Into the fire: A crime reporter is drawn home in 'Sharp Objects'

By Francis Babin
TV Media

In recent years, we've seen a real renaissance of the television miniseries. These limited series dominated the '70s and '80s, with such heavy hitters as "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Roots," "Shogun" and "North and South" winning numerous awards and drawing viewers by the millions.

The format fell out of favor in the '90s, however. It was nearly revived in the new millennium with "Band of Brothers," "Angels in America" and others, but its real comeback arguably wasn't until 2012, with History's mega hit "Hatfields & McCoys" ruling the airwaves. Since then, we've seen many quality limited series, and on Sunday, July 8, HBO's "Sharp Objects" looks to join this prestigious group.

Since breaking onto the scene with her debut novel "Sharp Objects" in 2006, bestselling author Gillian Flynn has been a force to be reckoned with. Her sophomore novel, "Gone Girl," was adapted for the big screen in 2014 by Academy Award-nominated director David Fincher to great acclaim from critics and audiences alike. The adaptation was a smash success and turned Flynn into a household name.

The following year, her third and most recent novel, "Dark Places," was successfully adapted into a feature film starring Academy Award winner Charlize Theron ("Atomic Blonde," 2017). It was just a matter of time before Flynn's only unadapted novel was given the big screen — or in this case, small screen — treatment.

The eight-episode series follows St. Louis-based journalist Camille Preaker (Amy Adams, "Arrival," 2016), who returns to her hometown of Wind Gap, Mo., to investigate the grisly murder of two young girls. This is her first assignment after a stint in a psychiatric hospital as a result of years of self-harming, and the homecoming isn't all roses. Although some elements of this story sound a tad familiar, like all of Flynn's works there's much more to it.

While authorities are still trying to solve the heinous crime, a new body is discovered, and Preaker finds herself identifying with the victims a bit too closely. Her return home has forced her to confront some personal demons under the watchful and critical eye of her mother, Adora, expertly portrayed by Patricia Clarkson ("House of Cards").

Three preteen victims and a potential serial killer on the loose is a salacious story that should be easy to write, right? Not in Wind Gap. Even with her insights into the town and her understanding of the local culture, Preaker finds it hard to get any information from anyone. Her family name is supposed to open doors, but at every turn she finds herself getting stonewalled by the natives — the worst offender being her mother (who's hosting her in her lavish mansion) standing in the way of the truth.

Preaker's nights alternate between (unsuccessfully) investigating leads and drinking away her troubles with the lead investigator, Det. Richard Willis (Chris Messina, "The Mindy Project"), but more often than not, alone. The boozy nights help with her ever-growing sense of paranoia but trigger painful recollections of her sister Marian's (Lulu Wilson, "Annabelle: Creation," 2017) mysterious death.

Through a series of flashbacks, we grow to understand why Preaker is the way she is, and why she still holds such hostile feelings for her hometown, her socialite mother and her half-sister, Amma (Eliza Scanlen, "Home and Away"). Wind Gap is extremely tight-lipped for a reason, and throughout the series, viewers are pulled further into the small-town secrets, mysteries and anguish.

Last year, HBO struck gold with its wildly popular adaptation of "Big Little Lies." The series garnered rave reviews and tons of buzz. This summer, the network will try to replicate its success by following the same formula: a trendy, well-known novel, big name talent and a celebrated auteur/director in Jean-Marc Vallée ("Dallas Buyers Club," 2013). After his excellent work on "Lies," it's easy to see why he was once again tasked with bringing a heavy and dark novel to the small screen.

We are living in a glorious era of small-screen book adaptations. In the past, Hollywood bigwigs believed that the go-to medium was the big screen, yet the tide has turned in recent years; some stories are just better suited for television (last year's "The Dark Tower" didn't get the memo). Originally envisioned as a feature film, "Sharp Objects" was retooled into a multi-hour series in order to better understand Preaker's character. Adams discussed this at the ATX Television Festival in Austin, Texas, explaining that "Camille needed to be explored over eight episodes. To try to do that in 90 minutes to 120 tops would have been really tricky. The internal monologue of Camille is almost impossible to capture in a 90-minute story."

Not everything is what it seems. Small towns harbor big secrets, and family feuds burn bright while townsfolk look the other way. This is the world in which Camille Preaker was raised, and the world she thought she had escaped. In the years she's been gone, things have only gotten worse. Embrace the darkness, follow the clues and get lost in the twists and turns with the television event of the summer, "Sharp Objects," premiering Sunday, July 8, on HBO.

A Quiet Place

Blind monsters that hunt by sound have killed off most of Earth's people, but on a remote farm, a family lives a silent life, communicating only with sign language to avoid attracting the hungry beasts. Mother Evelyn (Blunt) is pregnant with the couple's fourth child, and husband Lee (Krasinski) desperately tries to keep his family alive, making sure they keep silent during all of their day-to-day activities. With a baby on the way, however, the pain of childbirth and an infant's cries are guaranteed to attract the deadly and hungry creatures. Director: John Krasinski. Stars: Emily Blunt, John Krasinski, Millicent Simmonds, Noah Jupe, Cade Woodward. 2018. 90 min. Drama.

