The Joy in Grief and Sorrow

While we don't normally think of grieving for a loved one as something that brings joy, or that mourning can also contain a joyful aspect, the fact that families come together to celebrate the life of their loved one clearly contains something joyful within it. Siblings and other relatives who may have grown distant find time to communicate their love for each other and share their feelings and experiences with their family. As we remember and communicate aspects of the departed person's life, we often realize what a good and blessed life they had. This doesn't mean that we forget their defects, but these often fade into the background as their positive characteristics become more prominent. And if we believe in the afterlife, there is the joyful hope that we will see our dearly departed again, and that they are now reunited with their previously deceased family and friends. In sum, we should realize that positive and negative emotions can co-exist. A time of grief doesn't preclude a sense of joy and amid mourning we may also be experiencing a time of great personal growth which has meaning for our lives.

-Christopher Simon

Huge Inventory

Our collection of top-of-the-range mobility scooters come in three different types: travel mobility scooters, mid size mobility scooters and large Class 3 mobility scooters. This ensures we have something for everyone, regardless of your unique individual circumstances and no matter what your budget might be.

Scooters are an ideal solution for the loss of any level of mobility, allowing you to get around without assistance.

Many power lift recliners have the capability to move the headrest and footrest independently, something often referred to as infinite positioning. Golden MaxiComfort allows for infinite positioning, but you're not left with that uncomfortable gap between the seat and headrest.
