Easter eggs delivered to your doorstep

KEARNEY — At a time when getting together with a group of strangers to hunt Easter eggs might seem challenging, the Kearney Noon Rotary club can bring some of the joy of an Easter egg hunt to Kearney families.

“We’ll show up at peoples’ houses and we will hide candy-filled eggs in their yards,” said Sarah Cathcart, president of Kearney Noon Rotary. “And we’ll leave a little basket, with the name of a child, sitting on the porch. Kids can then go and gather the eggs in the yard.”

With a motto of “Service Above Self,” Rotary clubs often look for ways to spread joy when serving communities.

“Nothing is better than bringing joy to kids and families,” Cathcart said. “We thought this would be a great way to serve the community and follow social distancing — and just spread some joy.”

Members of Kearney Noon Rotary currently are taking reservations for the project they call “Egg My Yard.” The baskets will be delivered April 1-3 in the Kearney area. The cost is $30 for one basket with 24 candy-filled eggs. Additional baskets delivered to the same address are $20 each.

To set up delivery, call 308-440-6226.

“We have kids as neighbors and one year, when we had a bunch of snow, my children and I dressed up,” she said. “I was the Easter Bunny, my daughter was a flamingo and my son was a Pac-Man ghost. We went out and scooped all the sidewalks while dressed up. Just seeing the kids’ eyes, it was all worth it. And it’s always worth it to be silly.”

Proceeds from “Egg My Yard” helps fund Rotary International projects, both locally and throughout the world.

'The Blacklist' back on the big screen

By RICK BROWN
Yard Light Media

KEARNEY — It's like a family gathering.

"'The Blacklist' is an intriguing show," said Bryce Jensen, executive director of The World Theatre. "People can just jump in at any time and watch. There's a thread that follows the overall arc of the show but each episode always has a sub story or maybe there's Blacklister in there that can pull you in."

And it helps that Kearney native Jon Bokenkamp created NBC's "The Blacklist" almost seven years ago.

"And here at The World, we have that local attachment," Jensen said. "And also we've been watching it for years and the preview parties have become a great community event. It's like a little family — a lot of the same people come for each party. And it's almost the same volunteers, too. It feels warm and exciting and it's a cool thing."

The World Theatre will continue presenting viewing parties for NBC's "The Blacklist" on Thursdays through April 15. Doors open at 6 p.m. and the viewing begins at 7 p.m. Admission to the viewings is by donation.

Viewing parties for NBC's "The Blacklist" continue on Thursdays through April 15 at The World Theatre. "This is a fundraiser for The World and people throw whatever they want in the bucket at the door," said Bryce Jensen, executive director of the theater. "Sometimes it will trump what we would normally make in a weekend with a movie." Admission is by donation.

"It helps our theater immensely," Jensen said. "This is a fundraiser for The World and people throw whatever they want in the bucket at the door. Sometimes it will trump what we would normally make in a weekend with a movie. Those funds are really important to us."

He understands the draw of watching a program like "The Blacklist."

"There are lots of great shows out there, but it can be hard to find a good one you really like," Jensen said. "When you do find one that you want to consume or follow, it's fun to watch it."

"The Blacklist" premiered in 2013 and follows Raymond "Red" Reddington, played by James Spader. A former U.S. Naval officer who turned to crime, Red created a list of the world's most dangerous criminals. He cooperates with the FBI on two conditions: First, he receives immunity from prosecution and, second, he can work exclusively with Elizabeth Keen, a rookie profiler played by Megan Boone.

The ninth season of The Blacklist received approval from NBC in January.

"We showed the 10th show in the eighth season," Jensen said. "It airs on Friday nights and we get it a day early on Thursday. That's cool, although it sometimes takes a little finagling. It's kinda neat because I get to email a lot of the people in the credits. I'll contact them and say, 'Hey, I need a copy of the show.'"

Astute viewers of "The Blacklist" often find subtle references to Kearney — and references to residents of central Nebraska — in the scripts.

"Last week Red used an alias of 'Steve Holman' who lives in Kearney and is a friend of Jon Bokenkamp," Jensen said. "He works things in there quite often. You've got to keep your ears tuned because he doesn't tell us that stuff ahead of time."

Following each viewing, Jensen tries to arrange a talk-back session with Bokenkamp or someone associated with "The Blacklist." That added benefit often gives viewers a deeper understanding of the show and what it takes to produce it.

Rowe Sanctuary's virtual crane tours bring migration to you

By RICK BROWN
Yard Light Media

GIBBON — Rowe Sanctuary's virtual crane tours allows birders a chance to enjoy the sandhill crane migration from the comfort of a warm and heated home — instead of a chilly blind next to the Platte River.