Chappaquiddick

After an evening of partying and drinking on Chappaquiddick Island, U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy (Clarke) drives his car off a bridge and into the water below. He escapes, but his passenger, political aide Mary Jo Kopechne (Mara), does not, setting in motion a huge political scandal that's made even worse when Kennedy doesn't immediately report the accident and drowning to the police. As the scandal intensifies, his actions increasingly draw the ire of his father, Joseph Sr. (Dern), and cousin Joe Gargan (Helms). Based on true events. Director: John Curran. Stars: Jason Clarke, Ed Helms, Jim Gaffigan, Kate Mara, Bruce Dern, John Fiore. 2017. 106 min. Drama.

Carnival throwdown

Culinary creativity is on full display in new Cooking Channel series

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Let's be honest: summer carnivals have a ton of attractions and reasons to spend a day enjoying them. There are thrilling rides, catchy live music, prize-laden games and fun-filled shows at any carnival worth its salt, and they're all very well and good. For some of us, though, they're just the icing on the proverbial cake: the real attraction at a summer carnival is the over-the-top food.

"Carnival Kings" is a new series that premieres Thursday, July 12, on Cooking Channel, and it's all about the wild and outrageous eats that can only be found at a carnival. Similar to "Carnival Eats," another Cooking Channel favorite, each episode of the new series follows Michelin-starred chef Richie Farina ("Top Chef") as he visits some of the biggest fairs he can find, where he immediately zeros in on the most outrageous food item that he can find. He isn't there just to taste the decadent dish, though — he's there to improve on it.

It's a format that evokes memories of the defunct Food Network series "Throwdown! with Bobby Flay": the super-creative chef Farina challenges carnival chefs on their own turf and tries to make an over-the-top dish somehow even more mouthwatering and extreme.

In the premiere, the host is at the Pima County Fair in Tucson, Arizona, where he encounters a bacon-wrapped duck slider with flaming hot cheese puffs and caramel apple slaw that's served with a side of bacon fat tater tots. It's decadent, it's wildly delicious and oh-so wild, and the host has just 24 hours to break it down, figure out what makes it tick, and then create his own take on it that not only tastes just as good, but that also somehow exceeds its creativity.

Many carnival chefs love to compete, and plenty of fairs even have competitions between them to see who can come up with the most creative dish. Chef Richie Farina is definitely going up against the best in his quest to create the most over-the-top foods imaginable. "Carnival Kings" premieres Thursday, July 12, on Cooking Channel.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: Is there going to be a “Golden Girls” reunion/reboot? It seems pretty ripe — at least as ripe as “Roseanne.”

A: You certainly have a point. “The Golden Girls” remains a well-loved sitcom that’s remained in the public consciousness thanks to the younger generation’s embrace of Betty White, and thus seems like a perfect candidate for a return, a la “Roseanne,” which was (in)famously rebooted last year.

However, “The Golden Girls” has a pretty sad reality to get past: White is the only one of the “Girls” who’s still alive.

Bea Arthur (who played Dorothy in the 1985-1992 series) died in 2009, a year after Estelle Getty (Sophia) and a year before Rue McClanahan (Blanche).

White, who was in fact the oldest of the four stars, is the last one standing.

Of course, this doesn’t preclude a reboot with new stars. Here’s my pitch: a reboot of the show with younger actors and White playing the cantankerous Sophia character.

White’s still working, so that part wouldn’t necessarily be a problem. She most recently appeared in an episode of the odd-ball comedy talk show “Fireside Chat With Esther” in January, but was working full time up to 2015 on her last series, “Hot in Cleveland.”

Q: Is Rocky Carroll coming back for the next season of “NCIS”? The last season finale has me worried.

A: You’re not alone. Rocky Carroll sounds a little worried, too.

Without giving too much away, Carroll’s character, NCIS Director Leon Vance, ends the season as the captive of a seemingly pretty bad character, and his life is clearly in danger.

The show has been renewed for a 16th season, but no plot details have been released yet. Even the actor himself seems to know no more about his future on the show than we do.

Fans sent messages of support and concern to Carroll’s Twitter account after the finale, and in response he only said, “Thanks for the kind words. Keep your fingers crossed for Vance!”

Of course, we all have good reason to worry. Fans are painfully aware that the show is willing to write off major characters — Abby (played in all 15 seasons by Pauley Perrette) left the show last season, and people are still sore at the exit of Ziva (Cote de Pablo) in season 11. If the show is able to survive after the exit of major characters like that, you begin to realize that anyone’s expendable.

Indeed, Gibbs (Mark Harmon) and Ducky (David McCallum) are

We at least know that they’ll be returning. When CBS announced the season 16 renewal, it mentioned Harmon by name, saying, “We’re thrilled he is returning as the centerpiece of the show.”

And McCallum announced on his personal Facebook page that he had signed a contract for the new season, though “once again it will be a limited schedule,” to allow him time to spend with his family.

The Last Defense

Filmmakers explore the flaws in the American justice system as they trace the paths of Death Row inmates who maintain their innocence in the new docu-series “The Last Defense,” airing Tuesday, July 10, on ABC. This episode looks at the case of Julius Jones, who was convicted of carjacking and murder.
