Fresh start: Slacker surfer finds new purpose in 'Lodge 49'

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

As television continues to evolve, some series seem to defy and transcend genres, mixing elements of comedy and drama in the same hour — sometimes even within the same scene. One cable giant has had great success mixing dark humor with serious issues, and it's about to introduce viewers to a whole new world.

In Long Beach, California, former surfer Sean "Dud" Dudley (Wyatt Russell, "Folk Hero & Funny Guy," 2016) has been floundering in the wake of his father's mysterious death a year ago. However, the discovery of a ring on the beach leads him to join a fraternal lodge full of aging — and perhaps equally aimless — members in "Lodge 49," airing Monday, Aug. 13, on AMC. Created by author Jim Gavin ("Middle Men"), the comedy-drama hybrid has been in the works since 2016, when AMC gave it a 10-episode straight-to-series order.

Despite his struggles, Dud is generally optimistic, unlike his twin sister, Liz (Sonya Cassidy, "Humans"). In contrast to Dud's happy-go-lucky slacker existence, his sister has been forced to grapple with the consequences of her crushing financial situation. Once a promising paralegal, she's been working at a Hooters-style restaurant since she was seemingly duped into co-signing her father's loans shortly before the family business went belly up. While she mostly keeps it together, Liz can sometimes lose it under the pressure of modern life.

Their tragic loss and precarious financial situation makes the Dudley twins relatable for many, and "Lodge 49" executive producer Jeff Freilich ("Halt and Catch Fire") is confident that viewers will connect with the characters.

"Each of the characters in this show are so well defined and so real that I know all of them," Freilich said in a promo for the new series.

The show also stars Brent Jennings ("Moneyball," 2011) as lodge member Ernie Fontaine, a plumbing salesman who befriends Dud and welcomes him into a world of cheap beer and easy camaraderie at Lodge 49, also known as the Ancient and Benevolent Order of the Lynx. A "Luminous Knight" of the order, Fontaine quickly bonds with the younger Dud, who believes the lodge is just what he needs to set him on the right path.

Sonya Cassidy in "Lodge 49"

While Liz is skeptical of her brother's new venture, Dud is steadfast in his commitment to his new friends, especially Ernie — the friendship between the two men is at the heart of the unique series.

"In Dud, [Ernie's] own flame is rekindled," Freilich explained. "These two kind of damaged people come together and unite to reinvent themselves."

At times funny, sad and even absurd, "Lodge 49" requires a versatile cast, and the show's stars fit the bill. Russell comes from a famous Hollywood family, but his focus hasn't always been acting. The son of superstars Goldie Hawn ("Private Benjamin," 1980) and Kurt Russell ("Escape from New York," 1981) worked his way up through the entertainment industry after an injury halted his burgeoning hockey career. He appeared in such films as "Escape from L.A." (1996), "This Is 40" (2012) and "22 Jump Street" (2014). He also co-starred in the indie film "Folk Hero & Funny Guy" (2016), and has appeared in the acclaimed British anthology series "Black Mirror."

English actress Cassidy rose to fame as scheming shop assistant Clara in the BBC period drama "The Paradise" in 2012 and 2013. British television audiences also watched her in the police detective series "Vera" and the hit Channel 4 science fiction series "Humans." She appeared as the Oracle in the Canadian/British fantasy show "Olympus," and hit the big screen in the 2015 spy thriller "Survivor."

Jennings has film and television credits dating back to the 1980s. Movie fans may recognize him from his role as Oakland Athletics coach Ron Washington in the 2011 Academy Award-nominated sports film "Moneyball." His other film work includes roles in "Witness" (1985), "Red Heat" (1988) and "Another 48 Hours" (1990). He's also appeared in literally dozens of television programs, ranging from the original "Miami Vice" and "Hill Street Blues" to "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" and "Medium."

Other notable cast members include Tony-nominated actress Linda Emond ("Law & Order: Special Victims Unit") as Ernie's love interest Connie Mills, and Second City alumnus David Pasquesi ("Veep") as Blaise St. John, the lodge's "alchemist." Eric Allan Kramer ("Good Luck Charlie") portrays Scott, a Long Beach Harbor Patrol officer who's a drummer in a surf-rock cover band.

Behind the scenes, Gavin and Freilich join forces with Peter Ocko ("The Office") as executive producers, while famed actor Paul Giamatti ("Billions") and Dan Carey ("Chasing Classic Cars") serve as producers. The on- and off-screen talent has earned "Lodge 49" a primo lead-in from AMC's hit series "Better Call Saul," which stars Bob Odenkirk as Saul Goodman, a role he originated in another acclaimed AMC series, "Breaking Bad."

While a "Saul" lead-in will likely benefit the series, it's up to the cast of "Lodge 49" to keep viewers interested. In this week's episode, airing Monday, Aug. 13, Dud becomes more familiar with the lodge, and Ernie goes toe to toe with other Lynx over Larry's (Kenneth Welsh, "Miracle," 2004) declining health. Catch the new series on AMC.

