as British import "The Great British Baking Show," "Best Baker in America" isn't out to find the best amateur baker. This show is looking for the best professional from among its contestants, and because of that, this series has no qualms about throwing some really tricky tasks at the group.

With nine contestants this time around, the judges have come up with some challenges that will really test their inventiveness and baking expertise. There are old school favorites, such as decadent Mont Blanc and sumptuous Charlotte royale, to be baked, along with tricky treats that really test the bakers' techniques and attention to detail, such as petits fours and layered French meringue cakes.

The May 7 premiere is all about cakes, something that should be so easy to a professional baker that nothing could possibly go wrong ... right? Even if everything does go according to plan, one baker will be sent home, putting the rest of the contestants just one step closer to the coveted Best Baker title.

It all sounds so mouthwatering, and the rotating guest judges are the lucky ones who get to join in on the tasting. Acclaimed bakers Zac Young, Shinmin Li, Sherry Yard and Florian Bellanger all take a turn at tasting, along with baking digital influencers Joshua John Russell, Yolanda Gampp and Gemma Stafford.

"Best Baker in America" joins Food Network's Monday night baking bloc on May 7.

Scott Conant, Marcela Valladolid and Jason Smith check in on Becca Craig in "Best Baker in America"

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: There was a series dealing with drugs that were made and sold by a kid who lived with his mother and who had a sister whose husband was pushing his drugs as well. It appeared in the summer or fall of 2017. Do you know what it was called and if it will be coming back?

A: You're thinking of "Snow-fall," and the kid is played by Damon Idris ("City of Tiny Lights," 2016). I have some good news for you, though not much. It's been renewed for a second season, but no one knows when it's coming.

FX's 1980s period drama, "set against the infancy of the crack cocaine epidemic and its ultimate radical impact on the culture as we know it," debuted in July 2017 and was renewed for a second season a month later, before it was even through its first.

It seems as if the network is counting on a slow build for its fanbase. The show was averaging fewer than a million viewers for its 10 episodes, which wouldn't generally be enough for a renewal, but it received loads of critical acclaim — AVClub.com TV critic Kyle Fowle, for example, praised its "confident vision and compelling atmosphere from the get-go." FX may be hoping that people will hear the good word and binge-watch the show in the off-season.

There's been no official announcement of a season 2 premiere date, but preliminary work is underway. The stars and writers of the show have been slowly leaking production photos on Twitter in recent weeks. This suggests that a summer premiere date, like that of season 1, isn't out of the question.

Q: Is Teller actually mute?

A: Fans (and maybe enemies, too — he is far from universally beloved) may be surprised to know that Teller is actually a master of language with a rich baritone voice. He just chooses not to use either.

They may also be surprised to know that he made that choice before he ever started working with his longtime stage partner Penn Jillette. Penn & Teller, as they are both better known, have been working together for decades, but each has been in showbiz even longer.

"I had always liked the idea of working silent," Teller (who dropped his other name, legally, not long after dropping his voice) said in a 2013 interview with Variety magazine. "I was just interested in the idea that since magic was deception and lying, it was just an interesting thing to lie without speaking, to lead the audience to see the impossible thing without telling them what to think."

He generally maintains his silence in all of his various pop-cultural appearances — on top of their long-running stage show at the Rio hotel in Las Vegas, Penn & Teller also have a TV show called "Fool Us," their latest of many TV forays — however, he has made exceptions. He's done TV interviews and radio commentaries, and had a small speaking role in the mostly unseen 2012 indie picture "Atlas Shrugged II: The Strike."

Mom

Christy (Anna Faris) and her mother Bonnie (Allison Janney) often clash, but they know they can rely on each other when the going gets tough in the season finale of “Mom,” airing Thursday, May 10, on CBS. Also starring Jaime Pressly and Mimi Kennedy, the comedy was recently picked up for a sixth season.

A&E
Live PD
Host Dan Abrams presents an unfiltered look at what happens inside some of the country's busiest police forces in a new three-hour episode of "Live PD," airing Friday, May 11, on A&E. The docu-series uses live footage from dash cams, fixed rigs and handheld cameras that follow officers on a typical Friday night shift.
