

WINNER, FIRST PLACE IN PUBLIC SERVICE AND INVESTIGATIVE REPORTING, ILLINOIS APME

Herald & Review

Fun day in baseball

Cubs, Cardinals both win in routs SPORTS, B1

Chicago fire

Eight die, including six children, in apartment tragedy

NATION/WORLD, A9

Florida shooting

Multiple deaths, woundings in attack at mall NATION, A4

MOSTLY SUNNY 91 • 74 FORECAST, B10

MONDAY, AUGUST 27, 2018

Powered by herald-review.com

#TogetherDecatur

SPECIAL REPORT: SAFETY ON THE SMALL FARM

CLAY JACKSON, HERALD & REVIEW

Grant Noland, treasurer of Noland Farms, talks with Ryan Burrows at Noland Farm in Blue Mound. Burrows is in a tractor hooked to a grain cart. Raised on the family farm, Noland learned safety procedures early and plans to ensure his own children do the same.

JOHN MCCAIN:
1936-2018

McCain to lie in state

Cross-country funeral procession also planned for senator

LAURIE KELLMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two former presidents are expected to speak at Sen. John McCain's service and he will lie in state in both the nation's capital and Arizona as part of a cross-country funeral procession ending with his burial at the U.S. Naval Academy, according to plans taking shape Sunday.

McCain had long feuded with President Donald Trump, and two White House officials said McCain's family had asked, before the senator's death, that Trump not attend the funeral services. Vice President Mike Pence is likely to attend, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A day after McCain died of brain cancer at 81, his family, friends and congressional and state leaders were working out details of the farewell to the decorated Vietnam War hero, prisoner of war and six-term senator.

His office said that McCain will lie in state in the Arizona State Capitol on Wednesday and have a funeral nearby on Thursday. The procession will then head to Washington, where McCain will lie in state in the Capitol Rotunda on Friday with a formal ceremony and time for the public to pay respects. The next day, the procession will pass the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and head to a funeral at Washington National

Please see MCCAIN, Page A2

■ INSIDE: A look at the highlights of John McCain's lengthy public service career. NATION, A8

WEATHER ISSUES

Schools releasing students earlier

Heat indices spiking in triple figures

HERALD & REVIEW

Decatur public schools will release students after three hours of instruction on Monday and Tuesday because of forecast heat conditions, the school district said Sunday.

The National Weather Service at Lincoln on Sunday issued a heat advisory until 7 p.m. Tuesday. High temperatures are expected to be in the lower 90s, with heat indices spiking from 100 to 107 degrees Fahrenheit in the afternoon.

Spokeswoman Maria Robertson said in a statement that students would be dropped off at their normal bus stops. Pershing Early Learning Center morning programs will dismiss at noon, and the afternoon program will not be in session.

Please see SCHOOLS, Page A2

■ CLOSINGS: For up-to-the-minute school announcements, see www.herald-review.com

STAYING PROTECTED

For family farms, challenge in balancing safety, traditions

JOHN REIDY
john.reidy@lee.net

Few settings speak to the American way of life quite like the family farm, where children have long been expected to contribute to the collective well-being by learning with their hands the tools and skills of a trade that settled the prairie.

But despite the iconic status, small farms are also just that — farms, with serious dangers unique to any other business. The nature of farming means heavy machinery, blades and chemicals are part of life. And while virtually every American industry has undergone rapid changes in child labor rules over the past century, the small family farm — which are generally exempt from Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations — are a unique holdout. Here, amid tractors and combines ramping up for this harvest season, boys and girls learn the family business, risks and all.

About this story

This story was reported by Donnette Beckett, Jaylyn Cook, Claire Hettinger, Tom Lisi, Tony Reid, Valerie Wells and Ryan Voyles of the Herald & Review; Kevin Barlow of the Bloomington Pantagraph; and Jarad Jarmon of the Journal Gazette & Times Courier.

It is a sizable population. The National Children's Center for Rural Health and Safety estimates about 893,000 youth lived on farms in 2014, and 51 percent worked on their farm. More than 265,600 nonresident youth were hired in agriculture in 2014. Accidents happen in all workplaces, but from 2001 to 2015, 48 percent of all fatal injuries to young workers occurred in agriculture.

Learning on the job begins at a young age, and while many families say great attention is given to proper instruction, the fact is, farming is as dangerous an occupation as any, and the given that children should participate is weighed against the very hard nature of the work, requiring respect for machine and nature.

"Most family farms, at least the way we grew up and other farmers that I know that are smaller farmers, they do not necessarily go through that formal training," said University of Illinois Extension specialist Robert "Chip" Petrea. "A lot of it (training) is modeling, like, 'Watch me' and this is what happens when I do this, and do not do that.' But it's not formal in the sense where that person is there with others and there is research to suggest that being with their peers and hearing it from there, there's this peer pressure where it's like, 'OK, we should all be

Please see SAFETY, Page A2

Safety on the small farm

This story is part of a series on the hazards on small agricultural operations in Illinois.

SUNDAY: While virtually every place of employment is getting safe, agriculture remains the deadliest industry in the country.

MONDAY: How do families balance helping young people learn the trade with staying safe?

TUESDAY: Safety improvements are often costly, putting operators in a juggling act.

WEDNESDAY: What farmers and groups are doing to keep the industry safe moving forward.

Visit herald-review.com to see photos and videos of the farmers featured in our series. Join the conversation on our Dialogue page by sending comments to letters@herald-review.com.

TOGETHER DECATUR

Promotion idea hidden in plain sight

Theatre 7 rocks downtown with contest to kick off new season

DONNETTE BECKETT

DECATUR — Theatre 7 director Tanya Haubner may know her way around a theater, but she said she isn't crafty when it comes to selling the show.

To introduce the community to the theater's new productions, she discovered her inner Martha Stewart: "I don't usually come up with ideas for marketing," she said.

Her crafty side uncovered, Theatre 7 members have placed decorated rocks at various locations in downtown Decatur. The rocks are hidden under benches, in flower beds or among other rocks as part of a contest to win theater tickets.

"But we didn't put any up in trees or places people can't get them," Haubner said. When someone finds a painted rock, they simply take a picture of the rock and post the find on the Theatre 7 Facebook page. The deadline for entering the contest will be Oct. 1.

"We are putting their name in for a drawing for two tickets to the (first) show," Haubner said.

The community theater will open with "Young Frankenstein The Musical" on Oct. 12 at the Decatur Civic Center Theater.

About 30 rocks have been hidden throughout downtown Decatur for more than a week.

"They are near the library, Central Park, the streets around them and Merchant Street," Haubner said.

A few of the rocks have already been found, but Haubner encourages the finders to rehide the little pieces of art so other people can find them and enter the contest.

"Rehide them downtown, otherwise people aren't going to know

Please see ROCKS, Page A2

CLAY JACKSON, HERALD & REVIEW

Theatre 7's Tanya Haubner shows off some painted rocks that see created Thursday at the theater's office on North Water Street in Decatur.

The Rock Hunt

If you find one of Theatre 7's painted rocks, visit their Facebook page and post a photo of the rock. www.facebook.com/Theatre7Decatur

DISCOVER DIGITAL

■ Sold: Search the latest Macon County real estate transfers

■ Everything you need to know about 2018-19 Eastern Illinois University football
AT HERALD-REVIEW.COM

COMICS B9
LIFE A7
LOTTERY A2

OBITUARIES A6
SPORTS B1-6
TV/ABBY B10

