From talk to games: Michael Strahan touches down as host of 'The $100,000 Pyramid'

By Kyla Brewer

Prime time has gone retro once again. A few years ago, "Mad Men's" whisky-swilling ad men were all the rage, but these days networks are cashing in on the popularity of classic game show reboots. The latest ratings winner combines a charismatic host with celebrity guests and big money.

Michael Strahan ("Good Morning America") hosts as celebrities team up with contestants to play word-association games in the hopes of winning cash in a new episode of "The $100,000 Pyramid," airing Sunday, Aug. 27, on ABC. This week's celebrity guests include NA-SCAR champ Kyle Busch, Strahan's "Good Morning America" colleague Lara Spencer, rapperturned-actor Ice-T ("Law & Order: Special Victims Unit") and actress Peri Gilpin ("Frasier"). Previous guests include Debi Mazar "Younger"), Bobby Moynihan "Saturday Night Live"), Martha Stewart and Snoop Dogg.

Strahan, a former NFL defensive end, guides the action as players compete for a potentially life-altering prize. But it may not be just the thrill of the prize money that has TV fans hooked on the old school program. In a June interview with nypost.com, Strahan explained why he believes classic game shows like his are experiencing a resurgence in popularity.

"They're something you can do with your family," he said. "As a parent you may not want to watch a kids show, and as a kid you probably don't want to watch a big, serious adult show. Here is something you can watch together."

This is the second season of the revamped game show, which debuted on CBS in 1973 as "The $10,000 Pyramid" before jumping to ABC in 1974, with television icon Dick Clark at the helm. The show struck a chord with viewers right out of the gate as the simple word-association game and entertaining celebrity guests provided a lighthearted break from news of the Vietnam War and Watergate scandal.

The game show has gone through a number of iterations over the years, and each time the title has adjusted to reflect the top potential prize, from $10,000 to $20,000 to $25,000 to $50,000 to

Chrissy Metz in "The $100,000 Pyramid"

ABC's current $100,000 version. However, the game play has remained largely the same throughout the show's varied history. Two teams comprised of one celebrity and one contestant take turns giving each other clues to items in a chosen category, with a point awarded for each right answer. After three rounds of play, the team with the most points advances to the Winner's Circle to play for the big prize. The new ABC series features an hour-long format, which allows enough time for two complete games.

While "Pyramid" has inspired a number of revivals and more than a dozen international versions, the latest ABC series has proven to be one of the most popular, thanks, in part, to an impressive roster of stars who've lined up to play the game that many of them — including Strahan — watched as children. This season kicked off Sunday, June 11, with matchups between Leslie Jones ("Ghostbusters," 2016) and LL Cool J ("Lip Sync Battle"), and TV host Tom Bergeron ("Dancing With the Stars") and country music star Jennifer Nettles.

Other season 2 guests include "This Is Us" stars Justin Hartley and Chrissy Metz, comedian Margaret Cho ("Drop Dead Diva"), Carolina Panthers quarterback Cam Newton, Dr. Mehmet Oz ("The Dr. Oz Show"), RuPaul ("RuPaul's Drag Race"), Olympian Apolo Ohno and R&B singer Usher, among many others.

"The $100,000 Pyramid" isn't the only classic game show reboot to bank on the appearance of celebrities. New old game shows have been popping up on a lot of the major networks lately, and many of them employ stars from the worlds of comedy, sports, music and more. In fact, ABC has become a hub for nostalgic series like "Pyramid." Before Strahan kicks off the fun, Steve Harvey hosts "Celebrity Family Feud" earlier on Sunday evenings. The alphabet network has also launched revamped versions of "The Gong Show" and "Battle of the Network Stars," which have been airing on Thursday nights this summer. Add those to this spring's revitalized "Match Game" hosted by Alec Baldwin, and this summer's "To Tell the Truth" with Anthony Anderson, and ABC has a full slate of retro hits.

This summer, Fox has gotten in on the action with a new "Love Connection" hosted by Andy Cohen ("Watch What Happens Live With Andy Cohen"). He has some big shoes to fill as he takes the place of game show host extraordinaire Chuck Woolery, who hosted the original 1983 version. Fox's new "Beat Shazam" — although it features newer app technology is in essence a new take on "Name That Tune." Even NBC's "Hollywood Game Night" hearkens back to television days gone by with nods to "Win, Lose or Draw's" casual living room vibe.

As more and more viewers are drawn away from broadcast television by big-budget cable series or streaming services, it looks as if networks have found a solution by producing less-expensive summer programming that appeals to audiences' sense of nostalgia. With nine Daytime Emmy Awards for Outstanding Game Show to its credit, "The $100,000 Pyramid" is a good bet for summer entertainment.

This summer, join Strahan and millions of viewers on a trip down memory lane as contestants play word-association games with celebrities in "The $100,000 Pyramid," airing Sunday, Aug. 27, on ABC.

