Mac-backed Tangle-townies shove off on shady mission

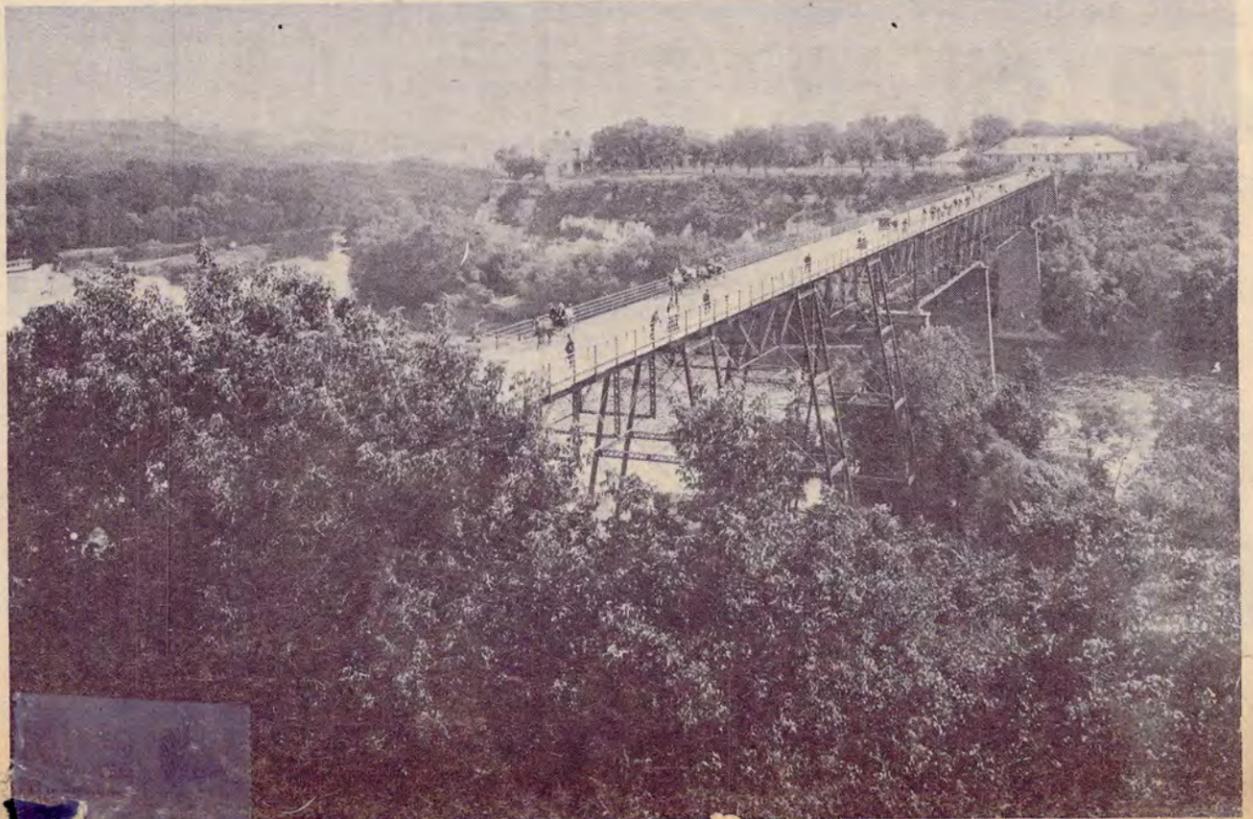

Macalester College and residents of the nearby Tangle-town neighborhood will launch a cooperative landscaping project with a tree-planting ceremony at 10:00 a.m. Friday, October 12 in front of the house at 1682 Lincoln Ave.

The ceremony will kick off a joint college-neighborhood project aimed at beautifying the boulevards and yards of up to 400 homeowners in Tangle-town.

Macalester has provided the funds enabling the St.

Paul Shade Tree Program to plant larger boulevard trees than was originally planned for the area. The college is also taking part in a cooperative purchasing agreement that will give Tangle-town residents a substantial discount on trees, shrubs, perennials and other landscaping materials for their yards.

And as an added impetus, Macalester will furnish the sod needed to cover the boulevard areas where diseased elms have been removed.

In case you hadn't heard, the city of St. Paul is celebrating its 125th anniversary this week. While we couldn't round up photographs that were quite that old, we did happen upon several enlightening images of the Villager's circulation area which are scattered through these pages. ## St. Paul plans birthday party and parade Oct. 13

A birthday parade honoring the 125th anniversary of St. Paul's incorporation in 1854 will step out from Lambert's Landing in downtown St. Paul at 2:00 p.m. Saturday, October 13.

Receiving special recognition as part of the parade will be St. Paul's pioneers and homecoming visitors. Pioneer businesses, schools, churches, neighborhoods, nationalities and descendants of the city's earliest settlers will be featured in the parade from Lambert's Landing, where the city got its start, to the Civic Center, where a birthday party is planned from 4:00 to 11:00 p.m.

Area colleges cope differently with prospect of fewer students

by Don Freeman

The three colleges located in the Highland area—Macalester, St. Catherine's and St. Thomas—are known for their distinguishing traits:

St. Thomas is the largest private college in Minnesota, and the only Catholic co-educational institution in the Twin Cities; the College of St. Catherine is the third largest women's college—and the largest Catholic women's college—in the U.S., and the sole women's college in the metropolitan area; Macalester, which has the broadest international program of any school in the nation, counts more nationalities among its student population than any other college, public or private, in the Midwest.

Yet despite these distinguishing features, all three institutions currently face a common problem: rising costs and the prospect of declining enrollments in the 1980s.

Item: Most of those people who were born during the so-called "Baby Boom" of the 1950s and started attending college at the age of 18 have already graduated.

Item: Enrollment in St. Paul public schools (grades

K-12) is down 1,604 from last year's total of 34,547. Figures released recently by the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis show a 8 percent drop in elementary school enrollments and a 0.5 percent drop at the high school level.

Item: Nearly 100 colleges were closed down in the U.S. in the past decade.

Macalester, St. Thomas and St. Catherine's have yet to feel the pinch of declining enrollments, however. This year's enrollment figures at the three colleges are either on a par with, or better than, student populations in previous years.

MAGIC NUMBER

Macalester's enrollment reached a peak at the end of the 1960s, when nearly 2,000 students were attending the school. During the early to mid 70s, however, enrollment dropped, mainly because Macalester was experiencing financial troubles and because of outside complaints regarding the direction the school was taking (for example, the on-campus Vietnam protests, and the rapid expansion of Mac's minority program).

Macalester's turbulent years of the 60s have since faded, and for the past three years the school has operated with a balanced budget. Moreover, Macalester's administration expects this year's enrollment to equal last year's count—1,763, the highest number of students in five years.

According to Macalester's director of admissions, Carol Stack, "We have been fortunate over the years because there has not been a decline in the freshman class and among transfer students. . .Right now, considering the number of faculty members and the facilities that Mac has to offer, we are exactly the size we want to be—1,750 is our magic number."

Officially, there are 3,183 undergraduate students attending the College of St. Thomas this fall. One reason CST is able to boast of being the largest private college in the state is because it offers graduate programs in management, religious education and business administration. Graduate school enrollment for 1979 is 1,601, which combined with the number of undergraduates, gives CST an overall enrollment of 4,784 students, higher than 4,482 in 1978 and 4,139 in 1977, the first year that the school went co-ed.

CST's director of admissions, Charles Murphy, said, "Our enrollment has been going up so much that it enables us to hold tuition costs down." Until recently, CST accepted students throughout the recruiting year. For the present school year, however, there were such a high number of freshmen who wanted to attend the college that it had to stop taking applications last January. The application deadline for the 1980-81 school year will probably be sometime in December.

Although Lorraine Jensen, director of admissions for the College of St. Catherine, said that it is "rather frightening to look into the 1980s," she is satisfied with this year's enrollment at CSC—2,286, slightly higher than last year's 2,220. "If we can hold a steady enrollment," Jensen said, "we will be very pleased."

Despite the auspicious enrollments at all three colleges this year, Rich Kerousky, Macalester's director of news and publications, stated, "If any college expects to survive the 1980s, it must plan now." At Macalester, administrators, trustees and students have put together a document entitled "The Long Range Plan," an inquiry which examines in detail the prospect of a declining student population. Among other things, the plan has stated that Macalester's enrollment cannot fall below 1,500 without severely damaging the school's existing programs.

"The Long Range Plan" also concludes that Mac's academic characteristics will not change much in the future. In contrast to what some other private colleges have done, Macalester does not foresee itself offering a graduate program or opening a law school. According to Kerousky, "We are not looking for new programs so much as to bolster the old ones." Macalester, Kerousky feels, will stay alive through the 1980s because the college has earned a venerable reputation in its 105-year history.

GOING CO-ED

Unlike Macalester, the College of St. Catherine is offering a new program this year, in part as a means to attract more students. CSC's "Weekend College" is open to both men and women who cannot attend class during the normal work week. By attending classes every other weekend through the "Weekend College" plan, a student can earn a bachelor's degree in four years. According to Lorraine Jensen, "Weekend College has gotten off to a fantastic start. We aimed at having 70 students enrolled, but we now have 170."

CSC also offers a "Re-entry Adults Program," designed to help people who have been out of the educational system for a number of years ease back into the college atmosphere. And there is a "Women in Management" extracurricular course taught at CSC, aimed at women who would like to advance in the field of management. One hundred-nineteen women are currently enrolled in this evening program.

Undoubtedly, St. Thomas has changed more dramatically than the other two area colleges in its effort to deal with anticipated declining enrollments. Explaining one reason why CST decided to switch from an all-male to a co-ed institution, Murphy said, "We were looking into the demographic factors of the 1980s. . . We wanted to get into co-ed while we still had a strong enrollment." In 1976, the last year CST enrolled males only, the overall student population was 3,650. Since 1977, when CST went co-ed, the school has increased its size by more than 1,130 students. This year's freshman class is composed of 42 percent women, and 40 percent of all transfer students are female.

One of the more interesting questions is how CST's decision has affected St. Catherine's stability. CSC's Jensen commented, "This has cut down somewhat on our cooperation with St. Thomas." The two institutions, for example, no longer jointly recruit high school students. But, Jensen emphasized, CSC and CST still work closely together in terms of academic, as well as community, activities. (Both colleges, along with Macalester, Augsburg and Hamline belong to the Associated Colleges of the Twin Cities.)

Although the number of women's colleges in the state has shrunk drastically in the last decade, CSC has no intention of going co-ed. Jensen feels that it is easier for all-male schools to make that transition. After all, she said, "It would be hard for us to recruit young men and have them say, 'How's your football team?'"

Since both CSC and CST are Catholic institutions, Murphy explained, "It seems logical that the applicant pool has an overlap. We know that some women who apply here are also looking into St. Catherine's . . . We have enrolled students that formerly would have gone there."

Jensen said she is "convinced that every student needs to have options. There is a need for both public and private education, and single sex as well as co-ed colleges. A women's college has a great deal to offer to women."

Despite CSC's and CST's academic reputations, Kerousky stated, "The type of student who comes to Macalester usually does not consider either of the other two schools." One obvious reason is because Macalester is not closely aligned with the Catholic church. (Religions vary at Macalester—from Jewish to Muslim. In fact, although Mac is affiliated with the Presbyterian church, Presbyterian students at Mac are a minority.)

Secondly, while the dominant major at CST is business, and at CSC nursing, areas that attract the most students at Mac are in the humanities. Kerousky said, "While more and more colleges are becoming career-oriented, Macalester has reaffirmed its commitment to the classic liberal arts."

Since 80 percent of the students attending CSC and CST are Minnesota residents, Macalester—where 47 percent of all students come from 46 other states, has a more expensive recruiting program.

