New perspectives

"The Affair" is back and better than ever with new characters, perspectives, problems and settings. Will the shifts in coasts from New York to Los Angeles finally bring happiness and forgiveness to Noah (Dominic West, "The Wire") and Helen (Maura Tierney, "ER"), or will it all be for naught? Witness new beginnings and tragic ends with a new episode of "The Affair," airing Sunday, Aug. 5, on Showtime.

Happily never after: Fresh problems abound in season 4 of 'The Affair'

By Francis Babin
TV Media

The memory is a tricky thing — not everyone perceives an event the same way. Be it a car accident or a simple encounter at the grocery store, one story can have any number of sides to it. Explore the lives of those affected by an extramarital relationship and examine it from multiple perspectives in a new episode of "The Affair," airing Sunday, Aug. 5, on Showtime.

"The Affair" premiered in 2014 to glowing reviews and numerous accolades. The Showtime original was praised for its unique concept and its captivating look at truth and desire. Since its first broadcast, the award-winning series has continuously demonstrated Newton's third law of motion: for every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction. An extramarital relationship does not simply impact the two illicit parties, or even their partners, but so many more people.

Over the course of three and a half seasons, many additional characters have been absorbed into the orbit of the show's four main players: Noah (Dominic West, "The Wire") and Helen Solloway (Maura Tierney, "ER"), and Alison (Ruth Wilson, "Luther") and Cole Lockhart (Joshua Jackson, "Fringe"). Like a black hole, the quartet pulls in anything — or in this case, anyone — that comes near it.

In the first season, we're introduced to Noah, a struggling writer and New York City public school teacher, his wife, Helen, and their four children. Seemingly perfect on the outside, the family is in fact far from it. Noah resents the family's dependence on his wealthy father-in-law, and the feeling of inadequacy and failure to provide is only exacerbated by the constant belittling that he suffers at the hands of his in-laws.

After finding success early on in his career by publishing a novel, Noah has now become frustrated with his life, and one can hardly blame him. With overbearing in-laws, an unsatisfying job and the failure to live up to expectations, it's no surprise that he'd want to shake things up and break free from the doldrums of everyday life.

During a family vacation in the resort town of Montauk, New York, the would-be novelist is in full midlife crisis mode. A chance meeting with local waitress Alison, who is desperately trying to piece her life and marriage back together, is the beginning of the titular affair and the disintegration of two marriages. Ultimately, this encounter kicks off a series of events that no one could have predicted.

The story of this steamy summer fling is told from Noah's and Alison's perspectives. Naturally, the two viewpoints differ wildly from one another.

In the second season, we're given a window into their spouses' perspectives on the dissolution of their marriages and the struggle to move forward. To add yet another angle, there's a three-year time jump between seasons 2 and 3, which offers a fresh narrative from Noah's new love interest, Juliette Le Gall (Irène Jacob, "Eternity," 2016).

After three seasons on the East Coast, it was time for a change. This season, Noah is struggling to adjust to his new life in Los Angeles. He moved to the City of Angels to be closer to his kids, but he now finds himself clashing with his ex-wife more than ever.

The current season explores the concept of moving along, according to series co-creator Sarah Treem. This go around, we find Noah, Helen, Alison and Cole drifting further and further apart from where they all began. Each of them is now involved with new people, but whether they can truly leave the past behind is the real challenge.

Treem talked at length about the new season earlier this year at the ATX Television Festival in Austin, Texas, and how the four will deal with new beginnings, tragic ends and the ever-elusive possibility of forgiveness.

Not unlike the Solloways, who are having a challenging time in La La Land, Alison is also having trouble with her attempt at a fresh start. Things aren't going according to plan, and matters only worsen when she is faced by a couple from her past who threaten to expose her origins.

Alison is not only having trouble in the present but also in the future. In a flashforward, Cole and Noah are desperately searching for their former lover who has gone missing, leaving much to wrap up in the final episodes of the season.

The end is near and our time with these characters is nearly over, not just for the current season but for the series as a whole — Treem has indicated that the fifth season would be the show's last. We're quickly approaching the last leg of Noah, Helen, Alison and Cole's journey, but there's no shortage of loose ends to take care of before we get there — not the least of which are the events leading up to Alison's disappearance and whether Noah will survive Los Angeles.

Tune in to a new episode of "The Affair," airing Sunday, Aug. 5, on Showtime to find out more about the lives of those affected by an extramarital relationship.

Book Club

Four middle-aged women who have been in a book club together for years have their lives turned upside down when they read "Fifty Shades of Grey." Each woman realizes that she's missing something in her life and finds the book lighting a spark that had been dormant for years. Diane (Keaton), who recently lost her husband, begins tentatively dating again; Vivian (Fonda) starts to get closer to a man that she nearly married 40 years earlier, but she still fears commitment; Carol (Steenburgen) tries to reignite the spark in her marriage; and Sharon (Bergen) opens an online dating account. Despite the trials and setbacks of starting relationships later in life, all four women push through in the pursuit of love. Director: Bill Holderman. Stars: Diane Keaton, Jane Fonda, Candice Bergen, Mary Steenburgen. 2018. 104 min. Comedy.

