A conference rivalry

Three storylines as Carroll College football hosts Montana Tech in season's final home game

RYAN KUHN
406mtsports.com

The Carroll College football team has already exceeded expectations in 2019.

It has five wins and have snapped a four-year streak of losing seasons.

But if you know coach Troy Purcell, you know he sets the bar even higher.

The Saints have their eye on an NAIA at-large playoff berth.

Not bad for a team that was picked to finished seventh out of eight in the coaches' and media preseason polls.

The only problem is that No. 17 Montana Tech stands in their way and is looking to accomplish the same goal.

Tech is currently on the cusp of earning an at-large berth into the 16-team playoff field. The Saints have hopes at 5-3, but they are slim.

A win over Montana Tech could help them get into the top 25, but a playoff berth is still a long shot, although a win would clinch a winning season.

With so much at stake, here are three storylines leading up to Saturday's game between the Saints and the Orediggers.

1. Stopping the Oredigger run game

Montana Tech likes running the ball.

In fact, it really likes running the ball.

The Orediggers are ranked third in the Frontier Conference in rushing yards per game behind the College of Idaho and Carroll.

And the most shocking part is that they are using a pair of underclassmen.

Blake Counts and Tyler Folkes have had to fill in for senior all-conference running back Jed Fike after suffering a season-ending knee injury.

But with how good Montana Tech's run production has been, Carroll's run defense has been pretty dominant, as well.

The Saints are third in rushing yards allowed per game and have allowed just six rushing touchdowns this season.

An intriguing matchup, isn't it?

2. Freshmen bounce back

Carroll freshmen quarterback Devan Bridgewater and running back Matthew Burgess couldn't have asked for a better way to start their college football careers.

Burgess ranked second among Frontier Conference running backs in rushing yards per game and first in touchdowns.

Bridgewater, on the other hand, is fourth in passing.

But the two struggled last week up in Havre against Montana State University-Northern.

Bridgewater completed just 34 percent of his passes, while Burgess was held to 54 yards on the ground.

If the Saints are going to pull off the upset, both will need to return to form.

Of course, Montana Tech also realizes that.

3. Harnessing senior day emotion

It all comes down to one final game at Nelson Stadium.

Carroll's 15 seniors will be running onto their home field one final time.

But they can't let the fact that their college football careers are coming to an end get them down.

They still have one thing left to do.

The Saints haven't had much success against Montana Tech, winning twice over the last seven meetings.

Their last win at home came in September 2016.

What better way to end your college football career than with a win against a conference rival and potentially knock the Orediggers out of the playoff picture?

And who knows? Maybe two straight wins to end the year will be enough for Carroll to get into the playoffs.

Only time will tell.

Kickoff is scheduled for 12 p.m. at Nelson Stadium.

Top four stay the same

Pair of big matchups loom in Frontier; CC-Tech, C of I at UMW

RYAN KUHN
406mtsports.com

In a couple of weeks, the Frontier Conference football season will be coming to a close.

Sad, right?

But not before the top four teams battle one last time to see if it is possible for an at-large playoff bid.

The College of Idaho will take on Montana Western, while Montana Tech travels to Carroll College.

So what is better than getting reach for these top matchups than to see where they lay in the Frontier Conference Power Rankings.

Here is a hint, they haven't moved much from the weeks prior.

Agree or disagree? Let me know on Twitter at @rskuhn

1. College of Idaho (8-0, 8-0 Frontier)

The College of Idaho keeps winning.

Although this week wasn't as easy as it probably was supposed to be.

The Yotes battled Eastern Oregon and had to put up a touchdown in the fourth quarter that's the difference of the game.

C of I showed it has a lot of weapons that might be beneficial come playoff time.

Quarterback Darius-James Peterson threw for 274 yards and a touchdown, while running back Nick Calzaretta ran for 124 yards and two touchdowns.

Even wide receiver Hunter Juarez had a game with 118 receiving yards and a touchdown reception.

Montana Western will have a challenge this week.