However, CSC plans to expand its efforts outside the Midwest to attract future students. "We are doing the same thing other colleges are doing, in terms of recruiting students," Jensen said. Students and faculty members at CSC are becoming more involved with admissions representatives, and telephoning students who apply to the school.

By going co-ed, St. Thomas, of course, has had to change its entire recruiting program.

Carol Stack said Macalester does not anticipate any major changes in recruiting. "Mac has always been heavily represented from Chicago to the northeast portion of the U.S.," she said. She expects this general pattern of recruiting will continue, except that Mac will now look more toward the western states for prospective students.

Kerousky admitted that today there is much more intense competition among colleges to attract students, mainly because "people are looking around more cautiously than ever before due to high tuition rates." Students enrolled at Macalester this year will pay $4,175 (not including room and board), compared to last year's $3,900.

Both CST and CSC have raised their tuition rates $240 over last year. A student attending CST this year pays $2,800; at CSC $2,860.

Administrators at all three colleges listed the energy crunch and the high cost of living in general as the major factors attributing to tuition increases.

There are several reasons to explain why Macalester's tuition is approximately $1,375 higher than the fees charged at CSC and CST. First, Mac has a slightly lower student/teacher ratio.

Secondly, CST and CSC employ either priests or nuns as faculty members.

Ten percent of CST's faculty are archdiocesan priests who in exchange for room and board, are paid a smaller wage than lay professors. The same holds true for the Sisters of St. Joseph of Carondelet, who make up 25 percent of the St. Catherine's faculty. Macalester, on the other hand, derives no such benefits from religious affiliations.

Thirdly, Macalester's tenure rate among faculty members is high—close to 80 percent—compared to CSC's (55 percent) and CST's (35 percent). When a professor is given tenure, he or she is pretty much insured a lifetime job at that institution.

Though one would think that costs are generally higher at colleges located in the city than those that are established in a rural milieu, CST's and CSC's comprehensive tuition rates (which do include room and board) are actually $700 to $1,875 lower than what is charged at three private institutions in southern Minnesota—St. Olaf (whose comprehensive tuition is $5,050), Gustavus Adolphus ($5,100) and Carlton ($6,175). A student attending any of these three colleges pays about the same amount as the student who lives on campus while attending Macalester—$5,675.

The housing directors at CSC, St. Thomas and Macalester all agree that, in contrast to the late 60s and early 70s when most students preferred to live off campus, today there is a trend toward more and more on-campus living. This they say is mainly due to inflationary factors, and because most landlords prefer 9- to 12-month leases.

But there are other reasons why students want to stay on campus. Colleen Hegrans, director of housing at CSC, said, "In the past, living on campus was shunned because dormitory rules were too rigid. But today things are more relaxed, and students are treated as mature adults."

Macalester's dean of students, Mary Lundblad, believes living on campus is becoming more attractive to students because "there are educational programs going on inside residence halls." Mac, for example, offers facilities for arts and crafts, and night classes are often taught in dorm lounges.

At St. Thomas there are long waiting lists of students who wish to move into the dorms. CST's on-campus housing program can accommodate a maximum of only 885 students. Therefore, the great majority of CST students must commute.

When CST went co-ed three years ago, additional dormitory space was built on top of Murray Hall. In 1978, a women's dorm was built, but this year, as the percentage of women has increased, the men took over the women's dorm, while the women moved into a larger men's dorm. St. Thomas has also purchased four houses located near the campus.

CST administrators are presently trying to decide whether to build another dorm or else purchase a nearby apartment building. "Something has to be done soon," Murphy said, "because we are constantly stymied by not having enough space to put students in."

Macalester is confronted with a similar strain on housing. Nearly two-thirds of Mac's overall student body lives on-campus. Currently, there are people temporarily staying in dorm lounges. But rather than building a new residence hall Lundblad hopes that some of the existing space on campus will be remodeled to accommodate more students.

CSC has close to 1,000 people—nearly 50 percent of its student population—living in residence halls this fall. Besides a dorm and two apartment buildings located on campus, CSC rents space from St. Joseph's Hospital in downtown St. Paul.

Compared to 1978, room and board was increased $40 this year at both CSC ($1,440-$1,620 per student) and CST ($1,350-$1,750 per student). A student at Macalester pays $1,500 for room and board—$100 more than last year.

PROGNOSIS

All three areas colleges have already begun to deal with the question of survival through the 1980s when enrollments can be expected to drop and costs to go up. Yet each has responded to the challenge in its own way.

Macalester is confident that the liberal arts student will continue to find what he's looking for at Mac; this, despite the ever-increasing price tag on that educational package.

There will always be young women who opt for an all-women's college, and St. Catherine's, one of the few such institutions that continue to provide that option, can be expected to draw heavily from that group. That fact, plus the creation of auxiliary programs like Weekend College and Women in Management, put CSC in a solid position to weather the 1980s.

St. Thomas' strong business program, its graduate and evening divisions, and its decision to go co-ed indicate a ready willingness to change as its needs and the needs of its student population change—and suggest a favorable prognosis for continued success.

Bookslinger finds a future as a friend to the 'small press'

by Molly O'Brien

A collection of Sufi poetry covered with Nigerian goatskin selling for $225, translations of 12th-century French troubadours, a collection of poetry printed on pages processed from mulberry leaves, another whose cover originated as a sweatshirt—hardly what you'd call standard bookstore fare.

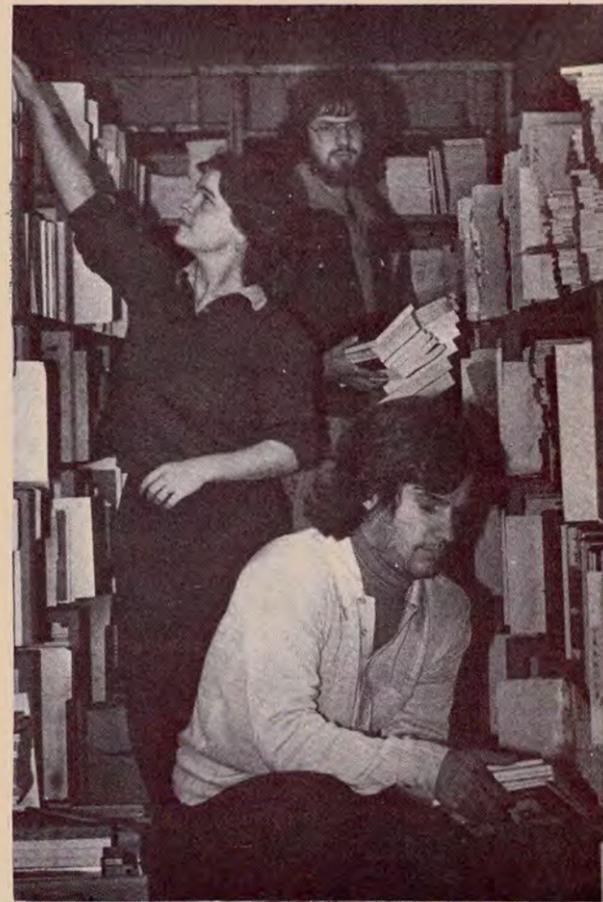

But behind Helleloid's paint and wallpaper store at 2163 Ford Pkwy. is the narrow two-story office that houses Bookslinger, a place where bookstores can order such exotica. Owned and operated by Jim Sitter, Bookslinger is a "middleman" service for literary magazines, books and poetry published by the non-commercial small press.

In all, Bookslinger (formerly called Truck Press and Distribution Service) handles 3000 titles from 200 small publishers in five countries, with an emphasis on the American small press. According to Sitter, his primary customers are bookstores located in Boston, New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles and the Twin Cities, but he fills orders from all 50 states.

There's no problem finding printers who emphasize new and unusual works of literature and poetry, he explained. The problem comes with their distribution—it's either regional, poorly run, not set up to supply bookstores, or of limited selection.

Reasons for these difficulties stem from shortages of manpower and funds needed for national promotion, Sitter said. With one full-time and three part-time employees plus four successive grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, Bookslinger has the wherewithal to pool small press selections for distribution from a single source.

"Bookslinger creates a focus for fine literature in a country where that's not accessible by the Fifth Avenue publishers in New York," Sitter said. "A big poetry seller for them is 5,000 to 8,000 copies; a best seller for me is 500.

"They're not publishing a lot of good work by new people who deserve it. Big publishers don't feel it would be commercially marketable and frankly, it wouldn't be," he explained.

Established by David Wilk in 1976, Bookslinger by late 1977 had expanded enough so that Wilk hired Sitter. Sitter bought the business that December when Wilk left to become director of literature for the National Endowment for the Arts.

Today, Sitter describes the increase in small-scale, noncommercial publishing as a "renaissance." Over the past 20 to 25 years, print technology has become cheaper and faster, making the publication of modest books more affordable, he explained.

Still, about 90 percent of these small press operations lose money throughout their publishing lifespans, which typically are brief, according to Sitter. It's an "affair of the heart" because these publishers "feel the writer must be seen (i.e., read)," he said.

Typically, they are one- or two-person operations working out of someone's basement, according to Sitter. A couple of publishers he knows print about 90 titles but most produce in the neighborhood of three to 30.

While most of these books aren't of the Nigerian goatskin variety, there has also been something of a renaissance in the actual process of making books, Sitter added. Many are now handmade with the idea that the book, and not just its contents, should be a work of art, he said.

Collections of these literary magazines and books are presently on display and available for borrowing at five libraries in the seven-county metropolitan area—Minneapolis' main branch, Burnsville, St. Anthony Park, Macalester College and all branches within the Washington County system—through a project funded by the Regional Council for the Arts.

Sitter, who supplied the libraries with the collections, said the year-long project should serve as an indicator of public interest. If public response is good, he hopes the libraries decide to include small press publications in future budgets.

PROTESTANT PROTEST

To the editor:

As public relations director for the Northern Ireland-British-Protestant Information Office, I would like to present the Protestant-Majority-Loyalist side of the Northern Ireland situation. Our group is only interested in countering the anti-British, anti-Protestant atmosphere generated through the news media. (Ref. the Minnesota Irish National Caucus article in the September 12 Highland Villager.)

The Irish National Caucus has only one aim: to force the United Kingdom province of Ulster into an alliance with the Roman Catholic-dominated Republic of Ireland, against the will of the vast majority of Northern Ireland—the British people. We all have relatives living in Northern Ireland, we have spent a fair amount of time in Ulster living with our friends and relatives, and we know what the vast majority wants, and has shown they want by voting over and over again—even in a UN plebiscite—to remain part of the United Kingdom, which they have been since the 12th century.

Dr. McCafferty talks about the large number of our troops tied up in one part of the United Kingdom when they should be helping to protect all of Europe from Communist invasion. He is right; it is horrible that our army must be tied up in Ulster to protect our women and children from being murdered in cold blood by the IRA butchers who claim they are fighting for the Roman Catholics. In fact, the IRA is getting arms from shameful Americans and from the Communists (one wing of the IRA is Marxist).

Dr. McCafferty is also correct in stating that the Protestant Ulster Defense Association wants the army out, but only so they can get at the source of the IRA and its sympathizers.

We in Northern Ireland have been British for hundreds of years and we will remain so. The Republic of Ireland has stated it wants our army in this part of the United Kingdom to fight the IRA which has done so much harm to Eire. Our answer to the Northern Ireland problem is for all of Ireland to once more unite with the rest of the British people under the Crown—for the future prosperity of all the British peoples. England is not perfect—no country is—but we feel our destiny lies in continued unity with the United Kingdom.

Program offered for dads, infants

A four-week class in father-infant stimulation will be offered from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays beginning October 24 at Groveland Park School, 2045 St. Clair Ave. Subjects for discussion will include infant massage, baby exercise, and constructive play.

