Development Fees Deemed Out of Date

By David Jen

DUBLIN — The city’s current inclusionary zoning regulations require developers to set aside 12.5% of a residential project’s units as affordable housing.

Developers may also satisfy the requirement by negotiating a combination of alternatives with the city, such as in-lieu fees, making a land dedication, or building the required units in a different part of the city.

But Economic and Planning Systems (EPS), an Oakland-based real-estate and land-use economics consulting firm, recently presented a report to city leaders that said the city’s current fees and requirements are out of date.

The council as a whole called for additional analysis around the linkage fees, specifically to find where the decision threshold for developers lies that might render a project infeasible.

Rising residential development costs have outpaced both home and rental prices, dampening developer interest, according to EPS Principal Ashleigh Kanat.

Lower-Income Units Removed From Fallon 580 Housing Plan

By David Jen

DUBLIN — Plans to nix developers’ proposal to build 74 high-density affordable-housing units in eastern Dublin and replace it with lower-density housing were approved by the city council last week.

In return, developer GH PacVest, Inc. agreed to convert 45 acres of open space to build a sprawling park.

“I’m pretty comfortable with the compromise here and what the city is getting back,” said Councilmember Kashef Qaadri, pointing to the need for walking trails in eastern Dublin. “Can’t wait for the shovels to hit the ground.”

The council voted unanimously to amend Dublin’s General Plan for the land-use changes that are part of the Dublin Fallon 580

Pleasanton’s Housing Element Certified; Dublin Awaits Approval

By Larry Altman

PLEASANTON — The City of Pleasanton has finally proven to the state that it is prepared to build enough fair housing for anyone who wants to live in the Tri-Valley city.

Under state law, cities and counties in California are required to file reports every eight years identifying sites that can be rezoned for housing for all income levels, special needs populations and various household types.

But Pleasanton has been going back and forth with the state for two years to get its Housing Element

“An outstanding quality of life for our city is closely connected to quality housing, and this update is an important step to keeping Pleasanton a desirable place to live and work for everyone.”

– Pleasanton Mayor Karla Brown

certified by the California Department of Housing and Community Development. Drafts were sent back to the city three times.

State officials required revisions that included additional incentives for lower-income units to encourage more affordability, and a more detailed discussion of the city’s water-supply strategy. Another revision included suspending negotiations with developers for public amenities — such as parks — for projects that aim to build out at full density.

Other changes needed to be made as well. Earlier this summer, the city council

Pleasanton City Council OKs New Police Cameras

By David Jen

PLEASANTON — The city is on track to get a new crime-fighting tool after city leaders approved plans to install up to 10 video cameras around Pleasanton once funding is in place.

Cameras will be installed at high-traffic intersections and in areas leading to freeways. Police say the recordings will be used as evidence in solving crimes.

The city council voted unanimously at its Sept. 5 meeting to support the use of the citywide video cameras.

“Safeguarding our community is a huge part of our job, and here’s another tool to provide our very well trained and highly skilled police officers so that they can do their job even better,” said Mayor

Karla Brown.

Capt. Kurt Schlehuber said the cameras will be useful amid an increase in the smash-and-grab thefts that often happen at the Stoneridge Shopping Center. They may also help officers catch catalytic-converter thieves, who often slip away, leaving no solid evidence behind.

The new cameras will supplement Pleasanton’s 17 existing automatic license-plate readers.

Councilmember Julie Testa said she knows the community is concerned about crime, but also expected residents to speak out about privacy concerns related to the cameras.

“They want that security,” she said.

City officials said the County Fairgrounds Hosts Cat Extravaganza, Rescue Event

PLEASANTON — More than 130 cats converged on the Alameda County Fairgrounds last weekend for the Cat Extravaganza and Rescue Awareness Event, and some 5,000 people came to check them out.

Loving Cats Worldwide, which is dedicated to educating people, providing entertainment, and helping cats, put on the event and will return in April for another similar event.

When it comes to allowing the cats to strut their stuff on the catwalk, founder Steven Meserve said that cats must be comfortable and not pushed to do anything he or she doesn’t want to do.

The Pleasanton show featured cats and kittens of all different breeds, ages, personalities and sizes, even a rescued cat with an amputated back leg.

Judges who came from the U.S., the U.K., Colombia, Portugal, and other countries, gave high marks

DA Files Lawsuit Against Livermore Vape Company for Selling to Minors

By Kristin J. Bender

The Alameda County District Attorney has filed a lawsuit against a Livermore vaping company for allegedly selling flavored tobacco, synthetic cannabis and flavored vape products to minors.

District Attorney Pamela Price announced the suit last week during a news conference at the Livermore Chamber of Commerce.

Price said Apollo Future Technology, which does business as Apollo E-cigs, sold products through its website without verifying that the buyer was over 21 years old. That is a violation of state law.

“They illegally shipped the products through the U.S. Postal service without complying with California’s delivery requirements,” Price explained. “And they manufactured and sold thousands of synthetic cannabis products in packaging that falsely claimed the products were legal, natural and industrial hemp products containing less than .3% THC.”

Price said the court last week issued a temporary restraining order to block the company from selling its products online or at its Lindbergh Avenue location in Livermore.

Price noted that an investigation into Apollo was launched after complaints from the Livermore Valley Joint Unified School District surfaced. District officials reported that they were seeing Apollo’s products on campuses.

“We’re very concerned about the impact that addictive substances are having on our students and

Livermore Vine Cinema Hosts Independent Film Set in Fremont

By Christina Cavallaro

Movie goers packed the Vine Cinema in Livermore recently to check out a new film about a young Afghan woman struggling to adjust to life in the United States and to find her place in it. The film called “Fremont” centers around Donya, a young, beautiful and brooding Afghan refugee who lives in Fremont and works at a San Francisco fortune cookie factory. Donya grapples with complicated feelings about her traumatic past as a translator for the U.S. government in Afghanistan, while trying to make a new home in a new country.

She lives alone in a building with other Afghan people, has trouble sleeping and often eats by herself at a nearby restaurant watching soap operas with an elderly server there. The City of Fremont was chosen as the location for filming because it has the largest Afghan population in the United States.

Seeking connection, Donya decides to send a message out to the world through a fortune inside a cookie. and then waits to see what happens next.

Many of the film’s memorable scenes, all shot in black and-white, feature Fremont businesses, including Dino’s Family Restaurant, a classic diner now made famous as the location of the magnetic scene between Donya and the character Daniel, a quiet auto mechanic, played by Jeremy Allen White from the hit FX series, “The Bear.”