"We begin the tour with a little program about crane behavior," said Beka Yates, education manager at Rowe Sanctuary. "We go over basics about the cranes and their lives. We highlight some of the behaviors we often see while observing them — and also talk about Rowe and the conservation we do here to help protect the cranes."

After that segment, Yates switches to views from the Crane Cam near the Platte River to see the cranes as they fly to the river to roost for the night.

"We watch what happens as they come into the river for the evening," she said. "During that time I also answer questions about what people might be seeing on the river. I act as a guide while people are watching the cranes from their own homes."

Rowe Sanctuary will present two virtual crane tours, starting at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and April 7. The cost of the tour is $10. The sessions end at about 9 p.m.

"It's a little different than being out on the river because you're seeing it through your screen at home," Yates said. "It's not quite the same experience as being able to witness it in person. You don't really get the entire scope of what's happening out there. You're only seeing the one direction that the camera is facing at any given time."

On the plus side, for people not able to travel, getting to see the cranes on a computer can help them understand the power of the crane migration.

"With the ongoing pandemic, a lot of people decided not to make travel plans this year," she said. "With this option they can still learn about the cranes and get to see them even when they are home, wherever that may be. People tune in from all over the country. And it's kind of fun to interact with them."

While images of the cranes are the same as what is available on Rowe's Crane Cam, Yates points out that viewers value the information and interpretation provided by the staff member leading the virtual tour.

"You get the added benefit of the program beforehand and also you get the chance to interact with someone live," she said. "You get to ask your questions and get them answered right away. You on your own."

Patrons will receive a Zoom link after signing up for the tour at Rowe.Audubon.org.

"A lot of people are watching with their families," Yates said. "You only have to reserve it for one viewing but you might have four or five people in the room with you, which is totally fine."

Yates understands that patrons watching a virtual tour might miss out on some aspects of crane viewing in person.

"The camera can zoom in, and it is father west than our viewing blinds," she said. "Sometimes things are happening closer to the camera that happen closer to the blinds. I'm sure there are some things you can see on the camera that you're missing from the blinds. And then sometimes something might be happening near the blinds and the camera isn't looking that way."

As for the total experience, some elements are missing from that.

"You're not getting the full sensory experience like you would get in person," Yates said. "Even if the wind is blowing in your face the entire time, that's part of the experience."

Due to the pandemic and social distancing, the numbers of slots for live, in-person viewing are very limited. All of the available slots have been booked but the availability of the virtual tours is unlimited.

Paws-itively ‘Pooch Perfect’

By DANA SIMPSON
TV Media

ABC is launching a new unscripted series this spring and it’s a real dog-and-Rebel show! Australia’s Seven Network series “Pooch Perfect” is coming to ABC on Tuesday, and it’s been getting some barking good reception along the way.

Hosted by Australian actor and comedian Rebel Wilson (and perhaps offering a titular nod to her 2012 film “Pitch Perfect”), “Pooch Perfect” offers fans of dogs, fashion and reality TV the chance to live out all of their dreams at once. The original version having first aired in Australia last year, BBC adapted the grooming competition for British audiences (and brought on “Gavin & Stacey’s” Sheridan Smith to host) in January of this year. Now, with eight episodes in its first season, the pooches are making their way to North America for a whole new installment of tail-wagging fun.

Joined by a judges panel comprised of celebrity dog groomer

Jorge Bendersky, veterinarian and Purina spokeswoman Dr. Callie Harris and first lady of luxury reality TV Lisa Vanderpump (“The Vanderpump Rules”), Wilson offers contestants the chance to show off their grooming skills as they compete in a series of challenges for the coveted trophy and a cash prize. Split into teams, each episode will pit groups against each other in two challenges (called “Immunity Puppertunity” and the “Ultimutt Challenge”) followed by an elimination round. In traditional competition show fashion, the last team standing is the winner.

Hardly able to contain her excitement for the show, Wilson took to Instagram to announce her involvement mid-January, saying, “This is a competitive dog-grooming reality show like nothing else. ... It’s gonna be paw-some. I can’t wait to get on set and film, and I can’t wait for you guys to see this amazing and super cute show.”

Get in on the action when the dog days of television come to ABC with the arrival of “Pooch Perfect” on Tuesday.

Wiping out the competition

Get ready, get set, WIPEOUT! The “world’s biggest obstacle course” is back and better than ever when new episodes of the popular series “Wipeout” premiere April 1 on TBS.