The instructor will be Rick Bell, who has led similar sessions at St. John's Hospital and is currently working toward his doctorate in family social science.

The program is offered through Groveland Community Education. Cost is $6.00. To enroll, call 690-5037 before October 16.

It's billed as "A Silver Salute" and it'll be just that when the Twin Cities Opera Guild hosts its 25th anniversary Candlelight Dinner on Saturday, October 20 at the St. Paul Radisson. Pictured here, entertainment coordinator Irma Wachtler, 1863 Eleanor Ave., gets a pre-dinner taste of the tunes to be performed by the evening's featured artists, Newton Wayland and Jan Curtis. The popular vocal and keyboard duo will present selections ranging from favorite Broadway musical to familiar operatic arias. Ticket information for the annual black tie benefit is available by calling Mrs. Wachtler at 698-5386 or Mrs. M. William Hart at 699-0551.

Sheridan improvements in offing

Although it's no news to them, the people living in the 800-plus homes along Sheridan Avenue by Homecroft School are in the midst of putting up with three months of dirt, noise and confusion.

But, according to the St. Paul Department of Public Works, it will be well worth it. By December 1 they should have a new street, sidewalks and street lighting. And as with most work like this in St. Paul, it doesn't cost the residents a cent—not directly anyway.

Gasoline taxes, some federal money and local bonds adding up to $317,683.44 are paying for the construction, which is divided into nine steps.

First, they'll build new catch basins, then remove pavement, construct curbs and gutters, install street light wiring, construct sidewalks where needed, construct driveway aprons, install asphalt pavement, install street lighting, and finally re-sod the boulevards.

Completion of the first eight steps is anticipated by late fall. The re-sodding will probably have to wait until spring.

Bohemian Bash booked in area

The St. Paul Czech Folk Dancers will sponsor a Bohemian Bash from 8:00 p.m. to midnight Friday, October 19 at the CSPA Hall, 381 Michigan St. Setups and beer will be available, with dancing to the music of the Friday Night Music Club. For tickets ($2.50 each) call Babe Vanyo at 225-5874.

Misch-Masch

by Maurice Mischke

So here we are, right in the midst of the week that's been designated for the celebration of St. Paul's 125th anniversary as a city. In deference to Columbus, who bears a bit of indirect responsibility for our being here and rates a holiday at this particular time, we're being asked to "discover St. Paul"... although I suppose re-discover might be a more accurate request for most of us.

Personally, I'll have to confess that I missed most of the first 100 years, with only occasional visits to this thriving community until the spring of 1954. That means I was here when St. Paul's centennial of its incorporation could have been celebrated. If it was marked to any great degree, I certainly don't remember a thing about it. Perhaps sandwiched, as it was, between Minnesota's territorial centennial in 1949 and the state centennial in 1958, it was somehow allowed to pass by without a great deal of fanfare.

But to be very honest, the downtown area of St. Paul was looking pretty shabby in those days before the Metropolitan Improvement Committee got the Capital Centre project underway, with the resulting impetus to redevelopment. There really wasn't that much to "discover" at that time except, perhaps, the friendly people. Quite a physical change has been wrought in that downtown area in those intervening 25 years.

I'm still constantly amazed by the fact that so many of the people one meets here in St. Paul have, in fact, lived here all their lives. I'm all but certain that the percentage of native-born Minneapolitans would not be nearly so high.

I'm not being at all critical when I say that. There are some great advantages in living "among your own" as it were. To a lesser degree, that's even true if you come from other possibly smaller communities within the area of influence of this metro area. You are constantly running into people with whom you can identify in some way, establish rapport because you both know some of the same people, and thereby stay a bit in touch with your past. And I guess that means something to me.

Let me give you a concrete personal example of the point I'm trying to make. All of this comes from reading both metro papers last Saturday morning. First I see a feature story in the Trib, occasioned by the fact that a brother and sister from the Renner family of Walker were both moving up in the world. I don't know Sister Emmanuel Renner who was being inaugurated as president of the College of St. Benedict at St. Joseph that day, but soon-to-be federal judge Robert Renner was in my study hall when he was a freshman at St. John's University.

After enjoying that little success story, I moved on to the sports page. There I run into another feature on a quintet of Boyd sisters, who are currently the top five runners on the Buffalo (Minnesota) High School Girls' cross country team. That, too, rang a bell. I knew Bobby Boyd (the papa) at St. John's—in fact, he lived in the room next door. I knew he had a store in Buffalo, but I don't recall seeing him since my graduation. I knew the girl's grandpa, and also their uncle, a real football competitor, who later gave his life as a pilot in World War II. But I didn't know Bobby had seven girls.

Then on to the Pioneer Press. Another familiar face... Cy Carpenter, president of the Minnesota Farmers Union. Cy was a Sauk Centre farm boy, a year or so behind me in high school. Haven't seen him in almost 40 years. One of these days I'll have to drop in on him. But do you see what I mean? If I had moved to the West Coast or Chicago, Phoenix or Florida, I wouldn't be constantly enjoying (and sometimes commiserating with) all these associations of the past.

Now I'm not suggesting that those who pull stakes are necessarily hurting on that score. But it does seem to add a dimension to life to be able to identify and associate with those whose paths you've crossed years before. Or how do you feel about it?

Allow me to introduce the new Villager sports column "Cody's Corner" and a bit of an overall sports "section," too. Tom Cody, a 27-year-old teacher and coach at Highland Catholic, will fill all that white space. Tom, a graduate of Cretin High and Colorado State, has been coaching boys' basketball and volleyball, and girls' softball at Hi-C for the past six years. Although he's married, he still finds time for slo-pitch ball and power volleyball, which is what? Getting the ball rammed down your throat?

Cody also assists with the Tapemark Charity Pro-Am golf tourney at Southview each year, which Bob Klas and his father, executives of the Tapemark firm, are always into—up to their proverbial hips. Here's a note to area coaches and playground directors—if you have any interesting local sports information you'd like to see in the Villager, please drop a note or call Tom Cody at 1720 Field Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55116, 699-4157. He'd like to hear from you. By the way, Tom got a little citywide notoriety of sorts when he was selected as one of the superfans by one of our St. Paul dailies. Darned if I can remember which one. Your editor, Mike, and I are both convinced that "Cody's Corner" and his other sporty contributions will add another valuable dimension to what certainly must be already one of your favorite community newspapers. (How many do you get?)

Which reminds me. This is also National Newspaper Week... a legitimate time to pat ourselves on the back and all that. Well, I'd like to turn that around a bit to thank our entire staff for its dedication under the fortnightly duress of unrelenting deadlines. And just because we pay for good service doesn't mean we shouldn't recognize the value of reliable suppliers—Galley, Inc. on the typesetting and keylines; Red Wing Publishing Co. (the daily newspaper plant) on the plates and printing; and Peterson Home Mail Delivery on about 60% of the delivery. Beyond that are some 22 home carriers who do a conscientious, yeoman-like job come rain or shine, sleet or snow. Not to forget two area supervisors, Pat Walker and Judy Wolf. Our thanks to them all... and if it weren't for National Newspaper Week, I suppose I would have been able to express this bit of gratitude ere Thanksgiving Day, but would I have remembered?

If you were to think about it, what area in this city do you think is most deficient in terms of nearby playground, park or open space? If you said the Mattocks school vicinity you'd be absolutely correct. It's been known for a long time that this particular area has been short-changed in that regard. That's why the District 14 Plan provided for that type of development in the event Mattocks School closed. That's why the Southwest Area District has been pushing hard for the same idea. Now that Mattocks is no more and the school district has declared the property as surplus—available to the city for a buck—I hope we don't blow the opportunity to create a nice little park there for outdoor activity. The building on the site has been a bit of a bugaboo and also provided the Mayor's office with a temptation to convert the property for use by the Red School House, a private school for Indians. That in itself wouldn't be a problem, but this corner feels that this is no time to let the opportunity for a much-needed recreation area slip by. The concept seems to have the necessary council support with Joanne Showalter, Len Levine and Ron Mattox already on record in favor of providing this blessing to the neighborhood. I know that a lot of young families are moving in to that area and the number of youngsters is growing. Perhaps it behooves those of you who want this open space rec area to become a reality, to call the Mayor's office and city council people to let them know how much it means to you. And good luck!

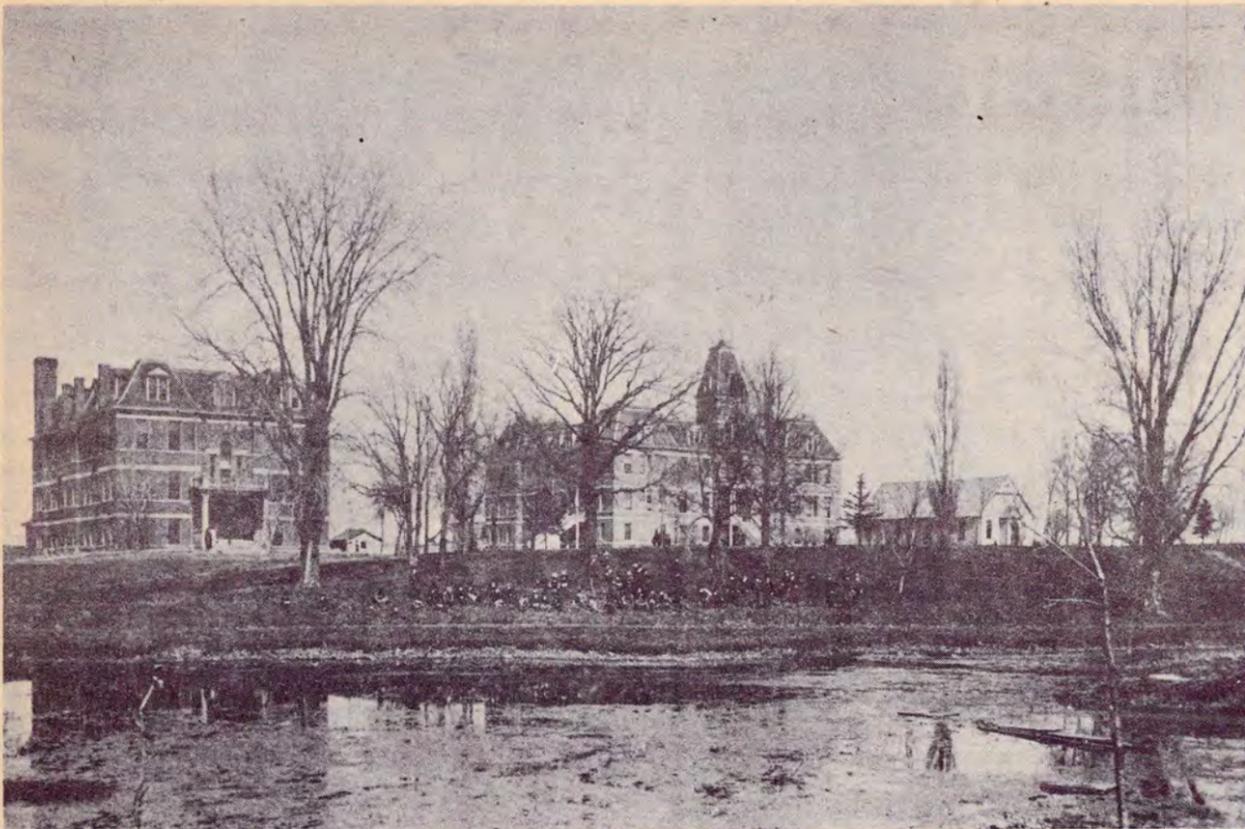

When ABBA, that successful young group of entertainers from Sweden, was in town recently, Jan and I agreed to go to hear them. I'd heard some of their records, so it sounded pretty good to me, although the kids wondered just how much we'd like it. Well, as it turned out I could easily dig the music, but darned if I could dig the decibel-level. They didn't build that Civic Center big enough to absorb that hellacious high volume. The next time I hear ABBA it's going to be near a volume control knob or else maybe ABBA EBAN, the Israeli diplomat.

