Shields and sunshine

Enjoy outdoors, go fishing with law enforcement at Cops and Bobbers

By RICK BROWN

KEARNEY — Amber Clements has a good reason for residents of central Nebraska to get outside and enjoy the sunshine.

“This is designed to get everybody out into the community, have fun with law enforcement personnel and do some fishing,” said the events coordinator at The Archway. “This is a great way to come out and try fishing for free. We’ll have equipment from the different departments so everybody can check out fishing tackle. We hope to get some personnel from KPD, the sheriff’s department and the Nebraska State Patrol fishing with the kids and interacting with them.”

No registration is needed for the free event, called “Cops and Bobbers,” 5:30-7:30 p.m. Tuesday at The Archway Pond between the Nebraska Firefighters Museum and The Archway.

“This is all very casual, very laid back,” Clements said.

Poles, bait, and tackle are provided, courtesy of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. No previous fishing experience is needed.

Clements has pleasant memories of fishing with her family. She still occasionally enjoys getting out to fish.

“I go to Harlan Lake but I have to admit that I’m not very good at it,” she said. “Sometimes I get a little frustrated — but I try.”

She finds fishing as a good way to relax.

“I like being out in the sun and being away from the hustle and bustle of everyday life,” Clements said. “It gives me a chance to mellow out and decompress a little.”

Although all of the fishing at the Cops and Bobbers event is catch and release, Clements plans to make it fun for everyone.

“We will have a booth where you can get your fish weighed and registered,” she said. “We’ll have prizes for the biggest fish, the smallest fish and the most fish.”

The Archway will partner with the Nebraska Firefighter’s Museum, where the tent will be located.

“We’re hoping for a good turnout and hopefully the kids will have good time,” Clements said. “And it’s open to everyone, not just kids.”

Variety of entertainment taking area stages, screens in June

KEARNEY — “Reunited and it feels so good!”

That’s how Marcy Brandt, executive director of the Minden Opera House in Minden, worded a recent press release about upcoming events in central Nebraska. The release celebrated the easing of restrictions for the pandemic.

“Events are back at MOH, friends!” she continued. “Yes, we’ve had some small offerings and rentals over the last year, but we feel that we can now confidently say that we are really and truly back. And it feels SO GOOD to say it. We are continuing to take steps to try and keep you safe.”

The staff at the Minden Opera House still encourages social distancing — along with wearing of masks — and promises to continue enhanced cleaning procedures.

“We also want you to take the precautions that you feel appropriate,” Brandt wrote. “Some of our upcoming shows will have safety protocols that will be set by the visiting group or organization, so we thank you in advance for your adherence to those requirements. We will be sure to communicate those changes with you well in advance of each show.”

Other arts organizations in central Nebraska also have events planned.

Crane River Theater has a summer season of plays planned. The theater’s website details some of the precautions the staff intends to take: “We are committed to bringing you the arts in 2021 and beyond, and to do so with safety in mind for all involved. Crane River Theater values the health and safety of our patrons, volunteers, and artists. We are working closely with Two Rivers Public Health Department, the City of Kearney, and each of our performance venues to make sure all productions and programs are safe for all participants. Our Board of Directors will routinely assess health directives to determine appropriate safety protocols.”

Hired to helm an Americanized take on a British play, director Lloyd Fellowes does his best to control an eccentric group of stage actors. During practice sessions, things run smoothly. However, when Lloyd and his actors begin a series of performances leading up to a Broadway premiere, chaos ensues. Star actress Dotty is losing her sparkle (and her sardines!), male lead Frederick has no confidence, and bit actor Selsdon is rarely sober. Can the rest of the troupe get it together? Will they make it to curtain call?

Moon putting on a show Wednesday

Lunar eclipse can be seen early morning

By RICK BROWN
Yard Light Media

KEARNEY — While a “super blood moon” might sound like the stuff of science fiction, University of Nebraska at Kearney associate professor Joel Berrier knows exactly why the moon will look red — and bigger — early Wednesday morning.

“The red effect that you see, we always have that when we have a total lunar eclipse,” he said. “We should see the total eclipse on Wednesday, starting at about 3:45 a.m. and lasting for about two hours. We will get that blood moon effect which is due to light refracting through our atmosphere.”

A lunar eclipse occurs when the sun, earth and moon all align, an event called a syzygy, a straight line configuration of three or more celestial bodies. Looking from the moon, the earth blots out the sun causing the moon to travel through the long shadow of the earth called the umbra. While in the umbra, the surface of the moon takes on a red or coppery glow, often called the Blood Moon.

“When you have a total lunar eclipse, you still have light from the sun reflecting off the surface of the moon at totality,” Berrier said.

