

EDITOR / REPORTER

WANTED — THE CHALLIS MESSENGER

APPLY TODAY

The Challis Messenger, the weekly newspaper serving Challis and Custer County, Idaho, is seeking a full-time Editor/Reporter to cover local news in one of the most scenic corners of the state.

This is a hands-on, in-person position based in Challis. You'll be the person readers count on to tell them what's happening in their community—from city council and county commissioner meetings to the school board, local sports, business, agriculture, public lands issues, and the features that make small-town life worth reading about.

— WHAT YOU'LL DO

- Report, write, and edit local news, features, and sports on a weekly deadline
- Cover public meetings (city, county, school district) and follow up on the issues that matter to residents
- Take your own photographs to accompany stories
- Build and maintain relationships with local officials, businesses, and residents

— WHAT WE'RE LOOKING FOR

- Strong writing and editing skills, with clean, accurate, readable copy
- The reporting instincts to dig into a story, ask good questions, and get the facts right
- Ability to juggle multiple stories and consistently hit a weekly deadline
- Comfort with photography and a willingness to shoot your own images
- A valid driver's license and reliable transportation, since coverage involves travel around a large, rural county
- Self-motivation and the ability to work independently in a small newsroom

HELPFUL, NOT REQUIRED

A degree in journalism, communications, or a related field, or equivalent experience