Dino’s real life manager Deandra Baber said filming the movie in the diner was no small feat. “Oh yeah, they moved everything, all the booths over.” Her co-worker Jackie Dhandha helped out the film crew with one scene and had her name listed in the movie credits.

“It was an interesting experience to watch the film and go ‘oh, I know where that is,’ even if it was a little unnerving at times to see how editing impacts reality,” Baber said.

Director and co-writer Babek Jalali chose to convey the story in black-and-white in support of the film’s artistic aim to look beyond imagined differences between humans and exaggerated otherness. The absence of color allowed the viewer to instead focus on universal similarities between groups and communities.

Actress Anaita Wali Zada, who plays Donya and lives in the Los Altos hills, spoke to the movie audience after the film and took questions.

She told the audience that her life in the U.S. has taken a turn because of the story she told about Fremont and its Afghan community.

She now plans to help be a voice for Afghan women who have come to the U.S seeking a life of freedom as well as for those whose freedoms are still being denied in Afghanistan.

Donya may have gotten out, but Zada reminds the audience, “This is one story, about what is going on here.” The traumatic past that follows Donya in the film is the heartbreaking present for millions of Afghan women whose rights have disappeared.

“People are still suffering. The story is far from over.”

The Livermore Vine Cinema recently showed an independent film called “Fremont.” The story was filmed in Fremont and features a young Afghan woman starting her new life in the Bay Area. (Photo - Doug Jorgensen)

City Allocates $90,000 in Funding for Downtown Events

By Larry Altman

The City Council on Monday allocated $90,000 to Livermore Downtown Inc. (LDI) to enable the non-profit organization to continue promoting city events including Independence Day fireworks, Farmers’ Markets and the Livermore Half Marathon.

The 5-0 vote that included several other routine items was part of a short council meeting that also formally added Dublin and Alameda County to a joint effort with Pleasanton and Livermore to help rebuild the Tri-Valley Haven Emergency Shelter in Livermore; and officially announced that public improvements adjacent to the MP Avance affordable housing project on First Street were completed.

Speaking to the council, LDI executive director Ruby Lopez-Villarreal said the funding would help the organization continue to strengthen the downtown business center. LDI works to promote economic growth, preserve history, and attract tourists and residents to the city’s core, The city has helped fund LDI since 1986.

“Vital partnerships such as the one with the City of Livermore are what helps to make our shared vision a reality,” Lopez-Villareal said.

According to its annual report, during fiscal year 2022-23, LDI supported the year-round Sunday and seasonal Thursday evening farmers markets; Kidz Town Halloween Hay Day; the Livermore Valley Made pop-up market; Witches Night Out-Moonlight Shopping and Dining; the Earlier than the Bird pajama shopping event; Holiday Village in the Park; the Home for the Holidays Parade; the half-marathon, the Downtown Street Fest and Kindness Campaign and July 4 fireworks.

The organization also disseminated information about downtown construction; outdoor dining policies and sound ordinances; and rules for selling alcohol. In the coming year, LDI plans to educate downtown business owners about the city’s Climate Action Plan, and continue to promote the arts and tourism efforts. The annual report showed downtown gained seven new businesses last year and 44 new jobs.

Council Member Evan Branning thanked LDI for “the breadth of what they are doing.”

“This investment of $90,000 is honestly less than we should be putting into LDI,” Branning said. “I think for every dollar we spend, we’re getting much more than that back as a community. I see LDI as a tremendous investment for all of us.”

In other action, the council said MP Avance Associates had completed the public improvements it was required to make when it received approval in 2020 to build 45 residential rental units for adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities at 4260 First Street. The agreement included a traffic signal and median, new sidewalks, curbs and gutters.

MidPen Housing spokeswoman Lyn Hikida said a grand opening was held in May and residents have moved in. The housing complex provides access to transit, medical appointments and jobs, as well as grocery stores, pharmacies, the library and shopping.

The council also approved a resolution to add Dublin and Alameda County to an agreement to help rebuild the Tri-Valley Haven shelter, which is in disrepair. The shelter at an undisclosed location in Livermore, currently is providing 16 beds on-site and has had to rent another facility to add 14 beds because of the shelter’s condition. Tri-Valley Haven assists victims of domestic violence, sexual assault and homelessness.

In April, Pleasanton allocated $250,000 and Livermore approved $484,000 in U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Community Development Block Grants for the project. The Alameda County Board of Supervisors authorized $2 million in June, and the Dublin City Council approved $240,205 on Sept. 5.

Tri-Valley Haven officials told The Independent recently that they had raised $4.5 million toward the new project, which is estimated to cost $6.5 million.

The resolution for the cities to work jointly on the project makes Livermore the lead agency on obtaining an environmental review for the project. The three cities will share the cost of the $20,000 report. Although located in Livermore, the shelter serves residents from the three cities.

Suspect Arrested in Death of Dismembered Woman

A Pleasanton man has been arrested on suspicion of murdering the woman he was living with and leaving her dismembered body wrapped in plastic along the Alameda shoreline.

According to Alameda Police Department (APD), the remains of Rachel Elizabeth Imani Buckner, 27 of Pleasanton, were found in July by a pedestrian walking along the trail near Bay Farm Bridge in Alameda. DNA evidence identified Buckner as the victim. Additional evidence helped detectives identify Joseph C. Roberts, 42, as the primary suspect.

“Since July, APD has worked tirelessly to identify the involved parties and understand the series of events that led to this death,” said APD officials. “We appreciate the community’s patience and the support from our law enforcement partners...”

Roberts was taken into custody on Wednesday, Sept. 6 by the U.S. Marshals Service with assistance from the Alameda and Pleasanton police departments. He was arraigned in Alameda County Superior Court on Friday, Sept. 8.

A joint investigation with Pleasanton police and the FBI will continue.

Anyone with information about the case is asked to contact the Alameda Police Department at 510-337-8402.