Because of some unexpected company from out of town, I didn't get to Realty World Glassman's open house a week or so ago. But indirectly I heard it was a smashing success. Ron Glassman is another man who found a good use for an abandoned 7-11 site. According to figures I received recently, the Southland Corporation seems to close about two stores for every three they open up. Small-time entrepreneurs, much as you and I, would be out of business in short order if we allowed ourselves that many marketing mistakes. Apparently "Economy of Scale" is enough to cover lots of boobos.

"Taxpayer peril claimed in stadium flight" is what the Dispatch headline said. Shucks, when isn't the taxpayer in some kind of peril? Has the dome donnybrook made you dizzy by now? I bet Senator Jack Davies wishes he had thought of that petition for a referendum a little earlier. Would have saved a little money. Those Mill City boys have been moving ahead on that project, hell-bent and hoping there's no election.

On that heavy, if uncontroversial note, we're ready to move into the pilfered parting punchlines, to wit (or is that an overstatement): "A man tends to blame fate for other accidents, but feels personally responsible when he makes a hole in one." Ask any college student "The two most beautiful words in the English language are—"check enclosed!" And here's one you might find sometime at the Willowgate, in a Chinese fortune cookie: "Please disregard previous cookie!"

And as always you're totally free to disregard any or all of the above. Arrivederci, tutti.

Students at the College of St. Thomas, circa 1902, assemble by Lake Mennith. Behind them are, left to right, the Science Hall, the original building that had been a boys' school, and a frame chapel. For all we know, CST may have already begun its current habit of breaking its enrollment records every year...

School board approves plans for Minnehaha site development

by Richard Broderick

Development of the Minnehaha School site—vacant since June, 1978—came a little closer to fruition September 26 when the Minneapolis School Board approved a plan to transform the grounds into a complex of townhouses and cooperative apartments.

The plan, which was proposed by Diversified Equities Corporation (DEC) of Minneapolis, must now go before the City Planning Commission and City Council for another round of approvals.

DEC's proposal calls for the construction of 32 townhouses and the possible conversion of the empty school building into as many as 40 apartment units on the site at 5141 40th Ave. So. Both townhouses and apartments would be owner-occupied and would cost between $50,000 and $80,000.

Cooperative apartments differ from more traditional arrangements in that the occupants do not pay rent, but purchase shares in the corporation that owns the building and contribute to monthly up-keep.

Under the plan, the city would close 52nd St. between 40th and 41st Aves. So., and a mall with parking and green space would be developed. Additional parking would be provided by garages behind the apartment complex. DEC is even contemplating the construction of an underground parking lot beneath the school building.

The future of the site has been the subject of considerable controversy since the school's closing more than a year ago. This summer, seven different development plans were presented to a committee of Minnehaha residents, which then selected the proposal forwarded by DEC.

As of Villager press time, no date had been set for the hearing before the City Planning Commission.

WMCN takes to the air

The Twin Cities have a new radio station—albeit a small one—since Macalester College's WMCN-FM (97.1 on the dial) began broadcasting last Saturday, October 6.

Student-run WMCN (Macalester College Network) operates at a capacity of 10 watts. Listeners should be able to pick up the station's signal within a radius of two miles or more of the Macalester campus.

Station manager Joel Becker, a senior from Evanston, Ill., says the station will broadcast 24 hours a day with a format that includes "progressive" rock and jazz, news and public affairs programming.

"We are going to try to play music which isn't generally heard on other Twin Cities radio stations," he said. "We'll try to give the listener a taste of some of the other songs that an artist has recorded, in addition to playing music by artists that haven't achieved any great fame."

There are over 60 student volunteers on the WMCN staff. Each of the disc jockeys will work a program shift of three hours, one day a week.

The new FM station represents a big leap forward for the radio station at Macalester, Becker said. Until last Saturday, Macalester had had KMAC-AM, a carrier-current radio station that could be heard only in the Macalester residence halls.

Ceramics classes offered after school

The classes are open to all children in third grade and up. Call 292-6622 to register.

You may not recognize this intersection too easily, so we'll point out that in 1932, the hectic corner of Grand and Fairview bore few similarities to the same crossing today. As you look north on Fairview in 1979, you'll still note a drugstore on the southwest corner. But where have all the gas stations gone?

Just before summer 1979 becomes but a fleeting memory, we'd like to take this opportunity to show you how it looked to the first-place winners of the Jorgensen's Gifts and Clock Shop summer photography contest. To Tim Buel, 755 Mt. Curve Blvd., keeping cool meant a young man branching out for a somewhat tenuous nap in the woods (top). Laurie Doody, 2186 Pinehurst Ave., caught a young neighbor inspecting an anthill in a crack in the sidewalk (lower left). And Debbie Slagerman, 1040 S. Prior Ave., portrayed her one-year-old daughter Sarah (lower right), who seems cut out for a long, happy relationship with gardening.

Nazi-hunter Wiesenthal to speak on WWII criminals

Simon Wiesenthal, world-famous "Nazi hunter" and author of The Murderers Among Us, will speak on that topic at 8:00 p.m. Monday, November 12 at the Hamline University Field House. The program is co-sponsored by Hamline's Jewish Studies Program and the Jewish Community Relations Council, Anti-Defamation League of Minnesota and the Dakotas.

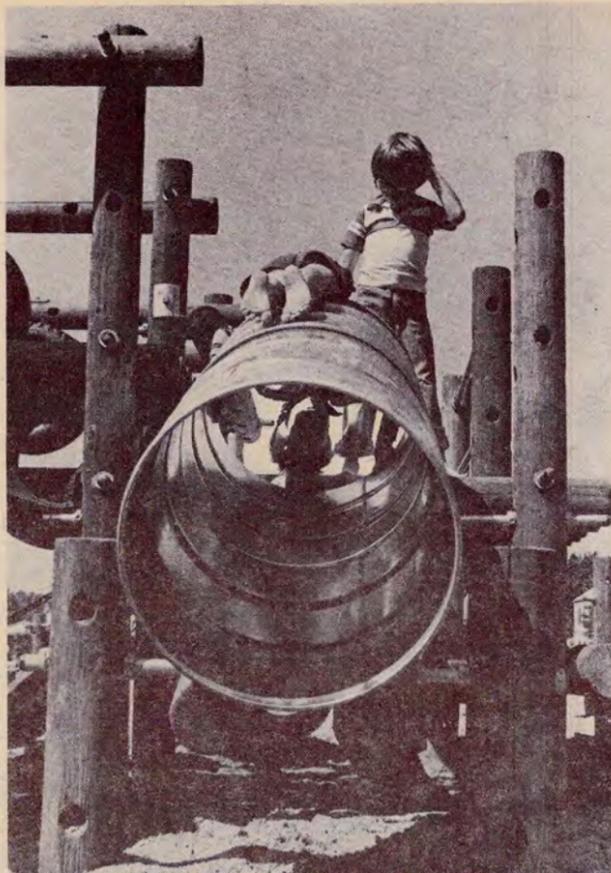

As founder and head of the Jewish Documentation Center in Vienna, Wiesenthal has located nearly 1,000 Nazi war criminals who participated in the Holocaust before and during World War II. In that period, an estimated 6,000,000 Jews and 5,000,000 Gypsies, Poles and other people died in German concentration camps.

Wiesenthal, himself a survivor of such a camp, has devoted his life to documenting the genocide and hunting down those of Hitler's followers who slipped through the Allied net and are believed to be still at large. "When history looks back," he explains, "I want people to know the Nazis weren't able to kill 11,000,000 people and get away with it." (Included in this number are 89 members of Wiesenthal's and his wife's families.)

Among his "finds" to date have been Adolf Eichmann, who administered the slaughter of the Jews for Hitler; Franz Murer, "The Butcher of Wilno"; and Erich Rajakowitsch, in charge of the "death transports" in the Netherlands.

Tickets for his talk are $3.00 for adults, $2.00 for students and senior citizens, and available by writing to Steve Derfler, Jewish Studies Program, Hamline University, 1536 Hewitt, St. Paul 55104. Checks should be made payable to Hamline University.

Just before sweater weather set in, a crew of area athletes mounted a full frontal attack on the Big Toy behind Horace Mann Elementary, 2001 Eleanor Ave. Most manmade creations that kids can always find use for—railings, spare tires, industrial-strength pipes (and a place to put superfluous tennies)—were thoughtfully included in the design. We can hardly wait to see what adaptations these kids will make when it snows... Photos by Jim Gehrz

Principal turns poet

My mother called me "Michael,"
To my dad, I was simply "Mike,"
But the kids on the block had other names
That confused this little tyke.

To some, it was "Shanty" or "Bicycle," somehow—
I thought it was absurd—
With "Lace Curtain" coming slowly up
And running a distant third.

Those blatherskites, those skallywags,
May a thousand curses descend;
They haven't changed through the passing years—
I had wanted each for a friend.

I know no reason for their conclusion;
With some, I'm still on the "outs."
May God have mercy on those prejudiced souls,
Those Pollocks, Dagos and Krauts.

"An Irish Lad's Dilemma"

Such are the little Irish ditties A Time to Laugh—A Time to Cry is made of. Written by Brother H. Lewis, FSC, it's a short collection of original Irish poems and songs in which the author attempts to tell a portion of the Irish story as it affected him.

A former principal and assistant principal at Hill High School, Br. Lewis (his given name is Michael John Twohig) spent the past seven years as assistant principal at Cretin High School. He presently serves in Cretin's counseling and development departments.

A native of "County Cook" (Chicago), as he says in a poem called "Myself," Br. Lewis is the son of Irish-born parents, to whom he dedicates A Time to Laugh—A Time to Cry, "with hopes for more of the former and less of the latter."

Selby Ave. shops do a switcheroo

If you've had occasion to drop by Gulck's TV and Appliance at 1558 Selby Ave. of late, and you wondered why you should be met at the door by a bunch of pianos... well, read on.

Ray Hines, owner of Gulck's for the past 37 years has moved down the block to 1568-1570 Selby Ave., giving his business twice the showroom and working space it had had. Gulck's had maintained a warehouse at 1570 Selby for many years.

The additional space was gained when Gulck's moved into the space formerly occupied by Kovacs Vogel Piano Company and brought down the wall between it and the Gulck's warehouse. Kovacs Vogel, meanwhile, has set up shop in Gulck's former location at 1558 Selby. Got it?

Two-day rummage sale set at church

The Women's Association of Merriam-Lexington Presbyterian Church will hold a rummage sale from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, October 24 and from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Thursday, October 25 at the church, Dayton and Howell Ave.

Clothing for all ages, books, jewelry, china, linens and miscellany will be on the block. Hot lunches, snacks and coffee will also be available.

The physical education department suggests warmup suits or other warm, loose-fitting garments.

Quit Smoking programs to start up soon in St. Paul

The American Cancer Society's Ramsey County office has announced plans to begin Quit Smoking Programs throughout the St. Paul area soon. The programs, designed to help participants quit smoking by understanding the physical and psychological reasons for their habit, consist of eight two-hour sessions, held twice a week for four weeks.

The sessions will be taught by trained American Cancer Society personnel who will rely on group discussion and support, as well as visits by a physician and an ex-smoker to help each member reach the goal of giving up cigarettes.

The initial sessions will examine the reasons each participant smokes, and the later sessions will develop individual lifetime strategies to help each member quit. In the final sessions the group forms an "I Quit Club" which will gather regularly for long-range support.

Participants in the QSPs won't actually be asked to give up cigarettes until the fourth session, and then only for a 48-hour test period. For further information, call 636-5230.

