Special election will fill vacant commissioner seat

Filing: Jan 18-Feb. 1

BY KIRSTEN FAURIE EDITOR@MORAMINN.COM

Anyone interested in representing Mora on the Kanabec County Board of Commissioners has to file for candidacy between 8 a.m. Jan. 18 and 5 p.m. Feb. 1.

The county will hold a special election to fill the District 2 (city of Mora) County Commissioner position. The vacancy was created when commissioner Gene Anderson died on Dec. 8.

The county cannot appoint a new commissioner because three years remained in Anderson's term; the seat must be filled through a special election.

Depending on how many people file for candidacy, the timeline of the special election could be much longer, leaving the Mora district unrepresented and one voice short on the board of commissioners.

This could be problematic because the board is designed with an odd number (five) seats to prevent voting ties when decisions are made.

If two or fewer persons file for candidacy, the special election would be held April 12.

If more than two people file for candidacy, a special primary would be held April 12 with the special election to be held Aug. 9, 2022

However, there would be no primary if immediately after the filing period closes, candidates withdrew to bring the final number of candidates down to two or less.

To file for candidacy, interested persons should contact the Kanabec County Auditor/ Treasurer's Office either in person at the Kanabec County Courthouse, 18 S. Vine St., Mora, or by calling 320-679-

Henry Jungbauer and his dog, Cora, finished third overall in the 5km skijoring race held Sunday, Jan. 9 at the Nordic Ski Center in Mora.

Trails open to all: skiers, cyclists - even dogs

BY KIRSTEN FAURIE

EDITOR@MORAMINN.COM

Winter sportsmen don't let good snow go to waste. With plenty of snow on the ground, trails at the Nordic Ski Center in Mora are being put to good use, including the recent skijoring and fat tire bike

It was minus five degrees Fahrenheit and breezy at the starting line, which made for brisk events. Racers kept pace to keep themselves warm as well as bring them to the warmth of the finish line sooner. Participants could warm themselves in the Nordic Ski Center or around an outdoor fire ring.

Previously held during Vasaloppet weekend, organization of the skijoring and fat tire bike events have transitioned from Vasaloppet USA to the Mora Ski Club.

Skijoring is a winter sport in which a cross-country skier is pulled by one or two dogs. Depending on the dog and the person, every now and then the skier ends up in front of the dog.

Fat tire biking is an increasingly popular winter sport that uses off-road bicycles with extra-large tires designed to ride on top of snow.

The cold prevented several fair-weather participants from turning out, and because the fat tire race was long (two laps on the course totaling 28km), participants were given the option to finish just one lap and receive a shortened time. (Results of the races on page 7.)

OPEN ALL SEASON

The Nordic Ski Center is open to the public and offers over 13km of groomed trails, 5km of which are lit for night

Officer goes back to school

Deputy Schulz new resource officer

BY KIRSTEN FAURIE EDITOR@MORAMINN.COM

His mother was a Mora school teacher; his father was once the county sheriff. Now, deputy Dan Schulz will be serving as the poetic in-between: the new local school resource officer.

School resource officers are part of a community-oriented policing strategy that focuses on building relationships within communities that prevents crime. One aspect of this is to connect with kids who may have had negative past experiences with law enforcement officers.

Schulz will begin serving local schools this month as their new officer. The position was formerly held by deputy Justin Strom, who is now serving in a different position with the sheriff's office.

Schulz earned a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Minnesota State University Moorhead; he completed law enforcement education at Alexandria Technical and Community College. He got a job with the Kanabec County Sheriff's Office and has been serving the county for the past 14 years.

Through his work and the experience of raising his own 8-year-old son, Schultz said he saw how important it was to reach young people and show them how to break the cycle of harmful behaviors.

"It became evident to me, that the youth really is the future," he said.

"I got into law enforcement to help the community that

Humanize: School resource officer hopes to break cycle of harmful behavior

supported my family," said Schulz. "I can't think of a better way to serve the community than to get into the school and provide a positive influence."

The school resource officer divides their time between Mora and Ogilvie schools, teaching classes about responsible decision making, showing up to football games, visiting with kids during lunch and overall trying to be a good role model with a listening ear.

Schulz said that on the surface, people tend to focus on the law enforcement uniform, and not the person in it. Part of his work in schools is to humanize police, build rapport and trust. Schulz hopes he can connect with kids over potential shared interests like video games (Schulz likes to play Halo Infinite and Rocket League), hunting and movies.

Overall, Schulz said that his hopes for himself, the students and their families is to try to be better every day.

"I have faith the community can, and will, become better."