First launched and made popular by ABC in 2008, the unscripted obstacle course competition show that lasted seven seasons on the alphabet network is getting the TBS treatment this year. With superstar hosts John Cena (“Daddy’s Home,” 2015), Nicole Byer (“Nailed It!”) and Sports Illustrated swimsuit model Camille Kostek at the helm, this TBS reimagining of the new classic “takes viewers on a white-knuckle ride, featuring new course elements that will push contestants’ athleticism, endurance and determination to even greater extremes as they fight to win the grand cash prize” (per the network). And, of course, we can’t forget to mention “the iconic staple of the show — the big balls!”

Watch as Cena and Byer react to the hilarious hits, bounces, crashes and fails from inside the studio while field reporter Kostek gets up close and personal to the contestants and the action. In a statement to the media, TBS’s executive vice president of unscripted fare, Corie Henson, commented, “John and Nicole are the best pairing of 2021, and together with Camille, they bring the perfect balance of wit and cheerleading.” She continued, “We’ve created an edgier version of the original that fuses extreme athleticism with laugh-out-loud moments that fans of the show will be talking about long after the episode airs.”

Keith Geller and Matt Kunitz, the creators of the original ABC series, serve as executive producers this time around, so fans of the original can rest easy knowing that the revival will hold true to the fun and adventure of the first iteration.

Read the signs

Human psychology is often a very mysterious thing. From the decisions we make to the traits we exhibit at birth and those we develop through our experience and interactions with others, we all have overarching similarities and differences as human beings. One of the most concerning human conditions ever sought to be understood is psychopathy. Luckily, discovery+ is set to give some answers in this area when “Signs of a Psychopath” returns for Season 2 on the streamer Sunday.

After its eight-episode first season aired last year, following the personality traits of eight different psychopaths across their various horrific crimes, Discovery Inc.

renewed the series for a second season. Back to pull more stories from the true crime archives, “Signs of a Psychopath” explores the traits held by each criminal discussed and assesses their crimes based on their levels of narcissism, charm, lack of empathy, impulsiveness, manipulation and deception. By dissecting these cases and drawing out the signs that flew unnoticed until the crime was committed, this docuseries begs the question: Would you recognize the signs of a psychopath before it was too late?

Produced by Red Marble Media and distributed worldwide by Investigation Discovery, the unspecified number of upcoming half-hour episodes will focus their psychological attention on brand new cases from modern history.

'Top Chef' supersized

By MICHELLE ROSE
TV Media

Knowing the pandemic shut-down put Hollywood on hold in 2020, we've come to expect the delayed starts and postponed premieres of some of our favorite shows. Luckily, "Top Chef" isn't one of them. The Bravo series is back with a supersized premiere on April 1, around the same time it debuted last year.

The competition is staying put on the West Coast, but the locale is shifting from Los Angeles in Season 17 to picturesque Portland, Oregon, for Season 18. The City of Roses had developed a national reputation as a foodie's dream prior to the pandemic, which hit the food scene hard. This season of "Top Chef" hopefully will be a boon for local restaurants; in the words of Travel Portland President and CEO Jeff Miller, "the show will serve as a window into what Portland has to offer when viewers are ready to travel again."

The region and its flavors have inspired new challenges that include crabbing on the coast in honor of culinary icon/native Oregonian James Beard, and a surf and turf elimination challenge honoring the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation. There will also be visits to famous food locations, such as the Tillamook Creamery and Hood River Fruit Loop.

But the big twist is reserved for this season's Restaurant Wars challenge: Teams will have to execute a micro-restaurant concept featuring a seven-course tasting menu.

Season 18 "chefestants" include: Brittany Anderson of Richmond, Virginia; Avishar Barua of Columbus, Ohio; Dawn Burrell of Houston; Gabe Erasles of Austin, Texas; Nelson German of Oakland, California; Byron Gomez of Aspen, Colorado; Sasha Grumman of Houston; Roscoe Hall of Birmingham, Alabama; Kiki Louya of Detroit; Maria Mazon of Tucson, Arizona; Shota Nakajima of Seattle; Jamie Tran of Las Vegas; Chris Viaud of Milford, New Hampshire; and two

Bravo

Padma Lakshmi and Tom Colicchio in "Top Chef"

Portlanders, Sara Hauman and Gabriel Pascuzzi.

Like other cooking competitions, "Top Chef" had to film under strict COVID-19 safety protocols that necessitated changes to the judging and dining panel. Instead of flying in industry leaders and stars, host Padma Lakshmi and judges Tom Colicchio and Gail Simmons will be joined instead by a rotating panel of "Top Chef" alumnae. Some non-"Top Chef" celebrities also will appear, including "Portlandia" stars Fred Armisen and Carrie Brownstein.

