

I Want To Be A Desert Farmer 10-2-2024

When I was 7 years old, I grew a watermelon from watermelon seeds. I ate it and it was sweeter than most. That made me want to be a farmer. I like to eat the fruit I grow and take care of animals. Farmers work inside and outside, and that is what I want to do.

When I grow up I want to be a permaculture farmer who does a little bit of everything. I would dig pits in the ground to catch water for my plants and animals. I also want to sell trees, seeds, fruit, chicken eggs, cows milk, and meat. My farm will use robots to measure the temperature and make it warm for my plants, and animals at night.

There are many ways to be a farmer and here is my way. I will take business classes to learn how to sell and keep track of my money. To become a better farmer I will get a bachelor's degree from college and study engineering to make machines for my farm. I am also learning how to be a farmer now. I help my sisters take care of our chickens. I grow bean, corn, and strawberry seedlings and sell them at a market. I am also practicing now by changing the soil at my home in the desert by putting scrap foods on the ground.

Before I grew my first watermelon, I didn't know what I wanted to be when I grow up, but now I am sure I will be a farmer.