Hospital to hold crafts bazaar

The St. Paul Children's Hospital Association will hold its eighth annual holiday bazaar from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, November 7 at House of Hope Presbyterian Church, Avon and Summit Ave. The sale of hand-crafted items made by members of 18 guilds will benefit the hospital's free bed and clinic care fund.

Tickets may be bought for 50 cents in advance or 75 cents at the door.

Motorists in St. Paul already faced something of an obstacle course in 1934 at the corner of Snelling and Trolley, what with steering clear of trolley tracks—and the occasional rrolley—and, when school let out, stopping in response to a traffic monitor's sign (at lower right).

Heaney to bring oral tradition of Irish Songs, stories to CST

Irish folklorist Joe Heaney (Seosamh o Heanai in Gaelic) will perform authentic Irish music from the oral tradition, always unaccompanied, at 8:00 p.m. Saturday, November 3 at the O'Shaughnessy Educational Center on the College of St. Thomas campus. His appearance is sponsored by the Irish Cultural Institute.

In a strong, culturally dictated style, Heaney sings old songs and stories typical of those which have provided entertainment for farmers and fishermen in Gaelic-speaking Connemara in Galway County (his own home) for hundreds of years.

"Most of the songs, I have had them before I was 10 years old. My father died when I was very young and he took more songs to the grave than I'll ever know," Heaney says. "I never got one out of a book, and I don't repeat anybody, only myself."

He has appeared at the Newport and Philadelphia Folk Festivals and at Carnegie Hall.

Tickets are available at the MSA Bookstore at the University of Minnesota, or by calling the institute at 647-5678.

Visit Visitation's Merrie Market

During the two days of the market, the merchants offer items for sale from their regular stock and donate 10 percent of their proceeds to the school. This year's participants are Frank Murphy, Little Dickens, Holm and Olson, Kirby O'Shaughnessy, Bonita Marie Needlepoint, J. Donald Donahue, Heath Plus, Kathy Gelao and Moveable Feast.

Babysitting, rides and food for the children will be available while parents shop.

After many years of telling residents that Hamline Avenue could not be repaved unless it were widened, the city of St. Paul finally chose to resurface only. Credit can be taken both by concerned neighbors, who were always ready to speak up against widening and the problems it could have caused, and the SWAD Council for taking a firm stand against the project.

On September 25, City Councilwoman Joanne Showalter introduced a resolution to the city council which asked that a cost study be done on the proposed Mattocks playground. Costs to be considered would include razing the school building, landscaping and yearly maintenance. The resolution passed unanimously.

*****

The Education Task Force of the SWAD Council is in the process of studying the proposal to restructure the educational system in the St. Paul Public Schools. (A grades K-8 or middle school concept is currently being considered,

SOUTHWEST AREA DISTRICT Council Capsule

thus eliminating the junior highs.) At a future date, we will have more information and possibly a meeting to discuss the idea.

*****

The time is fast approaching when the SWAD Council will be submitting project proposals to the Capital Improvement Budget (CIB) Committee. Projects can include parks such as Mattocks, playground improvements such as the BigToy at Horace Mann Elementary, and any others that could serve the needs of the district and are eligible for city funding. You are encouraged to submit proposals to the SWAD Council for possible recommendation to the city.

*****

Because of some moves and resignations by SWAD Council members, four grids in the Southwest Area District are now without representation on the council. They include Grid 4 (bounded by Snelling, Summit, Hamline and St. Clair), Grid 9 (Snelling, St. Clair, Hamline and Randolph), Grid 17 (Fairview, Highland Parkway, Hamline and Montreal) and Grid 19 (St. Paul Avenue, West 7th, Hamline and Montreal). If you live in one of these areas and would like to give some of your time toward helping to create a better community, come to our next SWAD meeting (7:30 p.m. Monday, November 12) in St. Joseph's Hall at the College of St. Catherine, or call our office and leave your name and number. Our office is located at 550 S. Snelling Ave., and is usually open in the morning Monday through Thursday. The phone number is 698-7973. We're also looking for anyone who would be willing to donate a few hours a month to help out with light office work. If you're interested, just let us know.

Yarnery sets 'FiberFest'

The Yarnery, a locally owned yarn company with three retail stores currently operating in the Twin Cities area, recently announced plans for a month-long "Oktober FiberFest."

The schedule of activities includes demonstrations of weaving, knitting, needlepoint and stichery at the Yarnery's three outlets (1648 Grand Ave., Leisure Lane in Edina, and the Rosedale Shopping mall), an exhibition of frame loom weaving at the Yarnery warehouse (2484 University Ave.), and a "fashion dance" in the main mall at Rosedale.

Local crafts people will demonstrate various fiber techniques at the Grand Ave. store during this, the first week of the FiberFest. The schedule of events includes a needlepoint demonstration on October 10, Christmas crafts on October 11, and weaving on October 12 and 13.

Handwoven items using the Xenakis technique (named for its inventor, a South Dakota weaver) will be on display from October 15-26 at the Yarnery warehouse. Hours are 3:00 to 7:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The "Fashions-in-Motion" show, set for 7:30 p.m. Monday, October 22 at Rosedale, is being supervised and choreographed by Margaret Maddux, a former Macalester college dance instructor. She is being assisted by Donald LaCourse and John Frey, directors of the Ethnic Dance Theatre.

Midway offers to help smokers quit

Midway Hospital will offer a four-week Quit Smoking Clinic beginning Wednesday, October 17. The eight-session clinic will meet from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays at the hospital, 1700 University Ave.

The registration fee is $15.00. For more information or to register, call 641-5388.

Dance Tuesday afternoon away

If you're 50 or older, you're invited to join the gang that will be dancing the afternoon away on Tuesday, October 16 at the Merriam Park Community Center, 2000 St. Anthony Ave. The Polka Beats will be kicking out the licks from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., and refreshments will be available.

If you're 60 or older, you're also invited for lunch earlier that afternoon. To let the gang know you're coming for dinner or for dancing, call Anne McDonald at 645-0349.

Paging all papers

The International Order of Job's Daughters, Bethel #3, will hold a paper drive from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Saturday, October 13 and from noon to 4:00 p.m. Sunday, October 14 in the parking lot of Twin City Federal, Randolph and Snelling Ave. The Daughters will accept newspapers and telephone books, but not magazines. For pickup service, call 699-4613.

There's a new—or rather old—look to 1329 Selby Ave. since the recent opening of Layden Studios. The former photographic studio now serves as a showcase for the hand-crafted furniture of Rod Layden, assistant technical director of Chimera Theatre since 1971, and for the stained glass works of his wife, Dee, a former teacher at Groveland and Webster schools. Before the recent move, the Laydens, both graduates of Macalester, had worked at their respective crafts out of their house at 2175 Lincoln Ave., which is also what little Melinda calls home.

Services change Rummaging again

something evil and threatening from Stanley's past.

Stanley's mysterious past is never fully explained, and according to director George Poletes, it is this "vaguely defined threat which provides the mystery and unanswered questions one finds in all of Pinter's work."

All performances begin at 8:00 p.m. in Foley Theatre at St. Thomas. There is a $2.00 general admission charge for the production. Students, faculty and staff from the Associated Colleges of the Twin Cities and St. Mary's Junior College are admitted free of charge. For reservations call 690-6680.

Actors Theatre announces schedule for its third season

Actors Theatre of St. Paul recently announced plans for its upcoming season, a subscription series of six plays which will be performed from October 25, 1979 through April 27, 1980.

The first offering of Actors Theatre's third season is Philadelphia, Here I Come! by Brian Friel. The comedy follows an Irish youth's journey from adolescence to manhood as he prepares to leave his homeland in Ballybeg for Philadelphia. Michael Andrew Miner directs the season opener, which opens October 25 and runs through November 17.

Christopher Fry's The Lady's Not For Burning, (November 22 through December 16) is the second play of the 1979-80 season. Fry's comedy plumbs the paradox of Thomas Mendip who tries to get himself hanged and can't, and Jennet Jourdemayne who doesn't want to be burned at the stake but will be. Guest artist David Schmalz directs.

In keeping with the theatre's emphasis on ensemble acting, Anton Chekhov's Three Sisters has been selected as the third production of the season. First produced by the Moscow Art Theatre, Three Sisters will be performed January 10 through February 2 under the direction of Michael Andrew Miner.

George C. White, president of the O'Neill Theatre Center, returns to Actors Theatre to direct Eugene

Edyth Bush marks 40th with celebration of its own

While all of St. Paul celebrates the city's 125th birthday, Chimera's Edyth Bush Theatre marks a milestone of its own this week. Currently entering its 40th year as a home for live theatre, the Bush has mounted a special exhibit of memorabilia to recognize the occasion.

Located at 690 S. Cleveland Ave., the 270-seat theatre was built in the late 1930s by Archibald Bush, a pioneer of the 3M Company, and his wife, Edyth. It opened on October 13, 1940, with a production of Today's Daughter, written by and starring Edyth Bush.

For the next 25 years, Mrs. Bush successfully ran the theatre according to her own unique standards and tastes, presenting plays and musical productions for both children and adults. In 1965 she donated the theatre to Hamline University, which used the building as a site for both university and community productions.

Through a grant from the Bush Foundation, Chimera Theatre purchased the building in 1976 as a home for its expanding educational programs and special productions.

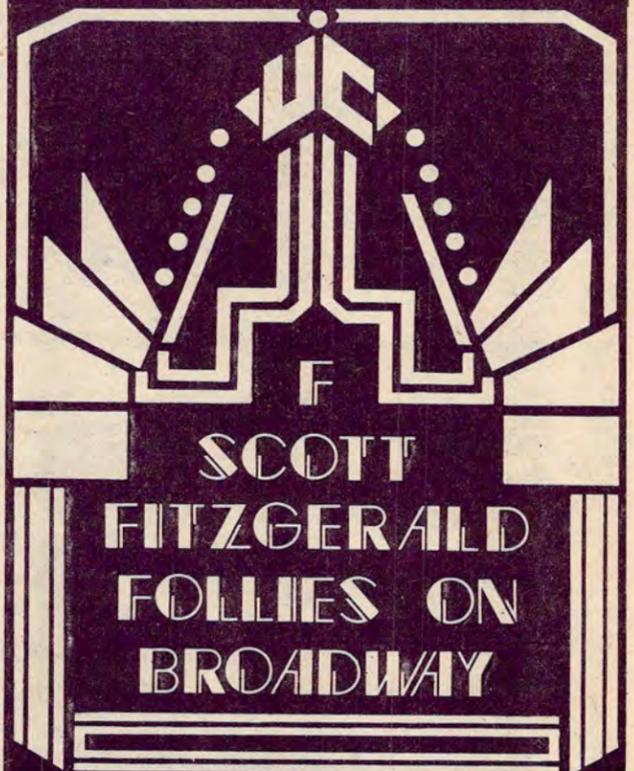

The exhibit of costumes, props, photographs and other mementos of the theatre's past will be open to the public free of charge now through October 14. For more information and specific exhibit hours, call 690-1516.

There may be better ways of waiting for the Robert E. Lee, but you won't hear Greg King complaining as he loiters on the levee with this bevy of bystanders. Greg and (left to right) Colleen Sheffler, Kathi Miller and Deborah Jespersen share the spotlight with a host of stage-struck "stars" in the seventh annual edition of the University Club of St. Paul's "Follies on Broadway."

Fitzgerald Follies folk give their regards to Broadway

The University Club of St. Paul will trot out its seventh annual edition of the F. Scott Fitzgerald Follies on Wednesday, October 24, with a song and dance extravaganza dubbed "Follies on Broadway."

Jerry Donlin, 1931 Beechwood Ave., heads the cast in the role of Big Apple impresario Flo Ziegfeld as he dons his pink shirt and spats and runs his footlight hopefuls through a fast-paced Broadway audition. The 30 or so song and dance devotees are played by amateur performers from throughout the St. Paul area.