Season 18 of "Top Chef" premieres April 1 on Bravo while its digital companion series, "Last Chance Kitchen," returns April 8.

More lore: Season 6 of ‘Vikings’ returns to Hulu

What's new on Hulu

“Vikings” Season 6B

Valhalla awaits many as the battle rages on in Season 6B of “Vikings,” coming to Hulu on Tuesday. The second half of the sixth and final season of the History channel series first began airing on the network on Jan. 1, and now Hulu subscribers can catch all the fur- and leather-clad action as the series draws to a close. With Oleg of Novgorod (Danila Kozlovsky) at the helm and representing the Eastern European Rus people, the story of Viking leader Ragnar Lothbrok (Travis Fimmel), the lowly Norse farmer who rose through the ranks to become one of the most fearsome and vicious Viking warriors of all time, finally comes to a resolution along with the horde’s long-lived search for new land. Filmed primarily in Ireland, the critically acclaimed Michael Hirst historical drama is a Canadian/Irish co-production that also stars Katheryn Winnick, Gustaf Skarsgård, Alexander Ludwig, Alex Høgh Andersen, Georgia Hirst and Jordan Patrick Smith. Fans of the show may also note that streaming tycoon Netflix will be launching a new spinoff series titled “Vikings: Valhalla” (also created by Hirst) later this year. An official release date has not been confirmed yet.

“WeWork: Or the Making and Breaking of a $47 Billion Unicorn” (2021)

Dive deep into the myths, legends and realities of running a multibillion-dollar corporation before learning just how easy it all is to lose when “WeWork: Or the Making and Breaking of a $47 Billion Unicorn” comes to Hulu on April 2. One of the biggest business scandals of recent years, WeWork is an American real estate company that earns its money by providing physical and virtual shared office space for entrepreneurs, startups and established companies. Founded by Miguel McKelvey and now-disgraced American-Israeli businessman and “hippie-messianic leader” (per Hulu) Adam Neumann, this feature-length documentary from Oscar-nominated writer/producer Jed Rothstein follows the meteoric rise of the company from its humble beginnings to its ultra-capitalist status of corporate success, all before it eventually plummeted into “a six-week death spiral” (per the official synopsis) that ultimately exposed its vulnerable underbelly and significantly brought down the company’s IPO. Through interviews with journalists, financial and business experts, former WeWork members and high-ranking former employees of the company, Rothstein investigates the behind-the-scenes reality that plagued the supposedly “community-centric, people-first ideal” (per Hulu) that launched WeWork’s once-excellent reputation. “WeWork: Or the Making and Breaking of a $47 Billion Unicorn” was executive produced by Campfire, Forbes and Olive Hill Media.

“Haunted: Latin America”

Explore the supernatural south of the border in the new Netflix series “Haunted: Latin America,” joining the streamer’s roster on Wednesday. Known the world over for its cultural appreciation and embrace of the dead and the great beyond – not to mention for being the birthplace of magical realism in literature – Latin America has some of the most interesting rituals, religious ceremonies and outlooks on death and the afterlife to be found anywhere. This, however, doesn’t mean that Latin American locations and people don’t still get haunted. Share in the stories of various people from across Latin America who have claimed to have been followed, terrorized and preyed upon by all manner of spirits, demons and entities during their lives. From mysterious figures to the reappearance of long-dead family members and beyond, this series brings viewers into the supernatural action by way of dramatic re-enactments of real-life occurrences. A chilling unscripted series, “Haunted: Latin America” brings together the best of the horror genre and reality television.

“Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom” (2013)

Get inspired as Golden Globe winner Idris Elba takes on the role of one of the most magnetic and influential public figures of all time in “Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom,” coming Tuesday to Netflix. Imprisoned in a South African jail on charges of conspiring to overthrow the state following the Rivonia trials in the early 1960s, Nelson Mandela (Elba) was given a life sentence for fighting for the rights of freedom of the people. Torn apart from his family and the South African people for whom he cared so deeply, for years Mandela served his sentence, prepared to die for his beliefs. Then, one day, the world started to fight for Mandela. The 1980s saw the worldwide rise of the newly launched Free Nelson Mandela campaign, the movement that eventually led to his release in 1990, 27 years after his imprisonment. This historical drama film, directed by Justin Chadwick, follows Mandela through his life from childhood to his inauguration as the first democratically elected president of South Africa. Taken from Mandela’s autobiography and adapted for the screen by William Nicholson, “Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom” was nominated for Best Achievement in Music Written for Motion Pictures, Original Song (for U2’s “Ordinary Love”) at the 86th annual Academy Awards.

