Montanans navigate non-binary and trans

“What is a gendered haircut?”

Non-binary and trans Montanans navigate haircuts, barbershops and salons

MEGAN MICHELOTTI

What you might not picture is someone in a barbershop or salon having a gender identity crisis because they don’t know whether to select a “women’s” or “men’s” haircut. Throughout history, barbershops and salons have been gendered and many are still today.

There is a movement toward gender-neutral barbershops, salons and haircuts catering to androgynes and androgyny with many barbershops, salons and haircuts offering haircuts off ered have been gendered and many are still today.

What is a gendered haircut? MEGAN MICHELOTTI

Kevin Halverson walks through a pasture on leased land Aug. 11, 2022. He is checking on a water project he completed last fall. The smaller pastures located here and trying to fi nd a stylist when they moved to Helena, but they were getting “masculine” haircuts at the time. They go to a barbershop that is switching to different salons to follow their style, who is very open and affirming,” she says.

What Halverson is doing on his land is called regenerative grazing. The corrections department has taken steps to ease the outflow of correctional officers by offering $2,000 and health benefits to current and former officers and front line correctional staff.

Reece Halverson walks through a pasture on leased land Aug. 11, 2022. He is checking on a water project he completed last fall. The smaller pastures located here and trying to fi nd a stylist when they moved to Helena, but they were getting “masculine” haircuts at the time. They go to a barbershop that is switching to different salons to follow their style, who is very open and affirming,” she says.

What Halverson is doing on his land is called regenerative grazing. The corrections department has taken steps to ease the outflow of correctional officers by offering $2,000 and health benefits to current and former officers and front line correctional staff.

Reece Halverson walks through a pasture on leased land Aug. 11, 2022. He is checking on a water project he completed last fall. The smaller pastures located here and trying to fi nd a stylist when they moved to Helena, but they were getting “masculine” haircuts at the time. They go to a barbershop that is switching to different salons to follow their style, who is very open and affirming,” she says.

What Halverson is doing on his land is called regenerative grazing. The corrections department has taken steps to ease the outflow of correctional officers by offering $2,000 and health benefits to current and former officers and front line correctional staff.

Reece Halverson walks through a pasture on leased land Aug. 11, 2022. He is checking on a water project he completed last fall. The smaller pastures located here and trying to fi nd a stylist when they moved to Helena, but they were getting “masculine” haircuts at the time. They go to a barbershop that is switching to different salons to follow their style, who is very open and affirming,” she says.