PROGRAM SAVED BY AMERICAN RESCUE PLAN

Budget issues initially cut the school resource officer position in summer, until the Kanabec County Sheriff's Office found a new, temporary way to fund the wages and benefits for a full-time school resource officer: The American Rescue Plan—Coronavirus State and Local Fiscal Recovery Funds.

The American Rescue Plan, passed by Congress and signed into law by President Joe Biden on March 11 was intended to speed recovery from the effects of the pandemic. Among other things, the ARP designates $350 billion for state and local governments to replace lost revenue and strengthen support for vital public services.

Recovering Hope Treatment Center is grateful to be part of a community that shows their compassion and support of our programs, clients, and staff. During the holiday season we received donations from a variety of community members and organizations which helped to create a more joyful holiday for the 74 women and 30 children in our residential treatment program. Each child was excited to receive matching pajamas and each client and child was able to open a gift on Christmas because of the thoughtful donations we received.

We extend a heartfelt thank you to Kanabec County Arts Association, St. Andrew's Field Sunsetters, Immanuel Lutheran Church, Braham Knit Wits, Barb Orstad, Bethani Sando, and many other community members that provided donations. Throughout the year we are proud to work collaboratively with many fantastic partners, including Kanabec County Community Health, Welia Health, Lakes and Pines Head Start, One More Time, Pizza Hut, Emma's Pizza, Better Together Coalition, Legislative Leaders (City and County), Mental Health and Substance Use Providers.

Together with our community partners, Recovering Hope Treatment Center supported 896 clients and welcomed eleven healthy babies in 2021. In addition, our efforts helped to reduce stigma surrounding substance use, enhance harm reduction strategies, and improve mental health and wellness.

The success of our programs is enhanced with the support of our kind and compassionate community. We look forward to a new year with added hope, strength, and courage.

A New Year food resolution for all no diets involved

large number of New Years resolutions seem to focus on diets and eating healthy — but I've been thinking about a different kind of New Year resolve regarding food. This year, I'm reinvigorating my efforts to reduce food waste. I can think of very few things more detrimental to the earth and the people who inhabit it than wasted food. Food production takes an incredible amount of resources including fossil fuels, land, livestock and labor. Furthermore, if food waste ends up in a landfill it rots anaerobically, creating methane gas. Methane not only smells awful, it's a greenhouse gas more damaging than carbon dioxide.

food, right down to using an animals bones for broth. Fast forward to today and we've been able to grow and distribute food in incredible abundance. Without the necessity to conserve, we've become terribly wasteful.

Kirsten Faurie

According to the USDA, an estimated 30-40% of the United States food supply is wasted. Often it spoils before it is eaten or is tossed out as uneaten

In one week's time people who intended healthy New Year diets will be pulling bags of brown slime (formerly lettuce) from the backs of fridges and tossing them in the trash.

I recognize that my family is fortunate to have enough food that it can go to waste.

My resolution to reduce food waste is both selfish and altruistic. I'll be reducing my own grocery bill, but by reducing my own food waste, I can alleviate pressure on the supply chain and will have the opportunity to give more to those who need it.

My strategies to accomplish this goal include:

- Eating the leftovers or finding creative ways to incorporate them into the next evening's meal. I've found this is even more appealing when I have good, high quality storage containers that are easily reheated and dishwasher safe.
- Measuring out portions. Admittedly this is a little bit of a diet in addition to reducing waste because it prevents me from overeating my share. Food is not only wasted in the trash but also wasted when it adds unnecessary pounds to my middle.
- Eating fresh fruits and vegetables quickly before they spoil, or opting to buy frozen or canned instead.
- If food is no longer fit for humans to eat, I do my best to feed it to my chickens which will in turn provide me with eggs. If it's beyond consumption for even a chicken, it is turned into compost thus feeding my summer vegetable garden.

These all take discipline. Each of these strategies used to be a "duh" moment for people just one or two generations before me. Unfortunately, many of them have fallen out of practice, sacrificed for the sake of convenience. If you have your own tips or strategies for reducing food waste, I would love to hear them. Send your favorite tips to me at editor@moraminn.com.

Jan. 6 will forever stand alongside a select few dates in American history. Images of rioters at the Capitol building in a failed attempt to overturn the election of Joe Biden as the 46th president of the United States will forever be burned in our brains.

For Washington, D.C., residents like me, concerns over the balance between freedom and safety went beyond the philosophical. By early afternoon, we received urgent messages to pick up our children from school as soon as possible. We hunkered down in our homes hoping the mayhem would quickly be contained, emerging to a form of lockdown. Road closures hindered our movement for days; tall fences prevented our usual enjoyment of the Capitol grounds themselves for weeks.

But what sets this date apart is its profound psychological impact resulting in serious soul-searching about our core values as a nation.

