

Home to the Packers

When you think of the Packers home stadium, Lambeau Field comes to mind. Over the years, the team has called eight locations home during the regular season. For the majority of their existence, the Packers split time between the Green Bay and Milwaukee areas.

- 1919-1922 Hagemeister Park
 Hagemeister Park in Green Bay was a public park where the Packers played for four seasons - including their first two in the NFL.
- 1923-1924 Bellevue Park
 Bellevue Park was built after Hagemeister was torn down to make room for a new high school. Site of the first Packers-Bears game played in Green Bay.
- 1925-1956 City Stadium
 The Packers played at City Stadium for 32 seasons. The stadium was expanded several times and reached a capacity of 25,000.
- 1933 Borchert Field
 The Packers played one home game at Borchert Field in 1933, their first game in Milwaukee.
- 1934-1951 State Fair Park
 State Fair Park, located within the Wisconsin State Fairgrounds, split time with City Stadium. The site was host to the 1939 NFL Championship Game.
- 1952 Marquette Stadium
 The Packers played at Marquette Stadium for only one year.
- 1953-1994 County Stadium
 The Packers played several home games a year at the stadium. County Stadium was home to the Milwaukee Braves and later the Milwaukee Brewers.
- 1957-Present Lambeau Field
 Lambeau Field is the longest continuously occupied stadium in the NFL, though it was originally named Green Bay City Stadium. The stadium was originally built for $960,000.