Seinfeld Alumnus Brings Down the House at Annual Bankhead Gala

By Kristin J. Bender

Emmy Award-winning actor Jason Alexander, better known as the hilarious but bumbling George Costanza from the famed sitcom “Seinfeld,” isn’t

The world knows Alexander as Jerry Seinfeld’s best buddy during the show’s 9-year run, but Alexander has also worked extensively as a writer, composer, director, producer and acting teacher. Earlier that the show includes a reference to the made-up term “shipooopi,” a word that the young Alexander found hilarious and enjoyed saying over and over again. In fact, it seemed as though Alexander enjoyed

Sounds like something from a “Seinfeld” episode. While the television character George Costanza may have fancied himself a debonair ladies’ man with endless self-confidence, Alexander has no problem poking fun at himself. “By the time I was 6 years old, I wanted to be a magician. I wanted to do close up stuff—cards and coins, but I had baby hands,” he told the audience holding up his tiny mitts. “I was devastated. I was crushed. I thought my life was over. I can’t be a rock and roll singer and I can’t be a magician.”

But he didn’t let his so-called baby hands, or his stocky frame stop him from moving forward. By the time he was a young teen, he was taking voice and dance lessons. “That wasn’t pretty, I was still 180 pounds,” he said. After high school, Alexander began studying theater at Boston University, but he dropped out a few years later to make his Broadway debut, performing in the Stephen Sondheim/George Furth musical “Merrily We Roll Along.” Alexander performed a song from the musical at the Bankhead and the audience loved it. But Alexander definitely saved the best for last. For the show’s finale, Alexander explained that, while he has been successful in many areas of his career, he has been passed by plenty of times for musical theater roles. He then pumped out a crowd rousing medley of songs from shows where he wasn’t given a part. The rendition of “Hamilton,” “Jesus Christ Superstar,” “Phantom of the Opera,” and many others brought the audience to their feet and capped off the evening.

Jason Alexander, 63, of “Seinfeld” fame, performed to a sold-out crowd last weekend at the Bankhead Theater in Livermore. The versatile performer along with the Livermore-Amador Symphony, helped raise $540,000 for Livermore Valley Arts. (Photo courtesy of Robert Suguitan) shy about reminding people that he’s an international comedy icon. But Alexander’s recent visit to Livermore highlighted lesser-known talents—singing and dancing. Alexander, 63, headlined a fundraising gala at the Bankhead Theater in Livermore last Saturday night, drawing thunderous laughter and a standing ovation for his whimsical salute to Broadway musicals. Alexander’s selections were led by the Livermore-Amador Symphony and together they helped raise more than $540,000 for Livermore Valley Arts, said Executive Director Chris Carter.

er this summer, he made his Broadway directing debut with Sandy Rustin’s “The Cottage.” On the stage last weekend in Livermore, Alexander showed off his dancing and singing chops by belting out songs from “Cats,” “Les Miserables,” Billy Joel’s “Scenes from an Italian Restaurant,” and many others. But he also let the audience in on his childhood in New Jersey and his rise to fame by interspersing the songs with funny and self-deprecating stories from his life. “I saw my first Broadway theater show at 5,” he told the audience, adding that the show was the “Music Man.” He recounted amusing himself by repeating the silly word on the Livermore stage before he jumped into another story. Alexander said that even from an early age he was mesmerized by the theater, but his fascination didn’t translate into dreams of making it as a Broadway star. “I never imagined myself on the stage,” he said. “The first thing I wanted to be was a rock and roll singer, but I was 5 feet tall, 180 pounds with braces, acne and the beginning of a bald spot,” he said. “My mom took me shopping in the husky department.” In fact, he said he was forced to wear corduroy pants that made a funny noise when he walked.

New Police Cameras a Double-Edged Sword

Video cameras in the city’s high-traffic intersections and areas leading to freeways can greatly assist Pleasanton’s police in tracking down crime suspects and solving cases.

California continues to rank as one of the most problematic states in the country for both organized-retail theft and catalytic-converter theft, with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce estimating some $19 billion lost in the state to retail crime in 2021 alone.

These crimes have hit the Bay Area particularly hard with Pleasanton Police reporting an uptick in retail thefts at Stoneridge Shopping Center and other prime shopping spots.

At the same time, the state’s police-staffing shortage, near its lowest patrol-officer-per-resident level in 30 years, has also affected Pleasanton, notably in its latest police-contract negotiations where the Pleasanton Police Officers’ Association named hiring difficulties as a major driver of its arguments for higher wages and more resources.

The ability of the cameras to immediately bring eyes on the scene, automatically generate video evidence and create investigative leads — all without requiring additional personnel — should be leveraged by the city to the fullest extent, as long as privacy concerns remain foremost in policy planning.

The city must understand the weight of the policies governing this technology.

Much of our digital lives already fuels artificial-intelligence training, with only varying degrees of disclosure. Facial recognition, vehicle detection and machine learning, applied to the large troves of data these cameras will generate, can tease out the patterns of our lives that we have not consented to share. Even with the best intentions, the new camera installations will take us one step closer to citywide surveillance of our private lives.

Public hearings must be allowed for any change to the use of the cameras or their data after the city adopts responsible limitations. Camera coverage should be restricted to where there is not a reasonable expectation of privacy, excluding areas such as schools and residential neighborhoods. And a thorough process for vetting third-party vendors should be publicly shared.

This is Pleasanton’s chance to responsibly adopt new camera technology for the benefit of the entire city.

In Memory of Livermore's Homeless Dead

Greg Scott, Livermore

Where are we in the cultural evolution of our community? Are we going to remember the homeless who died? I have been acquainted with some of the homeless who passed during the SARS-CoV-2 pandemic: Will, Jaime, Richard, Soledad, Paul, Jim, Chuck, and others.

Without Open Heart Kitchen (OHK), a number of us would not have survived. I recently attended a fundraiser for OHK at the regal Palm Event Center. In the presentations was a projected picture, taken from the north end of the Arroyo Plaza parking lot, with a split-rail fence in the foreground, a field with trees behind that, and the transportation artery of Interstate 580 in the background. What I could see that most of the audience couldn't were the swept and vanquished encampments of homeless ghosts, the diaspora of the homeless who used to stay there, and the homeless who were there and have since died. The picture seemed sanitized. Viewing the peopleless image, I felt anger, rage, and tears unstopably upwelling within me.

I suppose you don't want to show the reality of homelessness at a fundraising event. Money is necessary; however, what we do is use money as a prophylactic instead of truly understanding the complexity, getting our hands "dirty" with the ugliness, and actually feeling the trauma of homelessness. We are not going to fundamentally solve homelessness, or the housing crisis, on the pathway we are on. The bromides of money and the current building of the homeless-industrial-complex isn't going to do it.

