High-flying hilarity

Winners abound in 'L.A. to Vegas'

TV Media

China's Great Wall, Rome's Coliseum, London's Big Ben and India's Taj Mahal — beautiful locations, but so far away, hence the appeal of some of North America's nearby attractions. If you like your fun and thrills presented with a side of glamour and a dash of luck, there's only one place to go: Las Vegas. Though, as anyone who's traveled there can tell you, the fun begins the moment you board the plane. A new comedy is set to take viewers on this trek, with flights from "L.A. to Vegas" set to commence Tuesday, Jan. 2, on Fox.

The crew of Flight 1610 transports excited — often intoxicated — individuals from LAX to Vegas for 48 hours of entertainment, gambling and memories. Fictional passenger and comedic actor Ed Weeks ("The Mindy Project") summed up the plot nicely while visiting Breakfast Television Toronto with fellow cast-mate Kim Matula ("The Bold and the Beautiful"). According to Weeks, the series depicts a diverse group of passengers, "stuck on a plane every weekend, L.A. to Vegas and then Vegas back to L.A.," who start off full of "hopes and dreams going into the weekend," only to return with "shattered hopes and dreams, rings under the eyes [and] alcohol poisoning."

The plane is helmed by Captain Dave, played by Dylan McDermott ("The Practice"), an over-confident, brash pilot with a soft spot for his passengers' well-being. His co-pilot, Alan (Amir Talai, "The Pursuit of Happiness," 2006), does his best to appease Dave's ego. Other notable crew members include flight attendant Bernard (Nathan Lee Graham, "Zoolander," 2001) and head flight attendant Ronnie (Matula), both of whom juggle the needs and demands of passengers all while trying to navigate the destination of their own lives.

With the series format being centered around a weekly flight, be prepared to see a combination of fresh narratives and ongoing story arcs, with many passengers becoming regulars. Actors Peter Stormare ("Fargo," 1996) and Weeks both appear to be potential repeat riders. In fact, Stormare's character, Artem, an avid gambler, seems convinced that he'll only win at the tables if he sits in a particular seat during the flight. Meanwhile, Weeks's character, Colin, develops quite an attraction to Ronnie, though it's currently unclear whether this is just a one-time — or skybound — relationship.

The hype for "L.A. to Vegas" stems not only from the stellar casting of the series, but from the comedic powerhouse that's producing it. Gary Sanchez Productions has joined forces with 20th Century Fox Television to develop this mashup of "The Love Boat" meets "Anchorman" (2004) on a plane. Gary Sanchez Productions is run by Will Ferrell ("Daddy's Home," 2015) and producer Adam McKay ("Step Brothers," 2008). The pair works with the company's head, the fictional Gary

Sanchez, a Paraguayan investor whose gifts to the globe most notably include comedic video website "Funny or Die." While this isn't the first foray into television for the production company, known also for "Drunk History" and "Commander Chet," the partnership with Fox will provide "L.A. to Vegas" with perhaps the company's broadest small-screen reach ever, letting the laughs land in millions of living rooms across North America.

As for the on-screen talent, McDermott is a seasoned professional, possessing a wealth of versatility within his CV. A harrowing, tumultuous childhood like his may have stunted the development of others, but thanks to the encouragement of his stepmother (playwright Eve Ensler), McDermott took a gamble on himself, for which both the small and big screen alike are ever grateful. Iconic roles in television series such as Bobby Donnell in "The Practice" and both Dr. Ben Harmon and Johnny Morgan in "American Horror Story" have helped McDermott secure his presence as a skilled character actor, though often with a more dramatic and serious lean. "L.A. to Vegas" allows McDermott to explore his quirkier, zanier side, playing a suave pilot with a penchant for sarcasm and a minimal filter.