Next up: vs. Montana Western

2. Montana Tech (6-2, 6-2 Frontier)

Montana Tech looked like its season was in peril when running back Jed Fike went down with a season-ending injury.

But freshmen Blake Counts and Tyler Folkes stepped up in his place.

During a 28-14 win over Southern Oregon this past weekend, the duo ran for a combined 185 yards and two touchdowns, while quarterback Jet Campbell also threw for 157 yards and two touchdowns.

Montana Western quarterback Jon Jund runs the ball against Carroll College on Saturday at Nelson Stadium.

The Orediggers have certainly dug themselves out of a hole. A couple more wins could see them making the playoffs.

That is, if Carroll doesn't have anything to say about it during their meeting this weekend.

Next up: at Carroll College

3. Montana Western (6-2, 6-2 Frontier)

Montana Western is officially back in the saddle again after two straight wins over the last two weeks.

And that includes a 40-10 shellacking of Rocky Mountain College.

Quarterback Jon Jund showed off his arm, completing 50 percent of his passes for 230 yards and five touchdown passes.

Three of the touchdowns went to wide receiver Nate Simkins while the other two ended up going to Kyler Prante.

Jund will need to duplicate his performance next week if the Bulldogs want a chance to at the playoffs.

The only problem is that an undefeated College of Idaho stands in their way.

Next up: at College of Idaho

4. Carroll College (5-3, 5-3 Frontier)

Last week, Carroll College showed it can win on the road.

This week, it showed it can win at night.

The Saints defeated Montana State Northern 27-6 in a game that shouldn't have been that close.

Freshman running back Matthew Burgess ran for just 39 yards, while quarterback Devan Bridgewater completed just 34 percent of his passes.

But, as coach Troy Purcell says, the next day you need to put it behind you.

Especially with a tough Montana Tech team coming into town.

Next up: vs. Montana Tech

5. Eastern Oregon (2-7, 2-6 Frontier)

Eastern Oregon is the team that makes the biggest leap in this week's power rankings.

Mainly because it hung with the Frontier Conference's top team.

Mountie fans have something to look forward to as quarterback Kai Quinn threw for 250 yards and a touchdown to Cade Reed.

Reed only had two catches, but one was for 95 yards. Imagine if he had had four catches?

Eastern Oregon has a favorable schedule

Carroll College answers back College of Idaho in the first quarter to take the lead 7-6 with a TD by Jaden Harrison during Saturday's game at Nelson Stadium.

for its last two games, so maybe it could end its season on a high note.

After all, it did last season.

Next up: at Rocky Mountain

6. Southern Oregon (3-6, 3-5 Frontier)

Southern Oregon quarterback Trent Banner did not have a good introduction to the Frontier Conference.

Banner completed just 46 percent of his passes and threw three interceptions as the Raiders lost to Montana Tech 28-14.

It's been a rollercoaster of a season as Southern Oregon thought it was going to turn its trajectory around with three straight wins earlier this year.

The good news is that the Raiders have a favorable schedule for their last two weeks.

The bad news is that they will have to do a lot of traveling.

Let's see what happens.

Next up: at Montana State Northern

7. Montana State Northern (1-8, 0-8 Frontier)

All season, Montana State Northern has been stuck at the bottom of the power ranking.

An 0-8 Frontier Conference record will do that.

But the Lights showed fight this week against an improved Carroll team.

Quarterback Tre Long completed 57 percent of his passes for 144 yards and also ran for 40 yards.

There has been not much positive for Northern this season, but could Long be the answer?

Lights have their best shot at a second win next week.

Next up: vs. Southern Oregon

8. Rocky Mountain (3-6, 2-6 Frontier)

Rocky Mountain has struggled on offense. The only teams it could score more than three touchdowns against have been Dickinson State and Montana State Northern.

Its defense has also been subpar, giving up more than 40 points four times this season.

The only bright spot has been running back Sam Sparks, but even his 67 yards against Montana Western last week were clearly not enough.

The Battlin' Bears have a good shot at home this week to get another win.

Otherwise, they can look forward to next season.

Next up: vs. Eastern Oregon