When devoted lifequard Mitch Buchannon (Johnson) adds three new lifeguards to his team, one in particular stands out, and not for the right reasons. Matt Brody (Efron), a former Olympic swimmer, takes the lifequard position as a way of completing compulsory community service and doesn't take the job as seriously as he should. Like oil and water, the two men just cannot seem to work together, but when packages of drugs —and even worse, bodies — start washing up on their peaceful beach, they're forced to set aside their differences to restore

Corporate headhunter Dane Jensen (Butler) is in line for a big promotion, but his wife, Elise (Mol), wishes he'd spend more time at home with his children, Laura (Butters) and Ryan (Jenkins). Dane gets worried when, during one of the increasingly rare times he gets to spend with his son, he notices strange bruises on Ryan's skin. Soon the worst is confirmed: his boy has leukemia and may not have much time left in the world, and Dane suddenly feels a new sense of urgency to spend time with his son while he still has the chance. Food gets super-sized with Chef Heston Blumenthal

By Andrew Warren

t would be easy to assume that, after thousands of years of cooking our food, we've figured out all the details, covered all the bases — nothing new under the sun, nothing to see here, move along.

Thankfully, that is not the case! Food pioneers on the cutting edge of the culinary world are regularly coming up with astounding new ideas, and British chef Heston Blumenthal is at the vanguard of culinary exploration. He's one of the U.K.'s most celebrated chefs and is a frequently seen on TV screens across the Atlantic.

In his latest TV series, Blumenthal experiments with food some more, this time focusing specifically on size: he's on a mission to see just how BIG he can make some food favorites. "Heston's Fantastical Food" premiered last Friday on Cooking Channel, and you can catch a new episode airing Friday, Sept. 1.

In this episode, Heston tackles one of the most fantastic of food memories from many childhoods: the ice cream truck. He gets his very own decked-out truck, and devises a plan to craft the biggest ice cream cone the world has ever seen, and to share it with an entire sweet-toothed town.

His plan calls for the finished product to stand over 16 feet tall, with a weight of more than 2,000 pounds — that's so big, it takes over a month for the tasty treat to freeze!

In another new episode next week, the culinary inventor turns his gaze to a daily British ritual: the tea break. Britons drink about 185 million cups of tea per day, and Heston challenges himself to make a packet of tea biscuits of record-shattering size. In the weeks that follow, he builds his own Willy Wonka-inspired candy shop, where he tries to make a meal out of chewing gum, as well as the world's biggest Rolos. Later, he crafts his own pub out of a giant hollowed-out pie, complete with a pool table that's made of fish and tartar sauce.

OK, so maybe making giant versions of everyday foods isn't the usual sort of ground-breaking culinary techniques the chef usually comes up with, but that isn't the point here. No, the point is that food doesn't always have to be the same: it can be fun, it can be exciting, but most of all, it should be delicious.

Catch a new episode of "Heston's Fantastical Food" airing Friday, Sept. 1, on Cooking Channel.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison

Q:As a fan of reruns of "The Drew Carey Show," I'm curious: How many different openings did they do?

A: That depends on whether you mean how many different opening sequences or opening songs, and either way it's not simple.

There were three main opening songs. "Moon Over Parma," a song written by Robert McGuire and performed by Drew Carey himself, was the theme for the first season. It was replaced by The Vogues's "Five O'Clock World" for the second season, which was in turn replaced by "Cleveland Rocks," an Ian Hunter song performed by the pop group Presidents of the United States of America, for the third through seventh seasons.

During the final two seasons, the show switched between all three songs but not the original recordings. The openings featured different renditions of the songs by various artists, including a cover of "Five O'Clock World" by the pop punk group Bowling for Soup (who were a big deal at the time) and a sort of rap-lounge version of "Moon Over Parma."

And that's not even counting the unofficial fourth theme song, "Girlfriend in a Coma" by the Smiths. That one, a popular pop punk song from the '80s, was the intro to the two sixth-season episodes in which Drew was — you guessed it — in a coma.

Q: I just found out that Mel Gibson voiced John Smith in Disney's "Pocahontas." Did he do the singing parts, too?

A: That was indeed Mel Gibson singing in "Pocahontas."

The gruff actor, not known for being open-minded, agreed to give it a shot. He even said he enjoyed doing it, though he had no illusions about how good he was.

"My musical talent is that I'm a very good listener," he joked to Entertainment Weekly in 1995, shortly before the movie came out. "The singing was enjoyable, but I can't see making a career change."

And we can say, with 22 years of hindsight, that he didn't make a career change. Indeed, it's the only musical role Gibson's ever had on film

It's one of only two voice roles he's done, in fact. Many people seem to get bitten by the voice-acting bug after doing a Disney movie, but not Gibson. He did "Pocahontas" in 1995, then "Chicken Run" in 2000 (by a different famous animation studio — Aardman Animations, the "Wallace and Gromit" people), and that was it.

If you're thinking, "Wait a minute, what about the 'Pocahontas' sequel?" you've fallen for an old Gibson-family trick. In "Pocahontas II: Journey to a New World" (1998), Mel's role was taken over by his little brother, Donal Gibson. In a 1998 interview with "Entertainment Tonight," Donal said that the brothers' voices are so alike that they often impersonate each other on the phone. "I once got a call from a famous Hollywood director in Australia ... and he thought I was Mel. He was begging me to do a film. I almost said yes."

President Trump officially removed Anthony Scaramucci as his communications director. And this was a little awkward — when Scaramucci called an Uber to pick him up at the White House, Sean Spicer was driving.

That's right, Scaramucci lost his job after just 10 days, following an obscene interview with the New Yorker. You know it's bad when you get fired after 10 days and everyone's still like, "What took so long?"
