

Education Guide

American Funeral Director believes that developing the next generation of funeral directors is essential to adding real, lasting, and sustained value to the profession. To ensure the vitality and compassion of the industry, a strong emphasis must be placed on education, mentorship, and professional growth. Mortuary schools play a critical role in this process, providing students not only with technical knowledge and practical skills but also with a deep understanding of the emotional, cultural, and ethical dimensions of their work.

By investing in education and leadership development today, the profession ensures that tomorrow's funeral directors will continue to uphold its values, meet new challenges with empathy and innovation, and preserve the integrity of the calling.

Eastwick College HACKENSACK FUNERAL SERVICE

Eastwick College's Associate in Applied Science (A.A.S.) in Funeral Service prepares students for their career as a Funeral Director. The curriculum combines science, business, and counseling, covering topics like embalming techniques, restorative art, funeral law, funeral arrangements, pre-need, and funeral home management. Students gain hands-on experience through field experience and lab work, and the program is accredited by the American Board of Funeral Service Education (ABFSE). This degree not only prepares graduates with technical skills but also emphasizes compassion and ethics, qualities vital to supporting families during times of loss.

- Offered at our Hackensack Campus
- Evening courses offered in 12 week terms