The present socioeconomic and political structures are countervailing to the shelter and support solutions. We need to honestly and astutely address the homeless problem. We cannot just throw gobs of money at it and expect miraculous results.

Picture yourself without a roof, without a bed, and without a private bathroom. Try to comprehend what it is like trying to get a dying homeless person off the ground. What can we learn from homeless ghosts?

If you have any interest or need to understand what I am talking about, please read Tracy Kidder's book, "Rough Sleepers: Dr. Jim O'Connell's Urgent Mission to Bring Healing to Homeless People," 2023. I was grateful for the chapter "Death by Housing." At least housed Jim and Chuck didn't die on the street, yes; however, they still died having spent far too much time homeless. They did not receive the sustained support that we needed to provide.

Dublin's Mayor Tries to Pull a Fast One on Voters
Mike Grant, Dublin

The mayor and council are wanting longer term limits because we the voters are not smart, per Michael McCorriston. He wrote we could be overloading voters with a complicated ballot. Wow, Dublin Citizens, It's very clear the Vice Mayor thinks we are not very sharp. The ballot could read like this, "Do you want to extend the term of the Mayor or Council, YES or NO." That's pretty simple language.

So let's talk about what we get from a mayor with a longer term – more building and congestion on Dublin Blvd. Mayor Melissa ran for council in 2016 on a platform of less congestion on Dublin roads and cut building in Dublin. Well, that campaign promise went flat! Under her watch, we have had the biggest boom in houses in the last 4 years and put more cars on the streets in Dublin. Council member Josey also ran on the same platform in 2018 with almost the same theme. She has voted with the mayor on almost every development that the builders have put forward to the city staff.

The entire mayor and council talk about how they watch out for the citizens and use such words as fiscal stewards of our money. So, let's talk about how this council, mayor and city manager save us money.

Just recently a group of 6 people from our city went on a so-called business trip to Ireland to our sister city with the Mayor, Vice Mayor and 2 out of 3 city council members – Council member Jean Josey and Council member Kashef Qaadri. The other 2 members were the City Manager Linda Smith and Hazel Wetherford, the Economic Development Director. (That's 6 people) Altogether, they spent 216 hours away from Dublin in Ireland and only attended 6.5 hours in meetings. I guess Zoom is just out of the question. :)

The Mayor took her entire family (4) and City council member Kashef Qaadri took his wife. Hazel Wetherford, the economic director, took her spouse.

All expenses in this little boondoggle cost the city $18,000 dollars and to date the following members have failed to produce their plane tickets – Mayor Melissa Hernandez, Vice Mayor Michael McCorriston and Council Member Kashef Qaadri.

This is why we need term limits to stay the same, so we don't fund vacations!

Latinx/Hispanic Heritage Month In Livermore
Trish Munro, Livermore

Latinx/Hispanic Heritage Month begins this Friday, Sept. 15. Throughout the month, the Livermore Library has a wide variety of programs so that all residents of Livermore can celebrate the rich histories and cultures of Latinx/Hispanic Americans. Here are a few of the upcoming events:

Outdoor movie night: The month kicks off at the Rincon Library on Friday, Sept. 15 at 6:30 p.m. for activities, followed by the movie, Selenia, a musical biography of the music star Selenia Quintanilla-Perez. Popcorn will be provided, bring your own picnic supper!

Nazca Lines Craft: On Tuesday, Sept. 19 at 4 p.m., the Springtown Library will host a program on the Nazca Lines. Peru is famous for its Nazca Lines, created 2000 years ago in Peru's Nazca Desert. These are designs—geoglyphs—made through moving dirt and pebbles to expose different colors and create pictures. The craft activity gives participants (age 5 and up) the opportunity to create their own geoglyphs.

Flying Free with Cecilia Aragon: On Thursday, Sept. 21 at 3 p.m. in the Civic Center Library's Storytime Room, Librarian Jackie will interview the multi-talented Dr. Cecelia Aragon. Professor Aragon's research on human-centered data science sits at the intersection of human-computer interaction and artificial intelligence. She is the co-founder of Latinas in Computing, an author, and a pilot. Her memoir, Flying Free: My Victory Over Fear to Become the First Latina Pilot on the US Aerobatic Team, will be available at the event.

Guatemalan Kite Craft: On Friday, Sept. 22 at 3 p.m., the Rincon Library will host a program on Guatemala's Amazing Kite Festival. According to ancient Guatemalan tradition, every All-Saints' Day, the souls of loved ones can visit family members. Magnificent kites help these spirits find their people. At this program, attendees aged five and up can make their own mini version of these unique round kites.

Tradición Peruana, Cultural Center: On Saturday, Sept. 23 at 12:30 p.m., in front of the Civic Center Library, everyone can enjoy Peruvian dance and music by Tradición Peruana, Cultural Center, while learning about the Peruvian art, culture, and the traditions of the diverse Indigenous and Afro-Peruvian communities.

Benjamin Franklin, Part Two
Jan Brovont, Livermore

He was the first president of the Academy and College of Philadelphia, which opened in 1751, later becoming the University of Pennsylvania. Franklin became a national hero in America as an agent for several colonies when he spearheaded an effort in London to have the Parliament of Great Britain repeal the unpopular Stamp Act. An accomplished diplomat, he was widely admired among the French as American minister to Paris and was a major figure in the development of positive Franco-American relations. His efforts proved vital for the American Revolution in securing French aid.

He was promoted to deputy postmaster-general for the British colonies on August 10, 1753, having been Philadelphia postmaster for many years. He was active in community affairs and colonial and state politics, as well as national and international affairs. From 1785 to 1788, he served as governor of Pennsylvania. He initially owned and dealt in slaves but, by the late 1750s, he began arguing against slavery, became an abolitionist, and promoted education and the integration of African Americans into U.S. society.

His life and legacy of scientific and political achievement, and his status as one of America's most influential Founding Fathers, have seen Franklin honored more than two centuries after his death on the $100 bill, warships, and the names of many towns, counties, educational institutions, and corporations, as well as numerous cultural references and with a portrait in the Oval Office. Over his lifetime, Franklin wrote or received more than 30,000 letters and other documents, which since the 1950s, have been collected in The Papers of Benjamin Franklin, published by both the American Philosophical Society and Yale University.

Insurance Agency Receives Award for Volunteerism

The Gene Morgan Insurance Agency in Livermore has received a Make More Happen Award from two nationwide insurance companies, Safeco and Liberty Mutual, for its volunteer efforts on behalf of Reins in Motion.