“Earth acts to refract light through its atmosphere which allows red light to pass through. That’s the same reason why we have red and orange in our sunsets. So, even though the moon is in the complete shadow of the earth, the earth bends some of that light through our atmosphere.”

The exact amount of red light on the moon depends on the amount of dust in our atmosphere.

NASA Ames Research Center/Brian Day, courtesy

The blood moon occurs when light from the sun gets refracted by the earth’s atmosphere during a lunar eclipse. Night watchers can witness a lunar eclipse starting at about 3:45 a.m. Wednesday and lasting until sunrise.

ON THE COVER

NASA, Bill Ingalls, courtesy

This image by NASA photographer Bill Ingalls shows a blood moon near the Colorado State Capitol building in 2015.

Events like forest fires or a volcanic eruption can effect how deep the color looks.

For casual astronomers, no special equipment is needed to see a lunar eclipse. A pair of binoculars can enhance the the view and bring out details on the surface of the moon.

Some people also define the event on Wednesday as a supermoon. Due to the slightly elliptical orbit of the moon, it’s orbit occasionally causes the moon to be closer to the earth by about 600 kilometers. That difference makes the moon appear slightly larger during a supermoon event.

“We get more lunar eclipses than we do solar eclipses, just because of the way the moon orbits around the earth,” Berrier said. “The solar eclipses happen a couple times a year but most of the time it happens over water and we don’t get to see them. We see lunar eclipses more frequently because of the way the orbits line up.”

Berrier, who teaches physics at UNK, studied physics and astronomy at the University of California in Irvine, Calif. His primary fields of interest are galaxy formation theory and cosmology. He also studies large scale structure formation and the mechanisms that drive galaxy evolution. His research explores the fundamental physics of the effects of dark matter on galaxy formation and on the large scale structure of the Universe.

On a personal level, Berrier said he plans to check out the eclipse on Wednesday.

“When you have a total lunar eclipse, you still have light from the sun reflecting off the surface of the moon at totality. Earth acts to refract light through its atmosphere, which allows red light to pass through.”

“I will probably get up towards the end of the eclipse because totality happens right before 6 a.m. and that’s when I usually start my day,” he said.

Canadian R&B artist Weeknd leading Billboard Music Awards

By DANA SIMPSON
TV Media

Turn on the television and get ready to see some “Blinding Lights” at this year’s Billboard Music Awards, airing Sunday on NBC.

With 113 artists nominated across 51 categories, music fans and awards show lovers might “Feel It Coming,” but they’ll have to wait to see if they “Call Out [his] Name” as many times as he has been nominated. OK, so we may have overdone it a bit with the not-so-subtle song title dropping, but you guessed it correctly: The Weeknd has been leading the list of nominees this year, having garnered a total of 16 nods, including Top 100 Artist, Top R&B Artist and Top Streaming Song, to name a few.

Artists trailing not too far behind The Weeknd for number of nominations are “Rockstar” rapper DaBaby, with 11 nods; late rapper Pop Smoke, with 10 posthumous nominations; Country artist Gabby Barrett, raking in a total of nine nominations; and Bad Bunny, Chris Brown, Megan Thee Stallion, Drake and the late Juice WRLD all coming in with seven nominations apiece.

To be hosted by musician, actor and TV personality Nick Jonas — who is accepting the torch from his “The Voice” co-star, Kelly Clarkson, who hosted the show for the past three years — the 2021 Billboard Music Awards continue to honor the best in the music industry, from solo artists and groups to albums and songs across a wide range of genres.

The winners, to be announced by Jonas, are decided by metrics as gathered by Billboard and its data partners and based on fan interactions with the artists’ content, sales, streaming numbers, overall radio play and social engagement.

This year’s awards will take into account content released between March 21, 2020, and April 3, 2021, making this year’s Billboard Music Awards the first all-pandemic celebration in its 30-year history.

Shutterstock

The Weeknd is among nominees for the Billboard Hot 100 Artist of the Year.

Other artists sure to make a splash are seven-time Top Artist nominee Taylor Swift, Top Rock Album nominees Miley Cyrus and Machine Gun Kelly, and rock veterans Bruce Springsteen and AC/DC, also both nominated in the category of Top Rock Album.

Don’t miss the 2021 Billboard Music Awards when the show is hosted by Nick Jonas for the first time ever this Sunday on NBC.

Going mental

Move over “Jeopardy” and “Who Wants to Be a Millionaire,” there’s a new show in town. (Well, a new season of a show, at any rate.) Don’t miss “Mental Samurai” when it returns for a second season on Tuesday on Fox.

