Arthur (Judd Hirsch, "Taxi") and Franco (Jermaine Fowler, "Friends of the People") prepare to take on gentrification, corporations and trendy food trucks in the humorously delicious sophomore season of "Superior Donuts," which premieres Monday, Oct. 30, on CBS. The series combines quick wit with social commentary in a fresh new way, and provides a glimpse into a bright, enlightened future for sitcoms. There's no sweeter way to ease into the new work week than with laughter.

Tasty yet topical: Deliciously real laughs in season 2 of 'Superior Donuts'

By Kat Mulligan
TV Media

Long before the trends of grandes, macchiatos and pumpkin spice lattes, neighborhoods were graced with unique little treasures: independent doughnut shops. Variety wasn't necessarily found in a coffee cup — typically your two choices were caff or decaf — but it did abound in the delicious rotating selections of doughnuts, be they glazed, iced, filled or something in between. The magic of these locally owned establishments is wonderfully captured in "Superior Donuts," a comedy series based on a play by the same name, returning Monday, Oct. 30, on CBS.

Nestled in the busy streets of Chicago, 75-year-old Arthur Przybyszewski (Judd Hirsch, "Taxi") struggles to keep his beloved doughnut shop afloat. The shop, open since 1969, means everything to Arthur, but his initial resistance to change and evolving to compete with larger franchises puts the business in jeopardy. Thankfully, Franco Wicks (Jermaine Fowler, "Friends of the People") notices that Arthur's looking for a new employee, and brings to the business a youthful energy that sees the shop's popularity start to return. While Franco can, at times, seem a bit too optimistic and carefree, his passion to see Superior Donuts succeed reignites Arthur's own entrepreneurial fire. Their growing relationship is at once humorous and endearing, blossoming alongside the shop as it continues to draw new faces in, while never losing sight of its regulars.

The quick wit and bold approach to discussing modern issues make it unsurprising that the series is back for a second season. "Superior Donuts" never shies away from confronting topics such as gentrification, the corporation creep into small neighborhoods and the death of the small business owner. Rather than succumbing to what seems an inevitability, Arthur and Franco work together to inspire social change, all while figuring out how to incorporate modern tastes into classic, mom-and-pop-style dining. Additionally, much emphasis is placed on the welcoming environment created by small businesses, where acceptance of all is readily encouraged, rather than impressing conformity or exclusivity upon guests.

While season 1 placed much of its focus on the corporate infiltration of traditional neighborhoods and main streets, season 2 looks to pit small business against small business, providing Arthur with a brand-new challenge. The new season introduces viewers to Sofia (Diane Guerrero, "Orange Is the New Black"), a young food truck owner who takes up shop directly outside of Arthur's Superior Donuts. Her plan: to provide customers with healthier breakfast alternatives, keeping in mind social and ethical principles. The discussions surrounding millennials aren't new for "Superior Donuts," but the addition of Sofia provides yet another outlet for Arthur's reluctance to change, as her healthy alternatives food truck threatens to take away some of the fresh clientele Franco and Arthur worked so hard to acquire.

The show's success is largely due to the dynamic between Arthur and Franco, whose relationship parallels the experience actors Hirsch and Fowler bring to their respective roles. Hirsch is no stranger to television viewers, particularly those who were around in the late '70s to mid-'80s to enjoy "Taxi." Since then, Hirsch continues to be a beacon of comedy, though "Superior Donuts" marks his long-awaited return to the world of sitcoms. For Hirsch, the series is an excellent example of how comedy operates in the everyday, as "humor is based on the worst of things and the best of things," as he told CBS Chicago.

In contrast to Hirsch's lengthy and legendary career, Fowler is a relatively fresh face in the comedic world. With less than a decade of professional experience, the actor remains bold and relevant in his humor. As Fowler told the hosts of Good Day Sacramento, the series "[talks] about a lot of the topical things going on in the world right now," which allows for an elevated kind of humor, challenging social norms while simultaneously knocking down worn-out stereotypes. This pairing of experience and youthful passion provides the series with the ideal means to inspire change and to challenge perspectives, all with a side order of laughs. Viewers may think twice before reaching for that blended frappuccino, inspired to take a chance on the sweet, little independent shop instead.

In preparation for the premiere of season 2, four of "Superior Donuts's" most hilarious standup comedians hit the road for a five-city, seven-day comedy tour. Fowler, David Koechner ("Anchorman 2: The Legend Continues," 2013), Maz Jobrani ("The Interpreter," 2005) and Rell Battle ("Key and Peele") are stopping in New York City, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Chicago and Los Angeles to bring the laughs and hype for the new season of the series. Fittingly, the Chicago stop of the tour takes place the same evening of the premiere: Oct. 30. The comedic power within the core cast brings a heightened level of wit to the show, which no doubt echoes throughout the tour's performances.

The dough will rise, cinnamon-sprinkled, deliciously glazed and just in time for a fresh batch of episodes in a new season of "Superior Donuts." Check out your own local mom-and-pop doughnut shop and settle in with a baker's dozen to catch the season 2 premiere of the comedy when it airs Monday, Oct. 30, on CBS.

Fun food

Host Noah Cappe returns for another season of 'Carnival Eats'

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Who doesn't love a day at the carnival? Whether it's a harvest festival or a summer fair, the exhibits, the rides and the shows are an annual joy in communities all across the continent, a place where the whole family can find something fun to do no matter what individual tastes may be.

