Life in the Windy City: Showtime's 'The Chi' shines spotlight on Chicago's South Side

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

Chicago may be known for deep-dish pizza, the Sears Tower and the Bears, but the Windy City is also notorious for unusually high crime rates. Beyond the statistics and the headlines are stories of vibrant people struggling for a better life, and a new series shines a light on life on the city's South Side.

A group of people find themselves bound together when tragedy strikes their neighborhood in "The Chi," airing Sunday, Jan. 28, on Showtime. The gritty, 10-episode drama was created by Emmy winner Lena Waithe ("Master of None"), who based the series on her experiences growing up in Chicago. The program introduces viewers to a diverse community that includes youngsters, parents, dreamers, a drifter and a benevolent cop seeking justice.

"I hope when they watch the show, they connect with these characters. The truth is we're all a lot more alike than we think," Waithe said in a trailer for the show.

Jason Mitchell ("Mudbound," 2017) leads the ensemble cast as Brandon, an aspiring chef who dreams of one day opening a restaurant with his girlfriend, Jerrika (Tiffany Boone, "The Following"). Young actor Alex Hibbert ("Moonlight," 2016) plays Brandon's brother, Kevin, a pre-teen whose life is disrupted when he witnesses something shocking. Ntare Guma Mbaho Mwine ("Heroes") portrays Ronnie, a drifter. Carefree teen Emmett (Jacob Latimore, "The Maze Runner," 2014) suddenly finds himself with new responsibilities, which he handles with advice from his mother, Jada (Yolanda Ross, "Stranger Inside," 2001). Meanwhile, Det. Cruz (Armando Riesco, "Garden State," 2004) keeps a watchful eye as he strives for justice, not incarceration.

"The Chi" is executive produced by Waithe, Elwood Reid ("Hawaii Five-0"), Aaron Kaplan ("Life in Pieces"), Rick Famuyiwa ("Dope," 2015) and recording artist Common, an outspoken Chicago native. The Grammy-winning rapper is undeniably excited to bring the story of his city to prime time.

"This is the story I want to tell about our city," Common said in a promo for the show. "We are a colorful, incredible, beautiful people that are dealing with some tough situations."

While police procedurals are familiar prime-time fare, fewer series explore how people in rough neighborhoods cope with the day-to-day challenges of life in the city. Showtime's series takes a multi-generational approach with an ensemble cast that ranges from child actors to seasoned veterans of film and television.

Mitchell is a rising star in Hollywood, thanks to his recent turn in "Mudbound," which debuted at the Sundance Film Festival last January and garnered significant Oscar buzz for the actor's portrayal of a World War II veteran. He began his career in such films as "Contraband" (2012) and "Broken City" (2013) before gaining attention from critics for his role as rapper Eazy-E in the 2015 biopic "Straight Outta Compton."

Playwright, actor, photographer and documentarian Mwine was nominated for an NAACP Image Award for his role in a national touring production of "Six Degrees of Separation" in 1992. He made his film debut in "Blood Diamond" (2006), and his TV credits include "Heroes," "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation," "The Riches" and "Treme."

Mwine's "The Chi" co-star Ross also had a role in HBO's "Treme." Her work in the cabler's "Stranger Inside" earned her a nomination for an Independent Spirit Award for Best Debut Performance. She's appeared in other prime-time hits, such as "Third Watch," "Law & Order" and "Law & Order: Criminal Intent."

Like Ross, Riesco is a "Law & Order" alum, though he's more well known for his work in the independent films "Pieces of April" (2003) and "Garden State" (2004), along with the Hollywood action flick "National Treasure" (2004), the acclaimed drama "25th Hour" (2002) and the romantic comedy "Fever Pitch" (2005).

Other cast members have amassed an impressive list of big-screen and small-screen credits. A graduate of the California Institute of the Arts, Boone is best known as Mandy Lang in Fox's now defunct drama "The Following." Hibbert appeared in the Best Picture Oscar-winning "Moonlight." Latimore started his career as a rapper before turning his attention to acting in such films as "Ride Along" (2014) and "Collateral Beauty" (2016).

Sonja Sohn ("The Wire"), Jahking Guillory ("Kicks," 2016) and Steven Williams ("The X-Files") have recurring roles in "The Chi" as well.

Of course, the heart of the series is Waithe, whose passion for the subject matter and locale shine through. She's given "The Chi" authenticity by filming the entire show on location in Chicago, her hometown, where she'd dreamed of becoming a television writer since she was a child. She's written for Fox's "Bones" and Nickelodeon's "How to Rock," among other television series. In 2017, she made history when she became the first black woman to win the Primetime Emmy Award for Outstanding Writing for a Comedy Series for an episode of "Master of None."