Once again hosted by “9-1-1: Lone Star’s” Rob Lowe, Season 2 will continue the circus of mental gymnastics first established in the game show’s first season, released April 2020.

Broken into two rounds, Round

1 sees a contestant atop a mobile robotic arm named Ava as they answer questions from the four towers before them: each one dedicated to either knowledge, sequences, puzzles or memory. Should the contestant answer all questions correctly in Round 1, they move on to the second round for the chance to win $100,000. If not, they are out of the game entirely.

In Round 2 — where the big bucks are — contestants must now face the Circle of Samurai. Here, the player takes on up to four questions (one for each tower) and is given 90 seconds to answer each question. Any time remaining from the previous question will be tagged on to the next as the player hopes to add more money to their total win.

With every correct answer in this round, the contestant’s take-away money pot increases by $25,000. A missed or incorrect answer means the contestant’s run on the show is finished, but they walk away with whatever money already has been banked. (Not bad!)

The game show has become a favorite around the world, with international versions popping up in Chile, Colombia, Portugal, Finland and in the Middle East and North Africa on Dubai TV.

Don’t miss Rob Lowe’s return to the game show podium when Season 2 of “Mental Samurai” lands on Fox this Tuesday.

Relive the ‘Apocalypse’

Step back into history with the visual experience of “Apocalypse ‘45,” coming to discovery+ on May 27.

This moving documentary from director Erik Nelson (“A Gray State,” 2017) chronicles the last few days of World War II from the perspective of 24 men who lived through the events. Using never-before-seen footage and interviews, the feature length film was first released to coincide with the 75th anniversary of VJ Day on Aug. 15 of last year.

From the flag raising at Iwo Jima in February 1945 to the desert bomb tests in New Mexico and air raid over Japan that summer, Nelson, a longtime collaborator of acclaimed German director Werner Herzog (“Grizzly Man,” 2005), beautifully tells the story of the end of the war with the strength and tenderness it deserves.

Upon the film’s debut on Discovery Channel last year, Richard Abramowitz and Karol Martesko-Fenster of distribution and marketing partners Abramorama said: “We are honored to be partnering with Discovery to release Erik’s astonishing film to mark this momentous time in our history. Now more than ever we need the kind of heroes who understand the consequences of their actions.”

Don’t miss the discovery+ launch of the momentous documentary “Apocalypse ‘45” May 27.

Dessert, deconstructed

'Crime Scene Kitchen' invites you to decode cake

By MICHELLE ROSE
TV Media

Joel McHale to host "Crime Scene Kitchen."

describes its newest competition series: "Each episode begins at the scene of the crime — a kitchen that was just used to make an amazing, mouth-watering dessert that since has disappeared.

1912 Avenue M • Kearney, NE
(308) 237-3163 • www.andersenwrecking.com

The chef teams of two are challenged to scour the kitchen for clues and ingredients to figure out what was baked. Next, each team must duplicate the recipe based on their guess.

To take the $100,000 prize, the competing dessert makers will need to prove they have the technical know-how, imagination and problem-solving skills needed to decode and recreate incredible desserts and cakes from across the world."

Stone and Gampp bring a wealth of experience to the series and the judges table. Stone is best known for his TV appearances on "Take Home Chef" and "Top Chef Junior," while Gampp's own cake creations have garnered half a billion views on YouTube, leading to guest spots on shows such as "Cake Wars" and "Nailed It."

Would you be able to solve all the cake clues?

Play along when "Crime Scene Kitchen" debuts this Wednesday on Fox following the Season 5 finale of "The Masked Singer."

Episodes will also be available on Tubi after airing in prime time.

Just when you think you've seen it all, Fox decides to put its own spin on the baking competition — a genre that has been dominating TV lately.

"Crime Scene Kitchen" launches Wednesday on Fox, and this isn't your average cake-themed showcase.

For starters, it's hosted by actor-comedian and "Card Sharks" host Joel McHale, so the jokes probably will have a little more bite than the typical wordplay (the trailer even poked fun at it).

There's also a deceptive twist: instead of themed challenges, this series is "a culinary guessing game in which bakers are tasked with decoding what type of dessert was made when all that's left are the crumbs, flour trails and a few elusive clues" (according to Fox).

This forensic approach to baking is just the kind of lighthearted programming you'd expect to find in a network's summer lineup. And if you're thinking the premise sounds vaguely familiar, you might be thinking of Quibi's "Dishmantled," hosted by Tituss Burgess ("Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt"). That competition also tasked contestants with identifying and recreating a dish that had been shot out of a cannon.

You won't find any cannon-blasted foods or endurance tests in the dessert-themed "Crime Scene Kitchen." This series focuses more on detective work — it's more of a trial of the senses.