The award includes a $5,000 donation to Reins in Motion, a Livermore-based nonprofit that provides equine therapy for children and adults. That donation will be doubled if the agency receives at least 500 online votes and comments at agentgiving.com/Gene-Morgan-Insurance.

Reins in Motion said the funds would help with boarding and farrier and veterinarian services for its horses, and safety equipment.

“Working with Reins in Motion has provided us the opportunity to bring the world of children and animals together and we strongly believe in the impact horses can bring about in the lives of people,” said Stacie Logan, an agent and marketing representative with Gene Morgan Insurance. “We are grateful to Liberty Mutual and Safeco for providing much-needed funds to continue their impactful work and thrilled at the opportunity to double the donation just by calling on the community to show their support.”

Volunteers from Gene Morgan Insurance help Reins in Motion participants develop physical strength, along with motor skills and verbal skills, during the therapy sessions. They also assist in the annual Lil’ Parners Rodeo, which pairs kids with special needs with real cowboys and cowgirls in simulated rodeo activities.

Liberty Mutual and Safeco will recognize 37 independent insurance agencies for their volunteerism this year, donating up to $370,000 to the nonprofits they support.

Church Holds Ribbon Cutting for New Families Building

The nondenominational Valley Community Church in Pleasanton held a ribbon-cutting ceremony earlier this month for its new 4,800 square-foot Families Building.

The church, 4455 Del Valle Parkway, said the addition would primarily serve its Kids and Disability Ministry and includes rooms designed especially for students with disabilities and special needs.

“With our new classroom, we can welcome someone with disabilities of any age and build friendships while playing and learning,” said Disability Ministry director Lilian Jewell. “It is our hope that someone with autism, sensory-processing disorders, cerebral palsy, or another special need, will walk into this space and see it is made for them and their families to flourish.”

The expansion will also provide more space for the church’s Shining Light pre-school program and includes a playground for toddlers, preschoolers, and elementary students adjacent to the church’s outdoor Gathering Place.

USING HOME EQUITY as RETIREMENT ASSET

REVERSE MORTGAGE BASICS

When retirement approaches many turn to savings, investments, and Social Security for financial planning, but there's another source that is often over-looked, a reverse mortgage. Most reverse mortgages are government insured Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (also known as HECMs). Available exclusively to those aged 62 and older, a reverse mortgage could help you and your family live comfortably, while being financially prepared for the future. Another benefit of these types of mortgages is that the funds are tax-free. Also, as long as the terms of the loans are met, a reverse mortgage line of credit cannot be frozen, reduced, or revoked by the lender. The unused line of credit grows over time, giving you more available funds. Contact me today and together we can go over the qualification guidelines step by step. Additionally, I will provide you with a quote that's tailored to your unique situation with no cost or obligation!

to cats and kittens who were clean with clipped nails, healthy, structurally sound, had well-kept teeth, and were vaccinated, and presented well.

Meserve said personality also plays a role in the judging procedure, if all other aspects are equal.

“A good judge will look like they are playing with the cat,” he noted.

Meserve said that it takes a certain type of cat personality to be willing to be in a show, but you never know how your cat will react until you try it.

In addition to the cats showing off on the catwalk, there were a wide variety of vendors at the event, including representatives talking about the history of various cat breeds. Many vendors donate their proceeds to help cat organizations.

Last November, California voters upheld the state law prohibiting retailers from selling most flavored tobacco and vape products, including flavored e-cigarettes and menthol cigarettes, as well as tobacco product flavor enhancers.

The company’s Apollo E-cigs website says it is down for maintenance and a phone number for the company was not available.

On the Apollo Future Technology’s LinkedIn page, the company says “We are not your average vaping company. Apollo Future Technology, better known as Apollo E-Cigs, is a privately-owned and globally operating company. Since we were founded in 2010, we’ve worked to bring new ideas to life through innovation and creativity. We pride ourselves in providing quality products and customer service worthy of notoriety.”

A preliminary injunction hearing is set for Sept. 21.

Lab Physicists Named SPIE Senior Members

Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory’s (LLNL) Wren Carr and Peter DeVore have been elected as senior members of SPIE, (Society of Photo-Optical Instrumentation Engineers).

SPIE, the international society for optics and yielded more than 2,700 citations over the years. In 2017, he was a key contributor for an R&D100 award finalist for the laser damage-resistant Anti-Reflection Grating Debris Shield (ARGDS).

Throughout his career, Carr has regularly mentored the RF Photonics Group, he guides the technical direction of a portfolio of technologies bridging the gap between high-speed electronics and optical fiber/waveguide systems. DeVore also led the development of the modulator chassis at the heart of the system with unprecedented precision, stability and repeatability.

DeVore has many peer-reviewed publications and conferences and patents (seven issued, nine pending). He is active at attending conferences, delivering talks, refereeing papers and mentoring interns and junior engineers. His long history with SPIE includes founding a SPIE student chapter at UCLA and serving as its vice president and then president, receiving a SPIE Photonics Europe Travel Grant and organizing outreach events to inspire younger students in photonics.

“SPIE provides an invaluable community for optics professionals to network and share information, including their journals, conferences, as well as support for student chapters and outreach programs. My time as a member of SPIE has helped me grow my network, gain invaluable experiences, and have a broader understanding of the greater optics community,” he said.

photonics, bestows the senior member designation on individuals who have distinguished themselves through their professional experience and their active involvement within both the optics community and SPIE. Carr and DeVore are among 89 new senior members of the society this year.

Wren Carr

Carr is the science and technology group leader for National Ignition Facility (NIF) laser-induced damage and mitigation science.

“I feel honored to be recognized by SPIE for my leadership role in the SPIE Laser-Induced Damage Symposium, my technical contributions to the field of laser-induced damage and my fusion-enabling work on NIF,” he said. “It has been among the greatest pleasures of my life to work with, learn from and occasionally teach the many talented people in the laser-induced damage community both here at LLNL and those I have met through SPIE.”

Carr has been at LLNL for nearly 25 years, starting as a graduate student in the University of California, Davis applied physics program. Early in his career, he published several seminal papers on laser-induced damage, including 2003 and 2004 Physical Review Letters publications that have each been cited more than 300 times.