This year's Follies is directed by Mike Rosewall, head of the theatre department at St. Paul Academy-Summit School. Credit for the script goes to Rosewall and punny partners in crime Melanie Soucheray and Bob McGowan. Ray Komischke returns as musical director, and Kay Koch does yet another encore as Follies choreographer.

Gala opening night festivities have been planned for Wednesday, October 24 at the club, 420 Summit Ave. Dinner will be served beginning at 6:00 p.m., with the show to follow at 8:45. For those inspired to get into the act themselves, dancing will follow.

The revue, dinner and dancing will continue at the same times on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 25, 26 and 27. The four-night spectacle will be topped off with a Sunday matinee at 4:45 p.m. with dinner to follow.

Hope when there wasn't any drew Katie's contest entry

If you were really sick, maybe even dying, what would you like to look at?

That question was posed earlier this year by Robert Ryndes, head nurse at Hospice-St. Paul, to art students in the St. Paul public school system.

Ryndes had conceived the idea of inviting youngsters from fourth through ninth grade levels to take part in an art contest centered around the theme expressed in his question. The winning entry would be translated into a stained glass window at the end of a hallway in Hospice-St. Paul. The Hospice is run by Bethesda Lutheran Medical Center, 559 Capitol Boulevard, for terminally ill patients.

More than 200 youngsters submitted entries. The winner was Katie Murray, age 12, of Goodrich Ave.

Katie's picture, Ryndes said, "is filled with life and energy and will help people feel as if they are lying in a meadow, even in the hospital in the middle of winter." The picture is dominated by a meadow, a brilliant sun and blue sky.

Katie's entry has been translated into a 3 by 5-foot stained glass window by Michael Pilla of Monarch Studios, St. Paul, and was dedicated by Gretchen Quie last Monday. The project was paid for by families who have been served by the Hospice.

Talking Out of School

by Bill Rosenbloom and Carl Nelson

The St. Paul School District's proposal to limit the number of school buildings open to the public for after-hours courses and activities will be discussed at a community meeting on Monday, October 22. The meeting, which begins at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Highland Park Senior High School, is the third of three being held in the greater Highland area to solicit community response to the cost-cutting measure.

Talking Out of School thought this would be an appropriate time to summarize the main differences between the school administration's plan and that proposed by the Region IV Community Education Task Force. The task force is made up of administrators from the five public schools in the region (Highland Junior and Senior high schools, and Homecroft, Highland Park and Horace Mann elementary schools), representatives from various PTAs and community organizations, coordinators of local athletic groups and Community Education representatives.

As proposed, there are two main areas of disagreement between the plans: 1) the primary and supplemental site selections made by the school administration; and 2) the administration's requirement that there be 15 participants per activity in order to obtain a permit for use of the school building.

The administration has proposed that Highland Park Senior High School be designated as the primary site, and Homecroft Elementary School the supplemental site for community use in Region IV. At the October 22 meeting, the task force will recommend that Highland Senior and Junior be viewed as a single complex, and together be designated as the primary site for Region IV. It will also recommend that Homecroft, Highland and Horace Mann elementary schools all be designated as supplemental sites. It is the feeling of the task force that senior highs throughout St. Paul are already too heavily programmed, and should not be considered as potential sites for additional community use.

In the eyes of the task force members, Region IV also has a need for gymnasium space and special facilities such as craft rooms and dark rooms, and that more of these spaces should be made available to the community. All three elementary schools in the Highland area have either special programs (such as Homecroft's Community Education program) or special facilities that could be used.

The administration's recommendation that there be a minimum of 15 participants per activity before a permit for school use could be issued is also a target for the task force's objections. Task force members feel very strongly that such a requirement would not be in the best interest of the community education programs currently operating in the area, and would greatly restrict many types of worthwhile programming where class size, space availability and instructor effectiveness point toward smaller numbers.

If you would like to have a voice in the decision-making process regarding the availability of your local school for community use, Talking Out of School would like to talk you into attending the October 22 meeting at Highland Senior.

Highland area 6th graders speak out on the dome

by Tom Cody

Editor's note: What follows is the first in a series of "kid-in-the-classroom" interviews Tom Cody will be conducting for the Highland interviewer over the year. It's his and our intention to solicit comments on a variety of sports-related issues from a variety of age levels in schools throughout the area served by this newspaper. Your comments and/or suggestions for future questions are always welcome, of course.

"What do you think about plans to build a domed stadium in Minneapolis? Will it help or hurt area sports?"

Those were the questions put to a class of sixth grade students at Highland Catholic School last week. Reprinted below is a representative sample of their feelings for what, by all accounts, is fast becoming the most "pro-tracted" over-time game in town.

Theresa Loomis, 1751 Beechwood Ave.: "Building the dome is a waste of time and money... Put a dome on the Met... They should have done that in the first place."

Dave Hoffman, 2148 Eleanor Ave.: "The dome will be good for the Twin Cities. Texas has theirs, so we should have one, too. Have you ever sat in the sun on a hot bench? Besides, what's two dollars more in taxes?"

Roxanne Snyder, 315 Mt. Curve Blvd.: "It's a nice idea, but I wish it didn't cost so much. On cold, icy days inside the dome, you wouldn't see the players and referees blowing smog out of their mouths anymore..."

Ann Simerson, 1337 S. Cleveland Ave.: "People won't be able to tailgate before games... Also, the only parking that'll be available will be in front of bars and stores downtown. Games will last longer than the time on the parking meters..."

Kristi Hessler, 1150 Norbert Lane: "I think it's dumb... A little rain won't kill anybody who wants to see a game. People make it sound like it's going to rain every day of the year."

Judy Soranno, 1966 Edgumbe Road: "Minnesota has better ways to spend their money. Baseball and soccer were meant to be played outside in the warm sun..."

Jack Lennon, 1994 Pinehurst Ave.: "How about the gas shortage and trying to heat the dome? We'd be better off to spend the money to buy oil and gas to get the United States through the winter..."

Title hopes gone, Sevenich and Raiders are 'in it for pride' now

by Tom Cody

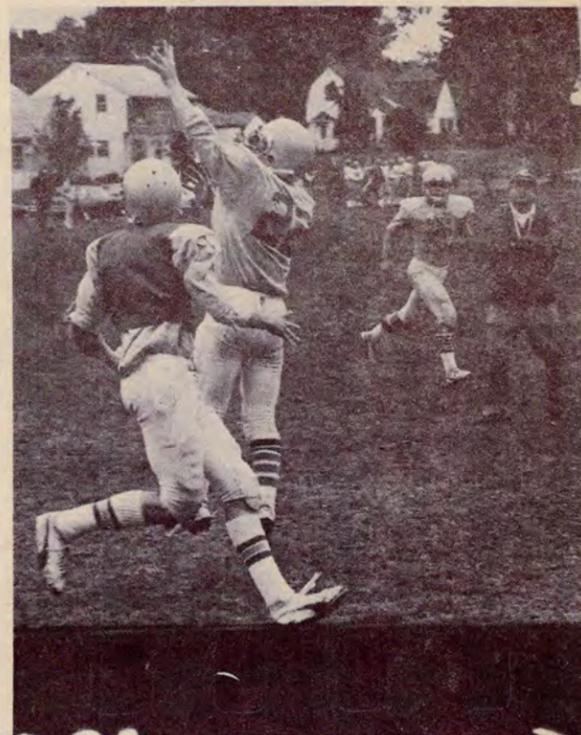

Every football team carries title aspirations into its August practice sessions, but the 1979 Cretin High School squad had more reason to be optimistic than most. Coming off one of their finest seasons in recent years, the Raiders returned several key players this fall to bolster coach Karl Charipar's hopes for a bid to capture city honors.

Eight weeks and four losses later, the team's goals have had to be readjusted.

One player who has given Charipar and the rest of the Raiders something to cheer about, despite the team's early season struggles, is senior safety Paul Sevenich. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Sevenich of 1831 Hillcrest, the 5-foot 8-inch, 160-pound defensive back has doubled as Cretin's punt return man this year. With superb speed ("about a 4.9 second 40-yard man," according to his coach) Paul seldom gets beat deep as he roams the secondary in the "center field" safety position.

"Paul's the glue that keeps our secondary held together," Charipar says. "He's always got his head in the ball game, and has given us real leadership back there."

Sevenich is one of the many seniors who've refused to quit after the disappointing losses to Harding, Hill-Murray, Central and Johnson, according to his coach. In addition to Sevenich, Charipar listed tight end Mike Kelly, a 6-foot Highland Catholic product, as a "real asset"—especially for his performance in the Raiders' 29-28 overtime win against Buffalo when Kelly snagged seven passes. Charipar also pointed to fullback Casey Seabright ("the guy we go to in the clutch"), guard Eric Johnson ("so reliable we forget him") and tackle-nose guard Tom Dahl as veterans who have hung in there all year.

Watched closely by his coach, safety Paul Sevenich goes up to pull down an interception during a mid-week practice session on Cretin High School's south field.

"They just haven't quit," the second-year head coach says. "I'm proud of these guys to a man... we'll still have something to say about who wins this thing in the end."

Sevenich, who doubles as an usher for North Star games and a coach for young area swimmers in the winter, expressed similar sentiments. "We were really counting on winning this thing," he said. "It never really hit me until after our third loss that we weren't going to. It's got to be pride we're in it for now."

Sevenich plans to continue his education at the College of St. Thomas next fall, but is still unsure of his future in football. "I hear St. Thomas' defensive backs aren't too big," he said. "Maybe I'll take a shot at it."

In the meantime, Paul points to the friendships he's made through the sport as the most important thing. "We still hang around together, all the kids who were on the freshman team together," he says. "It's those guys I'll remember ten years from now."

As the season winds down, Cretin still faces arch-rival St. Thomas Academy (October 19) after playing Highland Park (October 12).

"I'm afraid we used up a lot of our share of luck last season," said Charipar. "It's kind of evened up for us in the first few games this year, but it'll still be an interesting race down to the wire. A two or three-way tie wouldn't surprise me at all."

Charipar, Sevenich and company won't be league champs this year, but in their eyes "playing for pride" is its own reward. And in a sports world filled with bonus clauses, lawyers, free agents and renegotiated contracts, that kind of talk is refreshing to hear, isn't it?

There's lots of flak flying in the direction of coach Joe Salem for his blunt criticism of the Gopher football players. Don't kid yourselves, folks—the U of M gridders shouldn't be treated any different from professionals. Most receive an expensive education in return for their work on the field, and should be subject to the same assessment in the press that the Vikings are. I find it refreshing to hear a coach whose quotes aren't just watered-down rhetoric. Admit it—you snored while Cal Stoll extolled the virtues of his fine young men, but you listen when Salem says his punter "stunk up the place."

C'mon Calvin...I can see where ONE might have gotten away. Maybe even two. But how could locals Jack Morris, Dave Winfield AND Paul Molitor all slip out of the Twins' grasp? It makes no sense to me how a superlative ball-player from this area (and there haven't been many lately) can escape the Twins' scouts so easily. Someone like ex-U of M hurler Steve Comer is a different matter...he had limited success with the Gophers and was truly a "find" for Brad Corbett and the Rangers. But the other three showed real signs of stardom as early as their Babe Ruth League days. It should be no real shocker that Morris won 17 games this year (and THAT with a mediocre Tigers team). No one can be too surprised that Winfield knocked in 118 runs (and along with Dave Parker, has no peer on the diamond for overall ability). And don't tell me Molitor's .320 average has stunned too many people (he's the best second baseman in the A.L.—you can have White and Randolph). No wonder the Twins don't improve. They should forget scanning the N.L. for talent and concentrate on the local T-ball leagues.