Life of the Party

When her husband leaves her for another woman on the same day that they send their daughter Maddie (Gordon) off to college, Deanna (McCarthy) decides to go back to school herself to finish the degree that she abandoned when she got pregnant years before. Despite being old enough to be the other students' mother, she quickly fits in and finds that though it isn't without its challenges for an older student, college is even better the second time around. Director: Ben Falcone. Stars: Melissa McCarthy, Matt Walsh, Molly Gordon, Maya Rudolph. 2018. 105 min. Comedy.

Summer sizzles

New cooking competition turns up the heat

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Summer: it's the season of long days, starry nights and fun-filled vacations. It's also a time of year that Food Network has embraced wholeheartedly, with a new show, special or series seeming to come along almost every week during this sweltering season.

This week, the channel launches a new, four-episode series that pits chefs against one another in culinary competition. "Ultimate Summer Cook-Off" premieres Sunday, Aug. 5, with a $25,000 grand prize on the line and former "Food Network Star" winner and "Kids BBQ Championship" co-host Eddie Jackson hosting. "Southern and Hungry" co-host Damaris Phillips and celebrity chef Jamika Pessoa serve as the competition's judges, along with a rotating group of guest judges that includes "Comfort Food Tour" hosts Mark Anderson and Ryan Fey.

The competitors all have some sort of summery connection, with one owning a restaurant that sits on a beach and another hailing from Hawaii, the land of eternal summer. There are no amateurs here, either — these are all seasoned pros who have built their careers on meals that help people beat the heat, and each and every one of them has eyes only for that prize money.

The chefs tackle their first challenge in this week's premiere, and it's all about burgers. Similar to "Chopped" fashion, in each episode's first challenge, the chefs crack open a container — in this case, a cooler — filled with mystery ingredients to use in the dish. Unlike in "Chopped," though, the coolers don't all contain the same items; every chef gets a different set of basic food-stuffs to use, and there's no way of knowing what the coolers contain until after they've been picked.

The winner of the first round gets an advantage for the second challenge: a special cooler packed full of luxury summer ingredients, to which the other chefs don't get access. With $25,000 up for grabs, that's the kind of leg up that can make or break a chef's summer-time dreams in "Ultimate Summer Cook-Off." The four-episode series premieres Sunday, Aug. 5, on Food Network.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I watch "Home & Family" on the Hallmark Channel fairly regularly. I missed a couple of days recently and don't see Mark anymore. What happened?

A: You missed an important couple of days.

At the end of the episode on June 2, co-host Debbie Matenpoulos emotionally delivered a shocking bit of news. "Our dear friend, our very good friend, and my wonderful co-host for years, Mr. Mark Steines, is no longer with 'Home & Family.'"

She offered no explanation, just a lot of good wishes for his future.

The facts came out soon after, though not before fans offered all sorts of wild speculation that ultimately proved untrue. The somewhat boring truth was that the producers wanted to take the show in a different direction; essentially, they wanted a fresh face to smile out from the co-hosting chair.

His agent, in an interview with TheWrap.com, insists that Steines was told he was not being fired for any specific cause, other than "creative reasons."

"We had nothing but positive reviews and feedback from Hallmark," the rep said.

It was as much of a shock to Steines as it was to fans. His co-host had to be the one to announce his departure, because Steines was only told after filming his last episode — once it wrapped, he was told, essentially, not to come back.

Q: What's Guy Ritchie been doing since that "King Arthur" movie? Is he ever going to make another gangster movie? I wish he would.

A: In that case, granting wishes is what Guy Ritchie has been up to.

As you point out, in recent years he's strayed toward big-budget Hollywood territory, with varying degrees of success, after making his name in low-budget and distinctly British fare.

Despite the fact that his last big film, 2017's "King Arthur: Legend of the Sword," was by most measures a flop, he's been given another huge budget to produce the live-action remake of the classic Disney cartoon "Aladdin" (1992). (Which is about a genie granting the wishes of a street kid, hence the wish joke.)

That film's currently in post-production and slated for release in May 2019. In the meantime, he has, in fact, been plotting his return to British gangster cinema.

He recently signed a deal with American indie house

Miramax to produce his script "Toff Guys," reportedly about a British drug lord trying to sell his empire to a group of billionaires from Oklahoma. Ritchie will direct the picture, returning, as you wish, to the genre that made him famous.

Ritchie exploded onto the film scene with 1998's "Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels," and followed it up with 2000's "Snatch," both classics of the British crime cinema.

Syfy
Wynonna Earp
While Wynonna (Melanie Scrofano) visits her mother, the forest reveals a clue to Nicole’s (Katherine Barrell) past in a new episode of “Wynonna Earp,” airing Friday, Aug. 10, on Syfy. Based on the comic of the same name, this show chronicles the adventures of Wyatt Earp’s great-great-granddaughter.

Late laughs

Conan
It's come out that President Trump's new communications director has changed the White House lighting so Trump looks younger. Even more impressive, the new lighting makes Melania look happy.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon (repeat)
Trump reversed course today and signed an order to stop separating immigrant kids from their families and start detaining them together. You know 2018 is rough when people are going, "All right, families getting locked up in cages together! Yeah!"

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert
As the New York Times put it: "Mr. Trump kicked off his meetings on a contentious note." Contentious is his ONLY note! He's a human air horn.

Croatia beat England in the semifinals of the World Cup. Croatia won. Which is nice. It's really nice. It's the first time in a while I've heard people say, "Way to go, Croatia." Something you don't hear all the time. "Good going, Croat."