As his career progressed into technical leadership, he continued his prolific research and development. His 125 publications have students. Seven student interns he has mentored have become full-time staff at LLNL. He also has been a regular contributor to SPIE: in 2015, he was honored as the plenary speaker for the SPIE Pacific Rim Damage Symposium. Furthermore, he has served as session chair since 2012 and has co-chaired the SPIE Laser-Induced Damage Symposium since 2018. He is this year’s organizing host for SPIE Laser-Induced Damage Symposium tours of NIF.

Peter DeVore

DeVore is the chief scientist for the RF Photonics group.

“I am very grateful to receive this award,” he said. “It is truly evidence of the diligent effort of colleagues, mentors, and institutions that have helped me grow professionally and personally. My advisor and colleagues from graduate school, the LLNL RF Photonics group, and other colleagues at LLNL have been key sources of learning and experience.”

DeVore began his career with LLNL in 2014. A strong technical contributor with many innovations, as well as a successful leader, his efforts have impacted two key technology areas: RF photonics for the generation and detection of high-fidelity signals with high dynamic range, as well as next generation high-speed, high-fidelity pulse shaping for controlling and optimizing laser-based fusion reactions.

Alameda County to Receive $7.5 Million as Kaiser Settles Hazardous Waste Lawsuit

Alameda County will receive $7.5 million as its share of a $47 million settlement with Kaiser Foundation Hospitals and the Kaiser Foundation Health Plan over allegations that Kaiser improperly disposed of hazardous, medical, and universal wastes and patients’ private health information.

Alameda County District Attorney Pamela Y. Price announced the settlement this week.

Alameda County, the California Attorney General’s Office, and five other counties sued Kaiser, based in Oakland, after undercover inspections of dumpsters at 16 of the company’s facilities dating back to 2015.

Investigators reported finding hundreds of hazardous items, including aerosols, cleaners, batteries, e-waste, syringes, medical tubing with body fluids and medications. The inspections also revealed 10,000 paper records containing the information of more than 7,700 patients.

“This historic settlement marks a significant milestone in our ongoing efforts to protect our environment and uphold the law,” Price said. “We are committed to ensuring that such violations do not occur again, and the funds allocated to our county will further strengthen our efforts.”

The settlement, believed to be the largest judgment for illegal dumping of hazardous waste in California history, includes civil penalties totaling $37.5 million, $4.8 in attorney fees and other costs, and an agreement that Kaiser will invest an additional $4.9 million in Supplemental Environmental Projects throughout the state.

Alameda County and the state will both receive in excess of $7.5 million, with the other five counties each receiving a little over $6 million.

The settlement also includes a permanent injunction obligating Kaiser Permanente, which operates the hospitals and healthcare plan, to follow all California laws regulating hazardous, medical, and universal wastes and protecting patients’ private medical information. Kaiser also must retain an independent third party to perform waste audits over the next five years.

OBITUARIES

Barbara Jean Di Grazia
April 30, 1934 – Sept. 10, 2023

Daughter of the late Mario Valli of Ferno, Italy and San Francisco and Rose (Adiego) Valli of Vacaville and San Francisco. Loving wife of 62 years of the late Herbert Di Grazia, beloved mother of Karen (née Di Grazia) and Leonard Rossi of Castro Valley, and Donna Di Grazia of Claremont, California. Adored grandmother of Janet Rossi of Washington, D.C. and her fiancé, Ray Hieronimus of Maryland, and step-great-grandmother of Aiden Hieronimus. Predeceased by her brother and sister-in-law, Richard and Lillian (Biaocchi) Valli.

A proud graduate of Galileo High School in San Francisco, and an active member of St. Michael Catholic School and Church in Livermore for 67 years, Barbara served others in a wide variety of capacities there, including as room mother, yard duty, 4th grade history teacher, and head of the Parent-Teacher Group when her daughters were in school. She also served on a host of committees in the parish and was a member of various groups including the Ladies Aid Society and the Altar Society.

Barbara and Herb were a team, and she especially shared his love of Yosemite and music. Over the years she attended countless choral and band concerts and sports team games (especially volleyball and tennis) in which someone in the family was involved, beaming with pride at hearing Karen sing, seeing Leonard or Donna conduct, or rooting Janet on playing volleyball. And everyone who knew her knew she absolutely loved flowers—any kind and in any state—and there wasn’t one that she couldn’t rehabilitate or nurse along well past its prime. She was an avid fan of the San Francisco Giants, the San Francisco 49ers, and the Golden State Warriors, and in her older age her daily schedule often revolved around watching their games. Most of all, she deeply loved her family and did things all the time to remind them that love is the most important gift of all.

The family wishes to give special thanks to her recent caregivers and home health nurse for their wonderful and loving care, especially Ruby Fulgueras and Grace Shin, to the doctors and nurses of Kaiser Hospital Oakland’s Emergency Room and Intensive Care Unit, to the kind residents and staff of Baywood Court in Castro Valley, and to her beloved and loyal neighbors on Scott Street in Livermore.

Family and friends are invited to visitation and recitation of the rosary at 10 a.m., followed by Mass of Christian Burial at 11 a.m., on Saturday, Sept. 16, 2023, at Transfiguration Catholic Church, 4008 East Castro Valley Blvd., Castro Valley.

Donations may be made to Yosemite Conservancy, the St. Vincent de Paul Society (through Transfiguration Church), the Dominican Sisters of San Rafael, or a charity of one’s choice.

CELEBRATION OF LIFE

Jo Rykken Johnson

Born at home, ahead of her time, during a snowstorm in the small Minnesota town of Spicer to EJ and Irene Rykken in February 1936. Joie was hurriedly baptized with the name Elaine, but her middle name Joanne was far more fitting, as she proved bold and brave, charismatic and clever, loyal and loving - just like Jo from Little Women, one of her favorite books.

Avid reader and storyteller, Joie grew up alongside her best friend and sister Bobbie (Robinette) on what they would both say was the prettiest of all of the 10,000 Minnesota lakes. The Rykken girls benefited from an idyllic childhood from the mid 30’s to the mid 50’s. Raised by kind, loving, generous parents with plenty of family nearby in a tightly woven community built around the lake.

She attended St. Olaf College, majoring in English, and also studied at the University of Oslo in Norway. It was at St. Olaf that she met Quintin (QJ) - a student a year ahead of her, majoring in chemistry. They married in Spicer on a cold winter day a few days before Christmas in 1957. She graduated early to join QJ in Berkeley where he was getting his PhD. She began teaching junior high school. They settled in Livermore in the late 50’s, and Jo quickly set about knitting together the sort of small-town fabric she grew up with for the two of them.