Of course, there's another attraction to offer at fairgrounds, and for me it's one of the bigger draws: the food. Actor Noah Cappe ("Good Witch") seems to agree; he's already set out for another cross-continental tour of fairs and festivals far and wide in the latest season of "Carnival Eats," which airs Thursdays on Cooking Channel.

In this week's episode, airing Thursday, Nov. 2, Cappe is at the San Diego County Fair, where he starts his visit with the most important meal of the day. He chows down on some French toast bacon bombs, which may not be the most nutritious of breakfasts, but the explosion of flavor more than makes up for that. Then, it's time for some flavor fusions, first with a show-stopping Maui cowboy burger that he soon follows up with a hearty serving of deep fried nachos supreme.

After his California feasting, the host jaunts off to the Midwest, where the La Porte County Fair has some carnival takes on favorite foods, from deep fried lobster mac and cheese to a tasty twist on the reuben sandwich.

Never one to pass on dessert, Cappe also finds the time to try out some giant-sized cream puffs.

Over the next few weeks, Cappe treats his taste buds to churro s'mores in Michigan, captures a pineapple unicorn bomb in California, and enjoys a special pizza with his name on it in Iowa. Of course, he also takes the time to check out the attractions at the festivals, drinking in the local culture and even taking a spin or two on some of the rides.

Carnivals of all sorts are home to some of the wildest and most creative foods around — after all, they're places for fun, and the food should be fun, too. Hitch a ride with Noah Cappe in "Carnival Eats," airing Thursdays on Cooking Channel.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: As a longtime watcher of "The Andy Griffith Show," I'm wondering why they don't show the episode where Andy gets married. I caught the tail end several years ago but haven't seen it since.

A: That's a great question, but if you had caught the episode from the beginning, you'd already know the answer: It was from a different show.

The episode, aptly titled "Andy and Helen Get Married," was actually the first episode of "Mayberry R.F.D.," a spinoff of "The Andy Griffith Show."

The confusion is easy. "Mayberry R.F.D." retained a number of characters from "The Andy Griffith Show" as regulars in the new series, such as Aunt Bee (Frances Bavier), Gooper (George Lindsey) and Howard Sprague (Jack Dodson). However, its pilot episode also featured original-show characters Barney Fife (Don Knotts) and, of course, Andy (Andy Griffith) and Helen (Aneta Corsaut) — essentially, it looked more like an "Andy Griffith Show" episode than a "Mayberry R.F.D." one (Ken Berry's Sam Jones, who was in fact the lead character of the new show, played a relatively minor role in the pilot).

And sadly, "Mayberry R.F.D." didn't have anything like the success of "The Andy Griffith Show." It aired for just three seasons from 1968 to 1971, falling victim to CBS's now-infamous "rural purge," when the network canceled a number of country-themed shows (among the other victims were "The Beverly Hillbillies," "Lassie" and "Green Acres").

Q: I'm trying to find the movie in which a mentally challenged woman and man fall in love, but both their families oppose the relationship. I think it had Diane Keaton.

A: You're looking for "The Other Sister" (1999), in which the great Diane Keaton plays the mother of the girl in love (played by Juliette Lewis).

The title of the film refers to the fact that Lewis's character, Carla, generally feels like the less-favored child in her family. In the film, Carla's whole story arc, in which she seeks independence and eventually finds love, plays out while her family (especially her somewhat distant mother) is wrapped up in planning her older sister's wedding.

This all sounds a little heavy, but it was actually a romantic comedy, helped along by the legendarily light touch of romcom director Garry Marshall, who also wrote the script. Marshall is probably best known for a little movie he did in 1990 called "Pretty Woman" (or maybe for 1988's "Beaches," or for the TV show "Happy Days" — the list goes on).

It was further helped by a pretty stellar cast, which also includes Tom Skerritt, Giovanni Ribisi and Poppy Montgomery.

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9.

everything sounds like hate speech when it's spoken in German.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon
I saw that Epcot just celebrated its 35th anniversary. It was also the 35th anniversary of the first dad sneaking off to get drunk in Germany.

It turns out Mike Pence gave Rex Tillerson a "pep talk" to get him to stay on as secretary of state. Because nothing screams "pep" like a talk from Mike Pence.

After it came out that Tillerson called Trump a

"moron," Tillerson held a press conference and called the president "smart." Then he said, "Do you think the moron bought it?"

Late Night With Seth Meyers
Former first lady Michelle Obama yesterday criticized the lack of diversity in Congress. Said Congress, "Not true! We have white men from 50 different states!"

According to ProPublica, Ivanka and Donald Trump Jr. were on the verge of being indicted for felony fraud in 2012. "But I'm too pretty to go to jail!" said the one who isn't.

Late laughs

Conan
To raise money for Puerto Rico, celebrities have been posting pictures online of themselves from puberty. However, after one look at mine, Puerto Rico said, "Haven't we been through enough?"

There's a rumor that the Lakers are trying to sign

LeBron James. They're telling him, "The weather in L.A. is great. Plus, as a Laker, you get the entire playoff season off."

Scientists have figured out how to generate electricity from tears. In fact, they say that soon, 10 per cent of our renewable energy will come from people watching "This Is Us."

Germany has just rolled out a new law banning hate speech. The law is tricky to implement because