'Worst' rematch

Robert Irvine returns to 'Worst Cooks in America'

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

After seven years, it's well past time for a rematch. "Worst Cooks in America" is back with a new group of culinary dunces eager to improve their skills, and one of their two mentors is itching for a win.

Chef Robert Irvine returns to boot camp when the latest season premieres Sunday, Aug. 12, on Food Network. He starred as one of the two mentors back in 2011's season 2, ultimately losing to chef Anne Burrell in the final throw-down between their recruits, but she won't be any easier to beat this time around. Burrell's been with the show, and its celebrity spinoff, since the beginning, and she wins far more often than she loses.

In "Worst Cooks in America," a group of people who are absolute disasters in the kitchen are divided into two teams that are then mentored by the chefs, who try to teach them some basic and advanced cooking skills over the course of several weeks. At the end of every week, each team's mentor sends the worst-performing recruit home, until only one home cook remains on each team.

It's a fun-filled, lighthearted sort of competition that leans heavily on the kitsch for laughs, but the recruits really do learn a lot from their mentors. Come the finale, when chefs Irvine and Burrell each have just a single home cook left on their respective teams, all those acquired skills are put to the test when the recruits prepare a restaurant-quality meal for a panel of judges, without any help from the chefs.

Whoever cooks the meal the judges like best earns $25,000 — and also bragging rights for his or her mentor, who can rightly take credit for turning a kitchen disaster into a kitchen ... well, maybe not quite a kitchen master, but at least someone who can boil water without burning the place down.

Fourteen of the country's worst cooks enter the kitchen with dreams of turning their kitchen disasters into culinary successes when "Worst Cooks in America" returns, with Robert Irvine championing at the bit for a rematch against Anne Burrell. Catch the premiere on Sunday, Aug. 12, on Food Network.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I finally got around to watching the spinoff “The Golden Palace,” and I can’t place where I know Roland from. Where would I have seen him?

A: The tough part of this answer is knowing where to begin. Don Cheadle has been one of the most sought-after actors of the past 15 years, so you might know him from all sorts of places.

After all the accolades that followed his performance in the big-screen 2004 drama “Hotel Rwanda,” people have become surprised to know that Cheadle got his start on TV.

He had some notable big-screen roles before “The Golden Palace” premiered in 1992, but the show’s high profile (as the spinoff that grew out of the classic sitcom “The Golden Girls”) meant that it was the thing that really brought him to the public’s attention.

Bigger and bigger roles followed, culminating in an early-2000s run of prestige films that made him the highly respected Hollywood actor he is today. It started with the 2000 drug war drama “Traffic” and was followed by “Hotel Rwanda” and “Crash” (2004). He was also one of the 11 criminals in the “Ocean’s Eleven” reboot-turned-franchise that launched in 2001.

He returned to TV in recent years with his critically acclaimed Showtime drama “House of Lies,” which ended in 2016. However, he’ll be back on Showtime next year in a new Wall Street comedy called “Black Monday.”

He’s continued his film career as well, most visibly as James Rhodes, alias War Machine, in the recent Avengers superhero movies.

Q: Will they be doing any more big-screen Poirot stories after “Murder on the Orient Express”?

A: It seems Kenneth Branagh has gotten a taste for the character. After the success of his 2017 adaptation of “Murder on the Orient Express,” which he directed, produced and starred in, Branagh will be reprising his role as the fussy Belgian detective Hercule Poirot next year.

The next Agatha Christie novel he’ll adapt is “Death on the Nile,” slated for release in late 2019.

Poirot appeared in 33 novels penned by Christie (and a few more by writer Sophie Hannah, who received permission from Christie’s estate to revive the character). “Murder on the Orient Express,” originally released in 1934, is by far the most famous and well-loved, but “Death on the Nile” is up there.

It has plenty in common with “Orient,” most notably the fact that the plots both begin when a murder intrudes on one of Poirot’s vacations.

This is, of course, not the first time “Death on the Nile” will be committed to film. A star-studded big-screen version came out in 1978 with Peter Ustinov as Poirot, and a TV version was made in 2004 featuring David Suchet — one of 70 times he donned the detective’s mustache.

Late laughs

Conan
This is our fourth year at Comic-Con. That's right, I've been coming to Comic-Con for four years. Or, to put that in terms everyone at Comic-Con understands, "17 Spider-Man movies."

You know what I like about San Diego? With all that's going on in America, it's comforting to know it would only take 15 minutes to drive to another country.

Tickets to this year's Comic-con sold out in about an hour. The last time something sold out that fast, it was Donald Trump in Helsinki.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon
A couple in Florida are getting married and instead of wedding presents, they've asked for money to buy goats. Even crazier, one couple they invited was like, "Finally, a chance to regift this goat."

Today, President Trump met with Russian President Vladimir Putin in Finland. Trump was pretty nervous, which makes sense, because most people are nervous when meeting their boss.