As we approach the first anniversary of that insurrection, individuals have been criminally charged, convicted and sentenced. The broader systemic review of identifying the genesis of the violence and whether it could have been prevented has lagged. Each day brings questions as to what the ramifications might be for the future of the free and fair elections that are the cornerstone of our democracy. And personally, I've harbored significant anguish in wondering whether the First Amendment's rights of freedom of speech, assembly and petitioning the government for redress of grievances were given too much protection that day.

There is a point where protected protest ends and violence begins; the former receives constitutional protection while the latter does not. Even within the former, there are limits: The government can restrict assembly by employing limited "time, place and manner" restrictions that still allow the assembly to occur. It can even shut down protests when presented with an immediate danger that otherwise cannot be avoided. In each instance, the government bears the burden of justifying any

But after two years of high-profile protests that sometimes included rioting, looting and property damage, is there any wiggle room in where these lines are drawn, particularly when law enforcement can and should step in?

For instance, should access to the Capitol grounds be more limited overall, like it is across the street at the Supreme Court? More broadly: Should our view of an "immediate danger" to public safety change given these violent protests and the speed with which they arise?

After a year of internal reckoning, my answer to all these questions remains a resounding "NO."

The First Amendment allows only clearly defined and limited regulation of speech for a reason: No matter where the lines are drawn, there will be attempts by government officials to overstep.

Allowing regulation of speech anywhere short of the standard of "incitement to imminent lawless action" may prevent violence, but it will surely censor protected speech too. This is particularly true for those traditionally lacking power, such as minority groups and fringe voices who often rely on a strong First Amenament to express their distinct views and for whom social media may be a great amplifier. As Freedom Forum Fellow Charles Haynes recently told me: "Freedom of assembly doesn't mean anything if you can't practice it because of your race."

The answer instead lies in ensuring that adequate law enforcement are present and understand their explicit purpose is to protect the right of assembly first and foremost. They should be trained to identify danger signs and to act swiftly and in a targeted manner when violence or clearly illegal, non-speech behavior occurs. And those who are arrested for violent crimes should be punished to the full extent of the law. All enforcement, however, should occur after protest ends and violence begins.

Ben Franklin famously said, "Those who would give up essential Liberty, to purchase a little temporary Safety, deserve neither Liberty nor Safety." Words to heed as we reestablish our core values.

The game ended 17--10 in favor of Princeton.

Weather plays a major role in Vasaloppet activities, and this year's 16th annual Mora Vasaloppet Fund-raiser, on Saturday, Jan. 11, was no exception. Joe LeTendre who is as much a tradition as the fund-raiser itself, was scheduled to emcee. But on Saturday morning, he called from near Worthington, Minn. to report he was stuck in the aftermath of the blizzard that pounded southwestern Minnesota last week. Vasaloppet organizers sprang into action, determining that the Worthington Airport was open and locating board member-pilot Pat Gorham via cell phone. LeTendre was flown into Mora and entertained the crowd with his usual blend comedy and auctioneering.

It started after the arrival of the snowmaker in 2016 when a small group of volunteers, with ASV track loaders, tractors and spreaders took on the essential task of loading, hauling and spreading the snow from the piles made by the snowmaker. They gradually become known as the Snow Farmers. (To get an idea of the amount of effort, about 2,000 loads are hauled to cover an 18km loop.) The Snow Farmers' name and efforts spread beyond the community. Magazine articles are written, and later their story will hit public radio at the national level. In the spring of 2018 the Snow Farmers are named Minnesota State High School Nordic Ski Coaches Association's Volunteers of the Year.

Picture perfect wedding day photography tips

Few things document weddings more effectively than photographs. Carefully curated wedding albums and portraits hung on walls serve as daily reminders of a couple's special day.

Leave ample time

A carefully orchestrated timeline can ensure photos are the best they can be. Why? Because a couple who is relaxed and not overwhelmed will notice that attitude translates to their photographs. When planning wedding timelines, couples should leave ample opportunities for getting dressed, chatting with the wedding party and going through various photography settings to grab great photos, advise the experts at Martha Stewart.

Put together a short list

The photographer will have his or her ideas of which shots to cover, but a couple with specific goals in mind should relay that information to their photographer. For example, if a grandparent is getting up in years, request some solo photos of that person so you can look back on happy times together. Certain couples want to be snapped posing with a beloved pet. Putting that on the list helps ensure it will happen.

Enlist a family photo coordinator

If the photographer does not have his or her own assistant, recruit someone who is assertive to help wrangle everyone for the family shots. Attempt to get family photos when family members are relaxed but not too far rumpled by dancing or having a good time.