She loved making fast friends of strangers, joining book clubs, serving on committees designed to improve the lives of others, finding a community through church and neighbors, joining clubs and quickly raising her hand for volunteer opportunities. Jo was a master teacher, puppeteer, business owner, gardener, caretaker, mother, and grandmother. Jo enjoyed swimming, sailing, camping, backpacking, traveling, cooking, baking, and learning about the lives of others.

When her youngest started school, she too started school again for her K-12 credential. She taught at Portola, Maitland Henry, and Rancho Las Positas. For 26 years, she thoroughly enjoyed teaching so many 2nd, 3rd, and 4th graders who often called her JJ. She retired early to help out with the scientific software business started by Quintin after he also retired early from the Lab – but she always missed her kids.

Fiercely proud of her own Norwegian heritage, champion of women’s rights, and equality for all.

She was preceded in death by Quintin, her husband of 61 years, her parents, multiple cousins, aunts, uncles, and nearly all brother and sister in laws, as well as her own beloved sister.

Effervescent and filled with ideas, eager to play, quick to smile, generous with her laughter, and always finding the good even in a bad situation. She will continue to be missed by her kids and their spouses Kaj Johnson (Karen), Maj Cole (Scott) and their son Bo who was lucky enough to call her both a grandmother and neighbor as well as the Norwegian term for mother’s mother – Mormor.

A celebration of life will be held at her church of more than 60 years - Holy Cross Lutheran in Livermore - on Friday, Sept. 22, at 1p.m. with a reception to follow.

Donations in her name may be made to Open Heart Kitchen.

DEVELOPMENT

ment is feasible, even with your current inclusionary requirements,” said Kanat. “Multi-family development is barely feasible, and with inclusionary (requirements), you have even more of a challenge.”

But resident Shirley Lewandowski cited low housing-construction numbers in the very-low-income category during the 2015-23 housing cycle as reason to instead increase the inclusionary requirement to 15%, and to raise or do away with in-lieu fees.

“Candidates who ran, or are currently running, their campaigns on a platform that they are for affordable housing are misleading the public and their constituents,” said Lewandowski. “Their definition of affordable is not real.”

In response, City Manager Linda Smith pointed to 600 new affordable units in development and some 1,000 units across three existing apartment buildings that the city has reinstituted as low-, moderate-, and middle-income housing.

“This city council has done an extraordinary amount of work in affordable housing,” said Smith.

Kanat also presented a separate study estimating the number of workers generated by new, non-residential construction and the subsequent commercial-linkage fees developers should be asked to pay to support housing for those workers.

At $1.35 per square foot for retail space, Dublin’s current commercial-linkage fees trail considerably behind its neighbors. Pleasanton, for example, charges $5.21 per square foot and Livermore $2.38. Dublin’s fee, along with similar discounts for lodging, office and industrial spaces, helps promote commercial development in the city, but potentially undersells the spaces.

While the council agreed that an update was overdue, they took care to consider Dublin’s development goals against any money left on the table from undervalued fees.

“The overall goal is we want to attract the right businesses to Dublin,” said Councilmember Sherry Hu.

Mayor Melissa Hernandez, who pointed to Dublin’s vigorous development activity over the past decade, added, “There are cities that have a higher fee, but they don’t build. I think this is something we definitely have to digest and really think about and understand what the other cities have done and why they’ve done it.”

And Vice Mayor Michael McCorriston emphasized the ongoing opportunity costs of not updating the fees.

“We could’ve adjusted those fees sooner and we could’ve had a lot more money dedicated to some of these projects,” he said. “I think we need to get moving on this.”

Kanat plans to return to the council with further analysis by the end of October, with city council adoption targeted for December.

project, a mix of residential and commercial space and parks on 192 acres east of Fallon Road, along the future Dublin Boulevard extension.

It will be the western most new development along the extension and will be followed by Jordan Ranch and Francis Ranch developments.

The planned affordable-housing units were part of the 1994 Eastern Dublin Specific Plan, which required 2.5 acres of public/semi-public land within the GH PacVest property.

The specific plan’s affordable-housing’s public/semi-public land [?] requirement, however, was satisfied by the Cottonwood Creek School when it opened in 2018, according to the staff report.

GH PacVest therefore asked to eliminate the affordable housing requirement from the project.

The requirement was not for low-income housing, but for public/semi-public use on the PacVest property, which the school qualifies for. There are no plans for housing on the school site.

The residential units surrounding the 2.5-acre parcel can now expand into the empty space.

Bay West Development developer Jason Laub, representing GH PacVest, referred to his lower-density residential units in his development proposal as the “financial driver for the project” and described repurposing the parcel as the difference between dense, four-story apartment buildings versus more dispersed, three-story townhomes.

Dublin’s 2023-2031 Housing Element included GH PacVest’s 74 lower-income units in its inventory of opportunity sites. But by eliminating the public/semi-public site, the proposal will remove these units from its plans and the city’s inventory.

To maintain its housing quota, the city has identified the Transit Center site as able to provide surplus units to make up for those lost to the GH PacVest elimination.

And as part of the deal, GH PacVest will dedicate 45 acres of land in the northern half of the property for a future, low-maintenance nature park that will include hiking and walking trails. The dedication will help address the city’s parkland deficit of 50 acres.

“We have a lot of beautiful parks developed here, but we don’t really have a lot of nature parks here, so I think we really need that,” said Councilmember Sherry Hu.

HOUSING

designated nearly 9.5 acres of land on Boulder Street for potential housing after Kaiser Permanente withdrew a proposal to develop housing on its Stoneridge Shopping Mall property. The move added the industrial parcels to the city’s Housing Element plan and eliminated a Kaiser Permanente parcel at 5600 Stoneridge Mall as a residential development.

Pleasanton’s Housing Element was finally approved late last month.

“Housing is a key priority in Pleasanton, and a certified Housing Element update demonstrates our continued commitment to this priority,” Pleasanton Mayor Karla Brown said in a statement. “An outstanding quality of life for our city is closely connected to quality housing, and this update is an important step to keeping Pleasanton a desirable place to live and work for everyone.”

The California Association of Bay Area Governments Regional Housing Needs Allocation found that Northern California must build more than 41,000 housing units over the next eight years to deal with the housing crisis.

Pleasanton alone must build at least 5,900 units, including more than 2,700 for lower income households.

While cities are at the will of developers, they can face penalties if they fail to meet their housing share.

