

In Loving Memory of

Judy Simpson

7/19/1951 - 3/30/2008

A loving wife, daughter, sister, aunt, grandmother and friend to many, Judy Simpson was the proud mother of four boys — which means she earned honorary sainthood sometime around the early 1980s. She ran a house full of noise, sweaty sneakers, empty refrigerators, and daily competitions with grace, grit, and a well-timed look that could silence a room faster than any whistle from her husband and best friend for over 40 years, Pete.

She loved her husband Pete fiercely, stood by her boys through every scraped knee, their questionable decisions, and the bad haircuts, and somehow managed to keep her sense of humor through it all. Judy's laughter still echoes in their stories, her lessons still guide their steps, and her love remains the steady foundation beneath them all.

We can find comfort by following in her footsteps and leaning towards God for strength, because she would not have it any other way but to see happiness in our lives.

We're certain she's smiling today— probably still keeping an eye on those boys. We love and will always miss you. - Judy's Family