But it's still the best sports buy in town...a baseball game at the Met, even with ridiculously high parking and concession prices, proved to be one of the greatest entertainment deals in the Cities this summer. Where else could you see a contending big league team for less than five bucks a ticket? The Twins played exciting, if not always consistent, baseball all year. Wilfong, Landreaux and Koosman were reliable, steady players, and Mauch has to be cited for the job he did with the entire squad. Griffith's teams may never become pennant winners, but the show they put on is a treat at the price. You don't appreciate having major league baseball til you live in Rocky Ford, Colorado, for awhile. There they spend Saturday afternoons watching the watermelons grow.

Ya gotta believe! Let's not quit on Macalester's football team yet—let's wait for a few more losses. Mac mentor Tom Hosier, who has a reputation for turning losers into winners, has looked to the sunny Caribbean for help this year. Six Puerto Rican students have joined the squad: Hector Nevarez (FB), Jose Alamo (C), Andres Burgos (E), Manuel Landron (G), Anthony Negron (E) and Peter Ducos (DT). But Hosier still has his work cut out for him...they said DiMaggio's 56-game streak would never be approached. Mac's got a shot at it!

Running backs are like tires—when they start to show the wear, they sure seem to deteriorate fast. Chuck Foreman's abilities have been reduced considerably over the past couple of years. The man who once left linebackers tackling air can't turn the corner anymore. Trouble is, the whole league knows it now, and Chuck's value on the market can't be what it once was. On the other hand, though Ted Brown will soon be a quality back, maybe it's best not to drive the nails into No. 44's coffin just yet. Sometimes it pays to put a few more miles on those old tires—even though you've got new ones in the garage.

What was Indiana Pacers owner Sam Nassi doing when he signed Ann Meyers to a basketball contract? He could've gotten more for his $50,000 by lighting the bills on fire. The 140-pound ex-UCLA All-American claimed she "didn't want to embarrass herself," but then went out and did exactly that. Women should receive every opportunity to compete against each other in sports. Period. What the Pacers did was a farce—a publicity gimmick that the NBA should have no need for.

It's been a long time since I've seen so many young kids excited about playing a sport. Local soccer is booming—there are more than 40 playground teams around this area already, with more planned for next year. The game offers so many things: the equipment is cheap, boys and girls can play together, there are very few injuries, and the players get lots of exercise (unlike other sports where the kids spend half the game on the sidelines or in the dugout). I think it's a great alternative to putting helmets on nine-year-olds and turning them loose to knock each other down.

Had to laugh when Channel 11's Bob Kurtz directed viewers to call NBC broadcaster Bob Trumpey with their complaints following the Vikings-Dolphins game. Not that Trumpey was faultless—his attempts at casual sarcasm missed the mark badly. But what about Kurtz? Watching his sports reports is worse than viewing "Gilligan's Island" reruns. And put on a tie, Bob. The leisure suits went out two years ago.

CAA SHORTS

Holy Spirit's girls' soccer team, under coach Kathy Dorra, got off to a disappointing start, dropping two close decisions in three weeks. Forwards Patty Boo, Dana Perault, Julie Yoswa and Susie Piram have been the standouts thus far...Stan Lucas' St. Mark's football team had similar misfortunes, despite yeoman work from tailbacks John Stevken and John Thuente. . . . Meanwhile, the Joe Meyer-coached "B" team is undefeated on the strength of halfback Pat Keis...Capturing its own pre-season tourney, St. Mark's girls' volleyball team is off to a quick start. Rob Peick has gotten top-notch play from Felicia Glidden, Bridget Elliot and Jenny White.

Nativity's Joe Kurtz has fielded yet another strong girls' volleyball team. (Kurtz, just back from down under in Melbourne, Australia, has assumed many of ex-Native Dennis Denning's duties since the latter moved on to Cretin High School.) Sandy Inserra and Jill Droubie have provided the firepower for the squad in the early going...Down in the Village, Highland Catholic soccer coach Tom Whisler has his charges going full tilt. John Quintavalle, "Dirt" Weinberger, and Tim Paulet have been stalwarts for the boys' team, while Kristin Reilly and Thea Stone have led the girls. Both Hi-C volleyball teams are also underway. captains Shannon McLaughlin and Kim Brown have done an excellent job for coach Mylan Masson. The defending city boys' champs have been paced by spiker Dave Schwebel and setter Kevin Mergens.

Wally Wescott's St. Luke's football team has gotten off to a rocky start, despite leading tackler Danny Jeske's efforts. The girls' soccer team has had better luck, thanks to a pair of sisters who lead the team in scoring. Mary Pat and Laurie Gaertner have coach Jim Hermes smiling as the Lukers are off to a quick start.

PLAYGROUND POTPOURRI

Merriam Park's soccer program is off and running this fall with no fewer than nine teams. Toby Velte recently notched a four-goal night in the 6th and 7th grade league, and Tommy Davern headed in a game-winning goal off a Paul Swetland pass in the 3rd grade league...Down at Homecroft, soccer is also king. According to coaches Carl and Larry, the third grade team's flying start is due largely to a host of future Alan Willeys, including Chad Sjudahl, Scott Snyderich and Joel Davies...A broken arm wasn't the only result of a recent hard-fought Linwood soccer game. Eric Larson's collision and ensuing injury didn't stop his 7th grade teammates, as they went on to victory. At the third grade level, Mike Lafave's hat trick recently paced the Cosmos to their first win.

Up at Hillcrest, Mike Windey has received stellar performances from 3rd graders Maureen Connelly, Molly Mulrooney and Miguel DeHarpporte. A 7-0 win in the season opener was cause for celebration...Matt Hunt and goalie Pat McQuillan have spearheaded the 3rd grade Edgcombe soccer team for coach Angela Jones. Meanwhile Joe Seidel's 7th grade football team has had tough sledding in the early going, despite the efforts of signal caller Dominic Dzik and halfback Matt Montgomery.

Camp Fire's candy sale starts Oct. 12

Peanut crunch, chocolate-covered mints and nut caramel clusters are the sweet treats St. Paul Camp Fire youths will be hawking door-to-door in the area October 12 through 21.

No, you read it right — Camp Fire youths. Since 1977, the organization has offered a program to boys, and each year the number of Thunderbirds (Camp Fire boys in grades 1 and 2) has grown.

Profits from the candy sale are used to support Camp Fire's club and camping programs. By selling candy, members can earn all or part of their camping fee. The sale also boosts each club's treasury.

If you look closely at the shape St. Anthony and Prior Aves. were in, around 1913, you may never complain about potholes again. The Merriam Park Pharmacy, the Topic Theatre and this high-Victorian building all are defunct, gone the way of dirt roads in St. Paul. Photo courtesy Minnesota Historical Society

Conference at CSC addresses the status of women in religions

Women and Religion, a regional conference intended to cultivate a deeper understanding of the many questions religion poses for women, will be held on Friday and Saturday, October 19 and 20 at the College of St. Catherine.

Open to people of all faiths, ages, sexes, sizes and disguises, the conference is cosponsored by the University of Minnesota's Continuing Education for Women and the Office of Continuing Education at St. Catherine's.

Thirty workshops will explore the status of women in major and minor religions, the treatment of women in scripture, ethics and morality, women's spirituality, historical perspectives, and the impact of language on women's participation in religion.

Carol P. Christ, coeditor of Womanspirit Rising, will keynote the conference on Friday night, and Sheila Collins, author of A Different Heaven and Earth, will address the plenary session on Saturday morning.

A panel discussion on "American Values and Women's Spirituality" will be led by Gayle Graham Yates, head of the U of M's Department of Women's Studies; Madona Kolbenschlag, associate professor of American Studies at the University of Notre Dame; and Alla Bozarth-Campbell, director of Wisdom House, the Center for Feminist Spirituality and Ecumenism.

The fee for the conference is $30, which includes lunch and coffee. Limited housing is available in an off-campus dormitory. Register by sending a check, payable to the College of St. Catherine, to: the Office of Continuing Education, the College of St. Catherine, 2004 Randolph Ave., St. Paul 55105.

For more information, call Marjorie Mathison (373-9743) or Sr. Therese Sherlock (690-6542).

8 minutes & $2.10 later.

Your favorite uncle in Denver.
Your high school coach in Milwaukee.
Your brother-in-law in Oklahoma City.

An 8-minute call can make any of these wonderful people smile for just $2.10 or less. It costs so little to call someone in the 48 states when you dial direct without operator assistance after 5 P.M. weekdays. And long distance is even less on weekends. So go ahead, reach out, and make someone smile, America. Long distance is the next best thing to being face to face.

Ron Maddox Reviews His City Council Activities

To Concerned Citizens

It's hard to believe, but it's been almost one and a half years since you first elected me to serve on the Saint Paul City Council. Although I have visited with many of you at various neighborhood and community meetings, I have not really had the opportunity to personally relate to you many of the activities and resolutions for which I have vigorously worked.

I would like to do so now for two very different reasons: first, when I sought this City Council seat, my main campaign promise was that it would not be two years until you heard from me again. Second, as a citizen of Saint Paul, you have the right to know what I have done . . . how I have voted . . . how active I have been as a member of your Council.

Quite frankly, my colleagues and I have been very active. As you look through this tabloid, you'll see a variety of issues in which we have been involved. We spent countless hours researching areas that were totally new to me — and countless hours evaluating new solutions to old problems. It's been a lot of work . . . but it's been a lot of fun, too.

I hope you'll take the time to read this brochure. Soon the campaign for the 1980 election will begin and all candidates (myself included) will be presenting you with bags full of literature. It gets confusing for all of us to weed through the offices and office seekers. That's another reason why I want to give you a headstart on examining my actions.

Thanks for your time and consideration.

Housing Discrimination Against Families with Children Studied

Housing is one of the basic rights of all individuals in our society. To protect that right, I have authored an ordinance to prohibit discrimination against families with children. A positive ingredient for a healthy family life is a healthy housing environment that is safe and secure. According to a recent opinion of the Saint Paul City Attorney, the City has the jurisdiction and authority to enact legislation that would prohibit housing discrimination against families.

Fulfilling housing needs of low and middle income families should be the goal of the city in the 1980's. Since 1970, the total population of Saint Paul has declined by five percent while the number of households in the city has increased by the same percentage. Further, the number of households since 1960 has jumped from approximately 98,000 to the present 114,000, which approaches a 16 percent jump. In related terms, the age of our city's residents has decreased; the number of residents in the 18-35 year old range has grown 50 to 55 percent in the last decade. At the same time the elderly increase has been at a stable four percent rise.

These facts, along with a total vacancy rate that is declining, put a tight squeeze on housing.

According to the Governor's Task Force on Families, only 12 percent of Minnesota's families have sufficient income to buy and maintain a single-family home in today's society. The median cost of housing in 1978 was $45,000 and the median income for a family of two wage earners was $18,690. Certain low and middle income persons are spending 60 to 80 percent of their income on shelter.

For example, 10 to 15 percent of all households in Minnesota are single parent households. Of those, 90 percent are female headed units. The median income of a female wage earner in 1977 was $8000 in Minnesota.

A recent survey of available housing for families, conducted by the Minnesota Multi-Housing Association in the week of August 5, revealed that 72.5 percent of the total units were for adults only. The rights of families with children deserve to be recognized, heard and protected.

The rights of the landlord and developer of multi-family units deserve attention, also. To make this ordinance successful, more units of housing are required. I have initiated correspondence with Congressman Bruce Vento and our Minnesota federal delegation to secure more Section 8 dollars for new family unit development and rental assistance. Also, the tax structure for apartments should be reviewed. The help of the Mayor's Office, the entire City Council, the Multi-Housing Association, and the Tenants Union are needed to secure these funds and research the potential in tax reform.

Furthermore, I have asked that the Mayor's Office and the City Council cooperate in looking into the establishment of a revolving security-damage deposit fund. Such a fund would be an asset to both the landlords and the tenants.