Now a few weeks in, "The Chi" kicked off Showtime's original programming with its Jan. 7 broadcast premiere. However, viewers could access the premiere episode as of Dec. 15 via YouTube, Facebook, SHO.com and other platforms when Showtime released the debut for early sampling.

In the latest episode, Brandon finds himself looking for a place to go when Jerrika kicks him out. At the same time, Quentin (Williams) swipes something Trice (Tosin Morohunfola, "Chicago Med") values. Find out what happens next in "The Chi," airing Sunday, Jan. 28, on Showtime.

From Minnesota to Mexico

'Bizarre Foods' goes historical

By Andrew Warren
 TV Media

In a television landscape that's bursting with culinary programming, it isn't hard to find something that can satisfy almost any taste. Like cooking competitions? Boy, do you have a lot of choices. Maybe some more traditional instructional programs? Cooking Channel has you covered.

For me, one of the greatest gems is "Bizarre Foods" on Travel Channel, which premiered a new season last week and continues on Tuesday evenings. The long-running series has evolved over the years, but at its core, it's still all about host Andrew Zimmern visiting exotic and not-so-exotic locales and sampling the local specialties that, to a traditional American palate, may seem a bit, well, bizarre.

This season's seven episodes are all about culinary history and its impact on culture. In last week's premiere, Zimmern was in a less-than-exotic locale — Minnesota — where he sampled the foods that lumberjacks would have feasted on when the legend of Paul Bunyan first took hold, including duck stew, bear pastrami and muskrat with gravy.

"This season's adventures proved to be some of our most epic," Zimmern said in a statement, and considering some of the places he's been and the foods that he's eaten, that's a bold statement to make. This season, he heads to Europe and follows Napoleon's footsteps through Poland in one episode, and in another he makes the trip to Mexico City, where he dives into the culinary history of the Aztecs and their contemporaries, checking out how their cuisine has influenced that of modern-day Mexico.

The locations and the foods are pretty great and all, but it's really Zimmern who makes the show. The four-time James Beard Award-winning chef and TV personality is full of passion for new foods, cultures and traditions, and that enthusiasm oozes through the screen. His wry humor and good-natured charisma accompany him everywhere he goes, and they're the real keys to the show's watchability.

Get a dose of history with your meal with the latest season of "Bizarre Foods," currently airing Tuesdays on Travel Channel.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I know "Happy Days" had several spinoffs, but is it true that "Happy Days" was a spinoff itself?

A: Like the show itself, which is a family sitcom on the surface that's really about nostalgia and the fading of innocence, that question is more complicated than it seems.

If series creator Garry Marshall had gotten his way, "Happy Days" would not have been a spinoff. It would have appeared fully formed as a new show in prime time.

However, the pilot he wrote didn't get picked up at first, and so he eventually adapted it to be aired as an episode of the anthology series "Love, American Style." Thus, it did begin life as part of another series, but not in the sense that any of its characters were part of a different show's fictional universe (which is how spinoffs usually work).

Reportedly, director George Lucas watched it on "Love, American Style," and was impressed by Ron Howard's mature performance (he was, of course, already familiar with his immature performances as Opey in "The Andy Griffith Show"). As a result, he cast Howard in his 1973 film "American Graffiti," a critically acclaimed and popular snapshot of '70s teen culture.

The attention Howard got from that film brought renewed interest to the "Happy Days" pilot, and so ABC (which also owned "Love, American Style") picked it up.

So "Happy Days" wasn't a spinoff, but it did begin life as part of another show.

Q: Is it true that Ben Affleck guest starred in an episode of "Buffy the Vampire Slayer"?

A: Close, but not quite.

Ben Affleck appeared as an uncredited extra in the 1992 film "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," which eventually spawned the show (though actually "sired" is the more popular vampire term).

The generally accepted narrative attached to Affleck is that he and his school friend Matt Damon exploded onto the Hollywood scene with their indie smash "Good Will Hunting," in which they wrote and starred. However, few remember that they both struggled through a series of small parts before getting the film made and becoming the megastars they are today. (Adorably, the inseparable buddies even did some of that struggling together — they appeared as uncredited baseball fans in 1989's "Field of Dreams.")

One of Affleck's small parts was as "Basketball Player #10" in the surprise-hit 1992 comedy "Buffy the Vampire Slayer."

He was in good company, too. I'm not necessarily referring to the stars — it actually toplined some '80s and '90s stars who were on the downward slope of their fame arc, namely Luke Perry and Kristy Swanson — but rather to Affleck's fellow extras. Rock star Slash (of the band Guns N' Roses), future talk show great Ricki Lake and film and TV star Seth Green were among those putting in uncredited appearances.
