Goshen Community Schools Seeks Educational Excellence for All Students

In a recent news story, a GCS administrator was secretly filmed under the guise of a couple posing as parents interested in enrolling their children in Goshen Community Schools. This interview was edited and took the administrator's comments out of context. What was not included in the video was an emphatic statement that Goshen Community Schools does not teach CRT. Further, the administrator also stated that Goshen Schools only teaches the Indiana state standards. However, this administrator did misrepresent Goshen Community Schools and has now been placed on administrative leave.

Goshen Community Schools is committed to helping every child succeed. Goshen serves students with diverse abilities who are also from diverse backgrounds. Because of this diversity, our community is stronger, and our graduates are able to make an impact across multiple industries and organizations.

“Regardless of capabilities, gender, ethnicity, race, athletic abilities, or academic abilities,” said Superintendent Dr. Steven Hope, “every student in a GCS school has a right to receive an education of excellence. We want every student to access the opportunities that are available.” Students build positive relationships when they are engaged and included. We want every student to feel that they belong, as they receive an education of excellence in a safe and positive learning environment.