Once the bakers have sifted through the clues and tasted the crumbs, they'll have to recreate the recipe for celebrity judges/chefs Curtis Stone and Yolanda Gampp, who will determine whether their best guess even comes close to matching the mystery dessert.

“Cruella” (2021)

“Brilliant, bad ... and a little bit mad” – at least that’s what Emma Stone says when she stars as Cruella de Vil in “Cruella,” airing in select theaters and on Disney+ on May 28. Disney’s new live-action prequel to the animated Disney classic “One Hundred and One Dalmatians” (1961) is set in 1970s London during the punk-rock revolution. The story follows Estella, a young, clever and creative orphan-turned-criminal who’s determined to make a name for herself and the two young thieves she’s befriended. Using her talent for design, Estella catches the eye of fashion legend Baroness von Hellman (Emma Thompson). Estella, now going by the alias Cruella, works her way up through the world of the rich and famous, her relationship with Baroness von Hellman setting into motion a series of events that have Cruella embracing her wicked side.

NEW YORK (AP) — The next book from MSNBC anchor and NBC News correspondent Katy Tur will combine the personal and the professional.

Tur has a deal with One Signal Publishers/Atria Books for the memoir "Rough Draft: Motherhood & Media in a World Gone Mad," in which she will open up about everything from childhood to journalism to becoming a parent. Tur, daughter of journalists Zoey Tur and Marika Gerrard, is also the author of "Unbelievable: My Front Row Seat to the Craziest Campaign in History," a best-selling account of covering Donald Trump's 2016 campaign.

The new book is scheduled for November.

"I watched my parents revolutionize the breaking news business, then break apart themselves, a fact I ran from until I had no choice: Write this book or walk away. I chose to write," Tur said in a statement.

TV shows have helped us tour world from lockdown

By ROB THOMAS
The Capital Times

It's not exactly news that we've spent the last year in quarantine binging television shows.

But one reason why we've been watching so much on Netflix and Disney+ I don't think has been explored — the chance to see a new place. Most of us haven't traveled during the past year (and are only very cautiously looking at traveling in the summer and fall).

A TV show set in a foreign locale can be a way to travel vicariously while staying safely on the living room sofa. Case in point: As much as I enjoyed the heists in the French Netflix show "Lupin," what I really liked was the chance to see Paris in all its glory. The first episode takes place at the Louvre, for heaven's sake!

A lot of people must feel the same way, because when I put the call out on social media for other shows that people have been traveling vicariously through, I got a massive response. Here are some suggestions for traveling around the world in 80 minutes.

Travel TV: Some people took the question literally and mentioned their favorite travel shows that they've been enjoying: "Stanley Tucci's Italy," "Anthony Bourdain: Parts Unknown," "Down to Earth with Zac Efron," "Eater's Guide to the World," "Rick Steves' Europe" and Josh Gates' "Expedition Unknown" are all favorite ways to see the world.

"Taste the Nation with Padma Lakshmi" has scratched that itch for me," one reader said. "Makes me want to see more of the U.S. (and explore more ethnic food)."

Touring the good ol' U.S. of A: A lot of people were exploring America through their television, including:

"Bosch" for those pretty L.A. at night shots from his house, which they have to explain why he can afford."

"Yellowstone" for getting (me) way out of the city and accept-

Paris is half a world away, but we can see the sights from our living rooms, through TV shows.

ing that I'll never look cool in a cowboy hat."

"Mare of Easttown" — great show but based on the accents I can't tell if it's set in Boston, Maine, New York or Wisconsin." (Editor's note: It takes place in a working-class town outside of Philadelphia.)

Think globally: It seems all four corners of the world are represented in the shows that people watch. My beloved "Lupin" was mentioned a couple of times, as was "Emily in Paris" and "The Bureau." But the clear favorite for vicarious trips to Paris was the comedy show "Call My Agent!"

"Call My Agent" most of all for its delicious feel of Parisian streets, nightlife and cafes — just the thrill of being handed a fancy menu!" one reader noted.

Also represented: Japan ("Queer Eye: We're in Japan!") New Zealand ("The Brokenwood Mysteries"), England ("Doc Martin"), Israel ("Shtisel"), Denmark ("Borgen"), Australia ("Mystery Road") and "all over Europe" ("Killing Eve").

To infinity and beyond: A couple of respondents even dreamed really big and didn't limit themselves to traveling planet Earth, picking "Star Trek: Discovery" and "The Expanse."

Said one reader: "'Star Trek: Discovery.' My ticket to anywhere else."

Hang in there, get vaccinated, and it won't be long before you'll get to see personally how all of these exotic locales measure up to your favorite shows. Except for you, Star Trek Guy.