"L.A. to Vegas" also features soap opera star Matula, who brings with her a unique fanbase that is also more familiar with an actress swept up in the dramatic instead of the comedic. This isn't the actress's first shot at comedy, as 2017 has seen Matula explore her more humorous side, with appearances in the series "Teachers" and the film "Maybe Someday" (2017). While discussing her character on Breakfast Television Toronto, Matula explained that Ronnie is someone with "big dreams ... a lot of hopes for her life, and she has not made the right decisions ... she's an incredibly impulsive person."

The relatability of Ronnie, and the humorous missteps of her life, give her an endearing quality that is entirely relatable to both Matula's soap opera fans and those sitcom lovers who have yet to see her perform. Ultimately, the show's appeal stems from the fact that in such confined spaces, even through the duration of a short flight, people have a way of opening up and revealing themselves, their charms and annoyances in a way that elicits both sympathy and laughs.

Prepare for a weekly weekend getaway, four days in advance, as you board Flight 1610 with Captain Dave and his crew for a fun-filled trip from "L.A. to Vegas." Buckle up for some laughs when the series lifts off Tuesday, Jan. 2, on Fox.

American Made

When Barry Seal (Cruise), a commercial airline pilot in the 1970s, is approached by the CIA to start flying some clandestine reconnaissance missions over Central America, he leaps at the opportunity to make some extra money and serve his country. It isn't long before the CIA has him doing more jobs for them while in Central America, and when he's approached by a drug cartel that wants him to smuggle cocaine back to America, he takes it up on its offer, too. With political events in the region heating up and the call of money stronger than ever, it quickly becomes a tricky balancing act for Seal to stay a step ahead of the conflicting players that he's gotten mixed up with. Based on true events. Director: Doug Liman. Stars: Tom Cruise, Domhnall Gleeson, Sarah Wright, Alejandro Edda. 2017. 115 min. Action.

Battle of the Sexes

Two of the world's top tennis players clash in the famous 1973 match. Billie Jean King (Stone) is at the height of her career, but as a female tennis player, she has trouble getting the respect — and the money — that male players receive. Meanwhile, retired great Bobby Riggs (Carell) has developed an addiction to gambling, and he tosses out a challenge: that, even at 55 years old, he can beat any woman, leading to an epic showdown between the two that will shape their personal lives in ways they can't possibly foresee.

Directors: Jonathan Dayton, Valerie Faris. Stars: Emma Stone, Steve Carell, Andrea Riseborough, Sarah Silverman, Bill Pullman, Alan Cumming. 2017. 121 min. Biography.

Breathe

Mere months after Robin (Garfield) and Diana (Foy) Cavendish get married, the husband is stricken with polio and becomes paralyzed from the neck down. Unable to breathe on his own, he's attached to a mechanical respirator and given only three months to live. Despite telling his young wife to leave him and find happiness elsewhere, she sticks by his side and becomes determined to help him live a full life despite his condition, leading to the two of them helping to revolutionize how the disabled are viewed by society.

Director: Andy Serkis. Stars: Andrew Garfield, Claire Foy, Ed Speleers, Tom Hollander. 2017. 118 min. Biography.

Flavortown central

Guy Fieri invites viewers to his own home

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Guy Fieri has thrown open the gates to Flavortown. The Food Network chef with the distinctive platinum tips loves tossing that name around for spots with the most fantastic eats, even calling his personal grocery store in "Guy's Grocery Games" "Flavortown Market," but in his latest show, he's sent out invitations to the spot where he cooks up his own off-the-hook flavors.

"Guy's Ranch Kitchen" may sound like it's about Fieri cooking with America's favorite salad dressing, but that "Ranch" in the title actually refers to the host's home in northern California. Guy's sent out some invitations, and in each episode, a bunch of his fellow Food Network cohorts stop by to cook up a storm with their host.

In this week's episode, airing on the last day of the year, Sunday, Dec. 31, Guy's celebrating the Golden State's bounty with a wicked brunch spread. Acclaimed chef and former "The Next Iron Chef" contestant Eric Greenspan got an invite, and he swings by the Fieri ranch to make delicate lemon ricotta pancakes with stone fruit compote.

