Ruth Negga, Joseph Gilgun and Dominic Cooper star in "Preacher"

Conflicted cleric Jesse Custer (Dominic Cooper, "Mama Mia!" 2008) and his blasphemous posse of expat vampires, career criminals, voodoo enthusiasts and accidentally-sent-to-hell teenagers continue their brazen hunt for an absentee God who has abdicated the throne of heaven. With several nefarious factions struggling to manipulate, exploit or simply murder him, Jesse must protect his allies without compromising his obsessive search for answers in the season 3 conclusion of "Preacher," airing Sunday, Aug. 26, on AMC.

Where angels fear to tread: 'Preacher's' cast of unforgettable characters wraps up third season

By Kenneth Andeel
TV Media

Jesse Custer is not a prototypical man of God. He drinks. He smokes. Of course he swears. He breaks limbs in bar brawls and he'll shoot important bits of anatomy off of anyone who'd dare try to take his dead dad's church by force. He pals around with a drug-gorging vampire and he's in love with his childhood friend, a hardened criminal. But, craziest of all, Jesse dares to confront God mano a prime mover, and insists he be given answers to all those mysteries of creation that it's generally assumed we puny humans aren't meant to know.

You might imagine that an almighty God who didn't want to be bothered by an audacious mortal could just hit the "smite" button and have done, but Jesse is special. For unknown reasons, he's been chosen as the host for a celestial being of unprecedented might that rivals God's own — and there you have the wicked conceit of "Preacher," set to conclude its third season on AMC. Watch on Sunday, Aug. 26, as Preacher Jesse (Dominic Cooper, "Mama Mia!" 2008), on-again, off-again assassin/lover Tulip (Ruth Negga, "Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D.") and Irish bloodsucker Cassidy (Joseph Gilgun, "Misfits") try to find God and hold Him to account without any of them dying (or worse).

"Preacher" arrived at AMC after spending nearly two decades in development hell. The story was originally told in comic book format by writer Garth Ennis and artist Steve Dillon. Their 66-issue run spanned from 1995 to 2000 and was part of an era of explicit comics targeted at mature readers. Ennis, realizing the story's screen potential, started shopping it as a script in 1998, before he'd even concluded the narrative in its original medium.

Obstacles abounded, and the screen adaptation passed through multiple hands until it finally made it into the clutches of an unlikely pair, who just happened to have obsessively coveted it for years. Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg, collaborators on "This Is the End" (2013) and other projects, grew up together and bonded over a love of Ennis' comic. The duo had been diligently dropping their names into the hat every time another round of interest in a "Preacher" adaptation sparked up, and at last, in 2013, the stars aligned: the two were commissioned to write a pilot for their dream project, eventually enlisting Sam Catlin ("Breaking Bad") as showrunner after AMC took the bait.

Casting announcements followed, with hawk-eyed fans of the source material scrutinizing every decision. Three seasons in, it's become evident that the producers nailed it, and Negga, Gilgun and Cooper have capably represented the fringe comic's beloved trio.

Cooper carries the show — it is called "Preacher," after all, and not "Vampire" or "Trigger-Happy Bandit" — but Negga and Gilgun give him consistent support. Season 1 began with Jesse dragging his heels as the uninspired (and uninspiring) preacher of his tiny Texas hometown of Anneville. On the verge of renouncing his duties after a crisis of faith, Jesse was forcibly inhabited by "Genesis," the offspring of a forbidden tryst between an angel and a devil. Genesis gave Jesse a pseudo-superpower known as the "Word of God" that allowed him to compel people to do anything he commanded. Jesse's ex, the viciously capable criminal Tulip O'Hare, returned to Anneville, and a centenarian Irish vampire named Cassidy fell out of the sky and began squatting at Jesse's church.

Forces arrayed to contest Jesse's newfound power, including a pair of awkward angels who eventually hired a condemned Old West gunman-turned-Angel of Death to shoot Genesis out of Jesse, if necessary. The first season ended with Jesse calling up heaven via angel-phone and demanding to speak to God, then discovering that God had abandoned heaven for reasons unknown and was currently hanging out somewhere on Earth.

In season 2, Jesse, Cassidy and Tulip struck out on the great American roadtrip to find God. Their pursuit took them to New Orleans, where they were tangled with groups that included basic violent criminals, vampire covens, a Christian paramilitary called The Grail, and the voodoo-wielding Louisiana branch of Jesse's family.

Jesse's creepy extended family continues to play the villain in season 3. After Tulip's demise, Jesse was forced to look for a means of resurrection. As it turns out, voodoo is a very useful skill for bringing back the dead. The only trouble is that you might end up owing your evil Gran'ma L'Angelle (Betty Buckley, "Oz") an unspecified favor in exchange.