Revolving funds exist for home improvements and rehabilitation. It does not make an ounce of sense to provide housing and rent for low and middle income families, yet they cannot afford the security deposit.

The ordinance I have proposed and my other ideas are an attempt to open the market, expand the supply and resolve some major fundamental housing issues for the low and middle income families of Saint Paul. Although the ordinance did not pass its first reading, the Council is still reviewing it.

Metro Sports Facilities Prices Questioned

The Metropolitan Sports Commission may have been less than businesslike in its attempts to generate the most possible revenue from the Metropolitan Sports Arena.

The public owns that building. Through arrangement of the Metropolitan Sports Commission, however, it is leased to the North Star Financial Corporation until the year 2005. The contract provides for a basic monthly rental of $400 payable to the Commission. That amount is less than most residents of the metropolitan area pay in house payments each month!

With those figures in mind, I will be actively involved in a lawsuit, under the public information act, that will commence January 1, 1980, to require certain financial information from the North Star Financial Corporation to be made available to the public. Such information may lead to a restructuring of the fee schedule and a more equitable contract for the taxpayers of the metropolitan area.

We are also requesting that more professional hockey games be played at the Saint Paul Civic Center Arena. By the North Stars playing in the Civic Center, attendance would be higher, revenues would be greater, and a shared use of public buildings would be realized.

From the perspective of the ability to raise the maximum revenue for the public, both the Civic Center and the Sports Commission are hampered by the prices and reductions that the North Star Financial Corporation offers to the entertainment industry and prospective promoters—all by virtue of an obsolete rental agreement. The promoters realize additional revenues instead of the public.

I am, therefore, urging the Metropolitan Sports Commission to fulfill their charge from the legislature to review the workings and finances of all metropolitan sports facilities, including the Saint Paul Civic Center and Minneapolis Auditorium. Such a review can enable the taxpayer to realize the greatest revenue from the use of those facilities. Councilman Tedesco and Showalter sponsored a resolution to that effect which passed the City Council in June.

Citizens Budget Review Committee Appointed to Oversee City Budget

Under a resolution co-sponsored with David Hozza, we proposed a Citizens Review Committee to scrutinize the City's budget and report its findings to the Council. As a response to the great concern among taxpayers about property tax burdens, especially as seen in California's vote on Proposition 13, Saint Paul responded by passing the resolution and establishing a 25-member committee of taxpayers from throughout the city.

In addition to looking at where tax dollars are specifically spent, it is hoped that the committee will look into the proportion of each tax dollar that actually comes to the city. Figures indicate that the city in 1978 received 27 percent of the total tax bill on an average home, while the county received 26 percent, the school district got 44 percent and other units, such as the Metropolitan Council, took three percent. The City has actually been decreasing its taxes in the past several years, while other units of government have increased theirs.

Besides making City government more responsive to residents, the review process will enable taxpayers to have greater confidence in how their taxes are being spent.

Council Passes Ordinance to Prohibit Sale of Drug Paraphernalia

I feel that the drug problem is one of the most significant problems in the United States today and I think we have to quit rationalizing and start doing something to prevent this abuse. Councilman George McMahon and I recently sponsored an ordinance to begin to attack the problem of drugs.

A recent survey of public attitude found that 91 to 93 percent of American parents desired to openly discuss and act with their children on the use of drugs and their control.

It is evident to me that social programs to date have made little headway toward solving this problem. The ordinance I proposed attempts to reduce the availability of drug-related devices in order to prevent their availability from inducing, promoting, suggesting, or increasing the public acceptability of the use of illegal drugs.

The ordinance is strictly fashioned after the Eagan, Minnesota, ordinance and the ruling of Judge Alsop, which states that "the possession, display or sale of drug-related devices may increase public acceptability of illicit drug use, thereby leading to a more widespread use of illicit drugs." It further states that "... the ordinance is valid and will give sufficient warning to deter non-users from experimenting with such illegal drugs, thus preventing an increase in public acceptance and use of illegal drugs and their use."

The ordinance is an attempt to solve a problem that is decaying the minds of our most important commodity—our kids.

Maddox Initiates Plan to Save Downtown YMCA Building for Future Recreational Use

There are 80 full-time residents who will be displaced if the YMCA is closed—this in the face of a critical housing shortage in Saint Paul for the low and middle income person. The building is presently being considered for closure as a new downtown YMCA facility is built.

Besides the displaced residents, however, there would also be a displacement of social services. Re-entry Services, which provides emergency housing, would have to seek a new location. Project Resolve, a social service agency, also operates from the YMCA building and offers a degree of interim short-term housing. Emergency Social Service, an agency of the United Way, headquarters at the YMCA, as well.

My concept is fundamentally simple. I believe representatives of the board of the YMCA and representatives of the City Council and Mayor's Office should meet, confer and trade. And if it is feasible, make a "building swap." That is, the City would assume ownership of the YMCA land and in turn the YMCA would receive a site in Lowertown for the proposed development of the health and sports facility. If the trade is not justifiably similar in value, the City might consider other incentives of a fiscal and developmental nature.

Upon receipt of the YMCA building, the Public Housing Agency of the city could rehabilitate and operate the building as it does in other areas of Saint Paul. The health, swimming and sports facilities could be leased back to the YMCA for a period of two to three years, dependent upon the new building time frame and completion.

In addition, the City could commence the necessary funding and contracting to meet the fire code mandates of January 1, 1980. This would forestall any displacement of residents, Re-entry Services, Project Resolve, or Emergency Social Service.

I suggest that upon completion of the new YMCA health and sports facility, it is possible that the City could operate the health, swimming and sports segments of the 475 Cedar Street building. I envision a comprehensive health and sports club for low and middle income and elderly citizens of the downtown area. I believe that the market for senior citizen facilities of a physical fitness and health nature exists throughout Saint Paul, and especially so in downtown.

Parks, playgrounds and recreational facilities exist in all neighborhoods of the city except that of the downtown area. The present and future plans for the city's center core highlight the downtown as a place to live, work, relax, shop, eat, and recreate. Maybe this idea might be the answer for a public downtown recreational facility. Downtown is everyone's neighborhood.

Orpheum Theater Proposal Studied

Saint Paul has for many years needed a good medium-sized theater to accommodate the many theatrical, musical and dance productions that are currently presented at the Civic Center Theater under less than desirable conditions. The house is so large and the acoustics so poor that most shows suffer as a result. To upgrade the facility would cost between $10 million and $12 million.

As an alternative, the Orpheum Theater stands ready in the wings for the kind of renovation that could turn it into a first-class addition to Saint Paul's arts, science and entertainment industries. It means saving a perfectly useful structure and creating a much needed medium-sized entertainment facility downtown. In addition, it is something we can do right now—it can be open in a couple of months.

In response to my ideas for the Orpheum, the Arts and Science Council is presently studying the feasibility of renovating the theater for its own use. Unique public, private and governmental funding alternatives will be studied, as well.

Prospective tenants, such as the Minnesota Dance Theatre, and other private and public entertainment promoters have also expressed positive interest in the Orpheum's use.

To complement such a project, a downtown triplex movie theater has been proposed. This is still in the planning stage, however, and no formal announcement has been made.

I think the Arts and Science Council report will support my ideas that the Orpheum should be saved and renovated for use as a major facility for a variety of local, metropolitan and regional performing arts and convention-conference presentations.

But at the same time, it will be wise to determine how much more we can stand to invest in entertainment, when competing with Orchestra Hall, the Guthrie, the Vikings, North Stars, Twins, O'Shaughnessy Auditorium, the Gophers, and more.

Residency Required

I do not believe that there is any job in the City of Saint Paul that someone in the city is not qualified to hold.

In support of that proposition, Councilwoman Hunt and I authored a residency resolution that would give every person applying for a classified position in City employment, an extra five points on their civil service examination as a bonus. Further, every unclassified employee must become a resident of the City of Saint Paul within six months of beginning employment and must remain a resident for the duration of that employment.

This ordinance is in force today.

Skyway Ordinance Protects Public

The skyway system in Saint Paul is the world's largest second-story public walkway. It is a comfortable amenity for the residents and shoppers of Saint Paul; it strengthens the business and retail climate of the city.

Before my election to the City Council, I owned a downtown business located on the skyway system and have seen the problems of misconduct first hand. During my time as a businessperson and since, the unlawful activities in the skyway grew to a degree that makes the skyway potentially unsafe for business owners and the general public.

Abusive language, harassment, physical damage to property and other forms of vandalism, and obstruction of pedestrian traffic are among the types of conduct this ordinance addresses.

We had received a number of complaints from Saint Paul residents particularly women, who did not feel safe or comfortable in our city's skyway. This ordinance should give business people and patrons the needed protection as carried out by law enforcement authorities.

And in Conclusion . . .

Well, that's basically what I've been doing since June of '78. I hope you agree with my efforts. If you don't—let me know. Perhaps I can individually offer you a more thorough explanation as to why I reacted in a certain way concerning a certain issue.

I'm proud of my record. Of course, no office holder can take full credit for anything. I certainly can't. The City Council and Mayor that you elected a year and a half ago have proven to be a dynamite team: Mayor George Latimer, Council President Joanne Showalter, Council members Vic Tedesco, Dave Hozza, Ruby Hunt, Len Levine and, our newest member, George McMahon. We not only work well together—but we also argue well together. We have our own styles and our own viewpoints, but our goal is the same: Let's do what's best

Other Council Business

Legislative Package

The Minnesota Legislature deserves a thank you from the people of Saint Paul and especially from the City Council and the Mayor, for the increased state aid and financial assistance given to the city. The dollar value to Saint Paul in the next biennium will be $22.4 million.

As chairman of the legislation committee that put this program together, I can tell you that this represents a financial package greater than ever before during previous sessions, and it will play a major role in present and future city programs and projects, such as the shade tree program and programs to reduce utility bills for the city's citizens. Funding for the Como Zoo and Park renovation was approved, as well as significant municipal legislation in the areas of tax increment financing and housing revenue bonds.

It was a good session and, again, thank you.

Bacon-Davis

I co-sponsored an ordinance with Councilman David Hozza that would reaffirm the City's commitment to fair wages to workers. The City's adoption of Bacon-Davis laws clearly defined that enforcement and administration of prevailing wage and fringe benefit determinations be used in awarding city and county contracts in excess of $10,000.

The Bacon-Davis laws also represent a positive step toward ensuring efficient equal competition for employers bidding on city and county contracts and services.

Pornography Distribution

By no means am I against the First Amendment and Freedom of the Press, but I don't think that the Supreme Court decision, the juries who have decided numerous court cases or those who drafted the First Amendment considered the type of garbage being handed out freely to our children, or prominently displayed to them in public places, when those decisions were made.

My ordinance forbidding the display or dissemination of indecent materials to minors was designed to do just that; it would not affect those over the age of 18.

Special Session on Energy

I co-sponsored an ordinance with Joanne Showalter calling for a special session of the legislature to deal with the issue of assistance for winter heating bills. Many Saint Paul citizens will face financial hardship this winter due to the high fuel costs; a problem of this magnitude must be addressed by our state government.

Damages for Rights Violations

I authored an ordinance that put some teeth into a law that had been on the books in Saint Paul for some time. The law described human rights violations, but lacked a description of damages that could be awarded. My ordinance provides for punitive damages up to $1000 to be paid to anyone who has suffered from discrimination. This would be in addition to any other financial provisions awarded by the court.

Midway Stadium Rock Concerts

As a result of several disturbances over the summer at Midway Stadium that occurred in conjunction with rock concerts, restrictions have been adopted to protect the Midway Stadium neighborhood. Those controls, originally proposed by State Senator Neil Dieterich and myself, were reviewed by a task force of representatives from the affected communities and both civic and business concerns before adoption.