“At Eternity’s Gate” (2018)

Take a short visit to another time and place with the visually striking biographical drama film “At Eternity’s Gate,” coming to Netflix on Wednesday. Focusing on famous Dutch post-impressionist painter Vincent van Gogh, portrayed by four-time Oscar nominee Willem Dafoe during his self-imposed exile in Arles and Auvers-sur-Oise in France, this drama, directed by Julian Schnabel, uses a similar color palette to that of the painting style developed by van Gogh during the years leading up to his death. Touching on themes of mental health, religious doubt, self-fulfillment and relationships with family and friends – such as those with his brother Theo (Rupert Friend) and fellow painter Paul Gauguin (Oscar Isaac) – “At Eternity’s Gate” takes an introspective look at the artist’s tumultuous relationship with the concept of eternity versus the present moment.

By day, the teenagers are just your average high school students, but in their spare time – and really any time Kim’s tech genius friend, Wade (Tahj Mowry) sends her intel on the “Kimmunicator” device – the duo is ready at a moment’s notice to take down their archenemies around the globe – including Dr. Drakken (John DiMaggio) and Shego (Nicole Sullivan) – before returning in time for homework and their family dinners. Created by Mark McCorkle and Bob Schooley, this family series has a total of 86 episodes that originally ran from 2002 to 2007 on the Disney Channel.

The Elton John AIDS Foundation is inviting everyone to an hourlong, virtual pre-show Oscar party special.

Tickets for the April 25 event are $19.99 and are available via Ticketmaster. Proceeds will go to young people at risk and living with HIV all over the world.

The foundation is one of the leading independent AIDS organizations in the world. One of its fundraising highlights is the star-studded Oscar viewing show, with a dinner and an auction. This time, a pre-show will be available to ticket buyers.

The special will be hosted four times in four time zones and each will accommodate 100,000 viewers, meaning a total of 400,000 ticket buyers are allowed access.

Many can't say 'no' to Ringo

Chris Pizzello, Associated Press

Ringo Starr presents the award for record of the year at Sunday's 63rd annual Grammy Awards at the Los Angeles Convention Center on Sunday.

Vocalists join him on 'Here's to the Nights'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Ringo Starr calls to ask if you'll sing on a song for him, who could possibly say no?

The beloved Beatle dug into his contacts for help on the chorus of "Here's to the Nights," his most recent song written by Diane Warren, and he recruited quite a choir.

Paul McCartney. Sheryl Crow. Dave Grohl. Lenny Kravitz. Joe Walsh. Ben Harper. Finneas. Chris Stapleton. Yola. Jenny Lewis. Corinne Bailey Rae. Eric Burton (of the Black Pumas). Steve Lukather.

"Here's to the nights we won't remember, with the friends we won't forget," they all sing. It's a perfect sentiment for the 80-year-old drummer who, as McCartney once sang "has memories longer than the road that stretches out ahead."

"Everyone was really kind to me to do what they did," Starr told The Associated Press recently.

Two people did say no, actually. Ringo won't reveal who, but they must have been REALLY busy.

Starr's EP of five new songs comes out Friday. The project gave him something to do during COVID-19 lockdown in his Los Angeles home. He said he divided much of his time between making music, painting and working out.

"Last year I left the house no more than seven times, and I think I'm exaggerating," he said. "I'm a prime target for this COVID. Now I've had my shots. I feel groovy and there's nowhere to go!"

One place was Sunday's Grammy Awards, where he presented the record of the year honor to Billie Eilish, who — let's do the math here — was born 31 years after the Beatles broke up.

Even a Beatle gets the blues, and Starr said he felt it during the long layoff. He had to cancel gigs with his All-Starr Band last year and, most recently, postponed hopeful plans to go back on the road in May and June, and again in the fall. He'll wait until next year, at least.

"I was really sad in the beginning because I couldn't go on the road," he said. "I love to play. I love the audience. They love me. I'll go anywhere to be loved!"

He chuckled at that remark. It's one of the things he has in common with his other surviving Beatles mate. They both stay very active musically, love to perform and, with vegetarian diets, are both in the type of shape that others their age would envy.

For Starr, his vehicle the last three decades has been the All-Starr Band, a simple concept that continually regenerates. He invites a rotating crew of veteran musicians, the main requirement being they must have been part of some hit songs, in order to keep the set list varied and fresh.

He said he was so insecure the first time he brought along two fellow drummers: Levon Helm and Jim Keltner.