Meanwhile, The Grail's fixer, Herr Starr (Pip Torrens, "Star Wars: The Force Awakens," 2015), is demanding Jesse take over Messiah duties for The Grail, replacing their current inbred figurehead, and the aforementioned Angel of Death, called the Saint of Killers (Graham McTavish, "Outlander"), is still out there with the power to kill absolutely anyone, human or otherwise. Oh, and Jesse has also given up a small slice of his own soul, and the Word of God no longer reliably works for him.

All of these conflicts (and plenty more) are set to combust in the third season finale of "Preacher," and it would be a sin for any fan of smart, subversive, horror-inspired supernatural adventure to miss out. Catch the culmination of season 3 when it airs Sunday, Aug. 26, on AMC.

Cupcakes look like anything but in new Food Network series

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

If you're someone who watches any of the myriad of cake-centric shows on television right now, it'll come as no surprise to hear that cakes that look uncannily like anything but desserts are so hot right now. Cakes that have been sculpted and iced to look like famous people, sports trophies, animals and cartoon characters are everywhere you look, taking "edible art" to a whole new level.

It isn't just cakes receiving this special treatment — their little cousins are getting in on the action, too, and in "Reality Cupcakes," one of the most talented cupcake artists in the country whips up little beauties that look like anything but tasty sweet confections. Beware: that may look like a juicy steak or a sushi roll on the plate, but if New York baker Ashley Foxen is in the kitchen, then diners are in for a surprise with their first bite.

In the first of this week's back-to-back episodes, airing Monday, Aug. 27, on Food Network, Foxen invites the TV cameras into her business as she bakes and decorates incredible steampunk cupcakes for Coney Island's famous Mermaid Parade. Later, she decorates cupcakes to look just like miniature po'boy sandwiches that are served up at an outdoor food festival in Brooklyn.

The night's second episode finds Foxen making cupcakes for a 1950s greaser-themed party, and for an event like that there's really only one thing that the cupcakes can look like: milkshakes! Later, pretzel-shaped cakes are on the menu for a group of sports fans, and she even makes a dessert that's a rather morbid spitting image of one of the Founding Fathers.

Of course, Foxen doesn't run her business alone. In fact, it's a family affair, with her mom Denise, sister Lindsay and brother Alex all helping her create cupcakes that are capable of fooling even the closest of inspections.

Her business may be a small family-run affair, but Ashley Foxen is whipping up some of the most incredible cupcakes that New York has ever seen. Follow her and her creations in "Reality Cupcakes" on Monday evenings on Food Network.

Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I loved the “Broadway’s Best” series that ran on PBS in the fall of 2017 and included broadcasts of “She Loves Me,” “Holiday Inn,” and “Present Laughter.” Are there plans for more broadcasts in 2018, or even for making it a returning series like “Great Performances at the Met”?

A: If there are plans to continue the “Broadway’s Best” series-within-a-series, no one’s talking about them.

As it stands, the whole series consisted of just six specials, broadcasts of six hit Broadway musicals: “She Loves Me,” Noel Coward’s “Present Laughter,” “In the Heights,” “Indecent,” Irving Berlin’s “Holiday Inn” and “Falsettos.” The first five on that list aired as part of PBS’s ongoing “Great Performances” series, while the sixth aired as part of “Live From Lincoln Center.”

Unfortunately, because of their unconventional format as series within series, and because that format is airing on the already-unconventional PBS, it’s hard to get info about it, or a sense of when it might come back.

With a conventional series — one that airs in seasons and follows a normal production schedule — you can guess at a return date even if one hasn’t been announced. If a series aired in the fall of 2017, it’ll likely air again in the fall of 2018, unless it’s been canceled (and then you’d get hints of that, such as announcements that the stars have taken new roles in other shows).

None of those things apply to the “Broadway’s Best” series. It seems to have aired as a sort of experiment on “Great Performances” and “Live From Lincoln Center.” And those shows air on PBS, which doesn’t really follow seasons like the other broadcast networks, and which doesn’t ask its various local channels around the country to air the same schedule (for example, while “Broadway’s Best” began in the fall of 2017 for you, it didn’t do so for all of the PBS stations across the country).

Q: Is it true “The Originals” is being canceled?

A: Not quite — it’s more like an agreement. But the “Vampire Diaries” saga will continue.

“The Originals” was the hit spinoff of CW’s even bigger hit teen drama “The Vampire Diaries.” “The Originals” got a full five seasons in its own right, with the series finale airing just a couple of weeks ago.

Producer Julie Plec said that the network and the show’s production team agreed to end it with the fifth season, adding that that kind of a deal is something most TV writers would envy.

“Many shows are not lucky enough to have a hand in deciding when the end has come,” she said in an official statement. “Ending a show is always bittersweet, but, for me, it’s a true blessing to be a part of making that choice.”

Having made that choice, the writers were able to give the show a satisfying finale that ties up many of the show’s ongoing (like, over centuries — vampires are immortal, after all) plotlines.