Now that Pleasanton’s “in compliance” with the state, developers can no longer attempt to take advantage of noncompliance and use the so-called Builder’s Remedy law. That’s a rarely used rule that allows developers to apply to build housing projects while taking away local authority to hold them accountable for city zoning and design standards.

Pleasanton wasn’t the only Tri-Valley city that had issues providing a proper Housing Element to the state.

Dublin remains without a state certified Housing Element, although Dublin spokeswoman Shari Jackman said its plan was submitted to the state a few weeks ago. The state has 60 days to review Dublin’s housing plans.

Livermore’s Housing Element was certified in March.

recordings will be part of the public record, but will only be viewed by investigators if a crime has been reported. Recordings will be automatically deleted after 30 days if they are not manually flagged as potential evidence.

Councilmember Valerie Arkin said the cameras “will not pick up any area where there’s a reasonable expectation of privacy.”

To pay for the cameras, the police department applied for a $3.1 million grant from the California Board of State and Community Corrections. The three-year grant would fund the cameras and additional police technology, such as a computer-aided dispatch system.

Schlehuber said the department will pursue the camera systems even if the grant money falls through by using money in the city’s budget.

Schlehuber sees the new cameras as a “multiplier of force” that will allow police to do more without adding additional officers.

Dublin’s Rishi Saindane Achieves Eagle Badge

Rishi Saindane, a member of BSA Troop 904 in Dublin, has been awarded the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest rank in Scouting.

Rishi Saindane

Saindane, the son of Kiran and Deepali Saindane of Dublin, received his Eagle badge at a Court of Honor in August.

To achieve the rank of Eagle, a Scout must earn at least 21 merit badges and complete a service project benefiting a religious institution, school, or community group.

For his project, Saindane, a junior at Dublin High School led a team of volunteers in building two redwood picnic tables at Sycamore Grove Regional Park in Livermore to replace old PVC-pipe benches that were no longer usable.

In addition to Scouting, Saindane is a member of the DECA program at Dublin High School and has wrestled competitively for seven years. He also received a Presidential Volunteer Service Award.

Troop 904 is sponsored by John Knox Presbyterian Church in Dublin.

Tough Loss for Foothill Football Team

By Phil Jensen

A football game does not get much more heartbreaking than what occurred to the Foothill High School squad on Friday night.

The Falcons took the lead two separate times in the final 5 minutes, 38 seconds of their nonleague game against visiting American catch by O’Donoghue on the run in the end zone made the score 27-24. Fields’ successful PAT kick gave Foothill a 28-24 lead and forced American Canyon to have to score a touchdown to win.

O’Donoghue finished the game with a team-high five catches for 81 yards and two touchdowns. Armendariz, a 5-foot-10 sophomore, rushed for a game-high 91 yards on eight carries (all in

“Obviously that last play ... it was bad luck,” said Foothill coach Greg Haubner. “It’s very disheartening that we’re very close to having success, it’s right there, and we just don’t get it. ... I loved our fight.”

Foothill (0-2) took its first lead of the second half with 5:38 left in the game. Quarterback Erik Olsen found a wide-open Michael O’Donoghue for a 29-yard touchdown pass on a fourth-and-10 play, and the point-after-touchdown kick by Matthew Fields gave the Falcons a 21-17 advantage.

American Canyon (2-1) answered four plays later with a 78-yard scoring pass from Mason Harris to Cole Gholar. The PAT by Raj Shergill lifted the Wolves into a 24-21 lead with four minutes remaining.

After a pair of three-and-outs, Foothill had one last chance at taking the lead again. With 57 seconds remaining, the Falcons got the ball on their 9-yard-line. After scrambling for 21 yards and completing a 12-yard pass to Andre Armendariz, Olsen connected again with Armendariz on a 55-yard pass with 33 seconds to go.

The two teams traded touchdowns in the first quarter. Foothill took a 7-0 lead on its opening possession. Jake Patterson ended the 55-yard drive with a four-yard touchdown run.

American Canyon scored later in the quarter, then took a 14-7 lead into halftime after a 71-yard scoring drive in the second quarter.

Foothill tied the score at 14 on its opening drive of the second half. The Falcons took the ball 58 yards, capping the drive with an 11-yard touchdown pass from Olsen to Nathan Boden-

Defensively, Hunter Mutzl and Patterson were among the Foothill players who had sacks, and the Falcons had a great stand early in the fourth quarter. American Canyon had the ball on the Foothill 8 in a first-and-goal situation but couldn’t score a touchdown and had to settle for a field goal.

Foothill travels to El Cerrito (3-0) for a 7 p.m. game this Friday.

Animal Welfare Group, Paws in Need, Launches New Fundraising Campaign

Paws In Need (PIN), a Tri-Valley-based nonprofit animal welfare organization, has launched a campaign to raise $30,000 by the end of the year.

PIN helps fund spay and neuter programs for dogs and cats and provides assistance to pet owners who are unable to afford the cost of urgent veterinarian medical procedures. PIN volunteers also help with trap-neuter-and-release programs for feral cats.

PIN said its programs help prevent unnecessary suffering, illness, surrender, and euthanasia of pets and free-roaming cats. The organization is asking supporters to consider donating $10 for each of the group’s 10 years of serving the community.

“Everyone within the community benefits from our programs” said PIN cofounder and president Lisa Williams, “not just pet owners, but also the surrounding local businesses, industrial parks, ranches, vineyards, homeless populations, and local animal control agencies.”

Donations can be mailed to Paws In Need, P.O. Box 3436, San Ramon, California, 94583. For more information, go to paws-in-need.org.

Both workshops will run from 1 – 4 p.m.

Laptop computers will be available for use, but participants should bring their own USB drives to save family information.

The workshops are part of the Livermore Public Library’s participation in Tri-Valley Heritage Happening.

Dublin Launches Volunteer Program to Keep Sidewalks, Trails Clean

Dublin is recruiting volunteers for its new People of the Parks (P.O.P.) program, designed to help keep the city’s sidewalks, parks, and trails clean and green.

Individual and family P.O.P. volunteers can win prizes in monthly drawings by tracking their activities. Prizes will include program-branded items, gift cards to local businesses, free or reduced-price passes to The Wave waterpark and entry to other city programs, such as the Shamrock 5K. Business and other organizations can also sign up to “adopt” specific parks or trails. Businesses and groups must commit to a year-long effort of at least 16 hours per month and will receive onsite recognition. For more information, go to dublin.ca.gov/POP.