Play your style safe

A wedding day is not a time for the bride or groom to try a dramatic new style, according to photographer Amanda Lamb. Resist the urge for a daring cut or color. It's also likely not the place to try out new facial hair or heavy makeup. A couple unaccustomed to the way they look may be shy in front of the camera.

Delve into the details

Prepare wedding details, like gowns, shoes, accessories, etc., in advance to save time once the photographer arrives, suggests Desi Mendoza, a pro from Dez and Tam Photography. Invest in a beautiful hanger for the wedding gown as well, because you may want to photograph that on its own.

Learn to pose

Couples can practice posing in front of mirrors to get a feel for body positions that put them in their best light. A photographer's advice in regard to posture is invaluable as well. Create space between arms and the body and learn how to angle the body so you look your best.

Photos will capture wedding day memories forever. Couples can put themselves in the best positions for success by following some photography guidelines.

Mustangs cancel Flyer's flight, win 49-45

BY NICK HOFFMAN NEWS@MORAMINN.COM

Both Little Falls and Mora's boys basketball defenses were very aggressive, making it tough for scorers in Mora's 49-45 victory on Thursday, Jan. 6. Mora made the better adjustments to Little Falls' dribble attack to make the difference in the outcome of the Mora started utilizing their weak side defense to stop the Flyers' dump off passes, which gave them some easy buckets in the first half.

"In the second half, we ran our defense as it should have looked and moved. That was something we struggled with in the first half," said head coach Curt Grachek.

Little Falls only scored seven field goals in the second half. In contrast, Mora only had eight field goals in the second half. "Little Falls does a really good job of switching their defenses throughout the game. We had to constantly adjust and switch our offense to adjust to their defense, preventing us from getting in a good rhythm offensively," said Grachek.

Because both teams brought their "A" defensive-game, turnovers played a big role in the game. Little Falls forced Mora to turn the ball over 19 times, and Mora turned Little Falls over 14 times.

The Mustangs did a great job of sharing the ball throughout the game, featuring 10 assists and three different players contributing double-digit points. Grachek said. 'We are doing a good job finding our open teammates. We've been improving in that area throughout the season and I see us getting better at trusting each other.'

Sharing and trusting each other led to Dallas Fix, Gage Braidey and Max Sampson each scoring 10 points. James Oslin was close behind with eight points and hauled in eight rebounds. Max Balmer had five points, Jonah Smart had four points and 10 rebounds, and Dom Beaulieu scored two. Austin Neu led Little Falls with 12 points with their second leading scorer, Zach Gwost, contributing eight.

Grachek commented about the team following the game, "It wasn't the prettiest win but we got the job done. As inexperienced as this team is, we continue to learn from every game.'

Despite their inexperience on the varsity court, Mora will take their 8-2 record and face East Central on Thursday, Jan. 13 and Friday, Jan. 14 vs a hot Milaca team, at home.

The game was quite clean; the only penalty of the game occurred in the second period by the Dragons, but the Blue Devils could not muster much from the extra attacker. The Dragons continued with offensive pressure scoring three goals early in the second to put the Dragons up 5-0 going into the third. Arissa Ryberg (assisted by Erin Radeke and Samantha Root), Jennae Szucs (assisted by Youngbauer and Lexa Valvoda) and Solei Olson (assisted by Root) all scored for the Dragons in that period.

The Dragons added two more goals in the third period to end the offensive outburst. Root (assisted by Abby Aagaard and Rydberg) and Rhiannon Ashworth (assisted by Emma Hermanson and Peyton Perreault) both scored the last two goals. The final score was 7-0 in favor of the Dragons who improved their record to 6-9-1. Coach Aagaard praised his team effort saying, "We had a solid complete game by everyone. We had 12 players earning points; Solei Olsen scored her first varsity goal, and Kendall Steele got her first Varsity assist. We had pressure in the offensive zone most of the evening putting 74 shots on goal. This was our first shut out for the girls high school hockey program," noted Aagard.

Final tax levies approved

BY KIRSTEN FAURIE

EDITOR@MORAMINN.COM

Local government units have finalized their 2022 budgets and levies; each will impact local property taxes in their own way.

Property taxes are based on levies set by local governments (a.k.a. "taxing units") and the value and classification of a property. Local taxing units can include your county, township, school district and city or town.

These local governments use property taxes to help pay for things like libraries, schools, roads, fire protection, police, public health, parks and other services.

Typically, each property is taxed by several taxing units. For example, each property in Kanabec County is taxed by the county, a school district and a city or township.

Every September, each government unit reviews budgets and determines how much money they must levy from taxpayers to fund those budgets.

Governments must first set a preliminary or proposed levy. Final levies are approved before Dec. 31 and can be less than the preliminary levy, but not more.

These levies determine (in part) how much property owners pay in property taxes in the year 2022.