He's not the only one hanging out at the ranch. Phoenix-based chef Aaron May makes a West Coast Dungeness crab Benedict with avocado salad, chef Carl Ruiz prepares taleggio and asparagus paninis, while former "Aarti Party" host and "The Next Food Network Star" winner Aarti Sequiera preps a spicy Israeli shakshouka (a Middle Eastern favorite of poached eggs in tomato sauce) that's just bursting with the incredible flavor of local tomatoes.

Including 'ol Guy himself, that's a lot of cooks in the kitchen, and that's part of the charm of "Guy's Ranch Kitchen." When chefs get together, they often like to show off, and the Fieri ranch is the perfect place to spark friendly competitions as the chefs strive to outdo each other with the most amazing dishes they can prepare.

It's too bad the rest of us haven't been invited to cook alongside Guy Fieri and his friends (or at least to eat the amazing food that they put out), but at least their cooking antics are on full display in "Guy's Ranch Kitchen," airing Sundays on Food Network.

Q&A hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: The show "Yukon Men" is still on air but only seems to show reruns. Are they ever going to begin showing new content?

A: There's no official word on whether "Yukon Men" will be picked up for an eighth season, and the signs are mixed: the cast members are pretty active on social media (Twitter especially) and haven't indicated any change in their TV-star status, but the ratings aren't promising.

It started out back in 2012 as a golden-boy show, pulling in big numbers for Discovery. They've been sinking since, and they suffered a particularly big drop from season 6 last year to season 7 this year.

That said, there's no reason to panic yet, because it's not overdue or anything — the seventh season just ended in July and the show only airs a single season per year. That, of course, means that in the interim you will see a lot of reruns — that's the specialty-channel trap.

Strongly branded channels such as Discovery and Animal Planet (both of which air "Yukon Men" repeats, though it originates on Discovery) are in a tough spot. Their success is based on the fact that you know what you're getting when you turn to them — Animal Planet, for instance, is only ever going to give you a non-fiction show that's at least loosely about animals. The problem is, of course, they're just about the only ones making those types of shows, and no channel can afford to make new content 24-7 (except the cable news networks).

Broadcast networks can fill their extra time with "Seinfeld" reruns or just about anything else, and less strictly themed cable channels (such as Turner Classic Movies or TVLand) can fill up on a still broad range of shows, most or all of which they didn't produce for themselves.

Q: Is the show about the Busby quints coming back?

A: Yes, but considering how open Adam and Danielle Busby are about every other aspect of their lives in the course of their hit TLC show, "OutDaughtered," they're being surprisingly secretive about when.

Fans have been crying for more episodes, particularly on social media. The Busbys are pretty active Twitter users themselves, and so Adam responded to a fan asking for a return date: "Our story is much bigger than we are and there is still so much more to tell. You will just have to wait and see!"

As you can see, I use the term "respond" loosely here. He at least seems to be confirming that they will be coming back at some point.

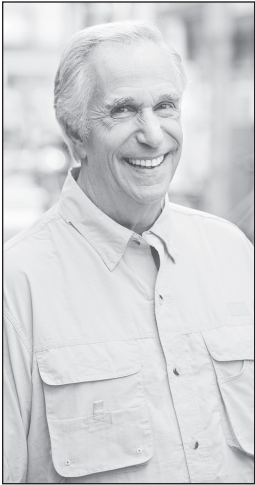

While relieving, perhaps, this isn't particularly surprising. The show's first three seasons, which follow the Busbys as they raise their five quintuplet daughters, with the help of their slightly older daughter Blakey, have been big hits for the network.

Of course, it's not just the children who go through growing pains — the show is as much about the evolution of the parents' relationship. For example, in the third-season finale, which aired in September, Adam and Danielle clashed over her desire to return to work at the family fitness club business.

I rejoice every time a person can hear birds again, children's voices, and the things that are important to them.
