ABC's 'For the People' wraps rookie season

By Kyla Brewer

TV Media

here's something about courtroom drama that has fascinated TV viewers for decades. Such shows often rank among the most popular prime-time programs, even among today's fickle audiences. As one legal drama wraps up for the season, ambitious young lawyers argue their cases in the highprofile "Mother Court" of the United States.

Attorneys are put to the test as they face off in the Southern District of New York Federal Court in the season finale of "For the People," airing Tuesday, May 22, on ABC, All eyes are on the lawyers as they tackle some of the most controversial cases in the nation, but they refuse to back down until justice is Created by Paul William Davies ("Scandal"), the 10-episode Shondaland production stars Vondie Curtis-Hall ("Chicago Hope") as Chief Judge Nicholas Byrne, Hope Davis ("About Schmidt," 2002) as lead public defender Jill Carlan, and Ben Shenkman ("Royal Pains") as Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger Gunn. The talented group of young lawyers includes Jasmin Savoy Brown ("The Leftovers") as Allison Adams, Susannah Flood ("Law & Order: Special Victims Unit") as Kate Littlejohn, Wesam Keesh ("Awkward") as Jay Simmons, Regé-Jean Page ("Roots") as Leonard Knox, Ben Rappaport ("Mr. Robot") as Seth Oliver, and Britt Robertson ("Tomorrowland," 2015) as Sandra Bell. Anna Deavere Smith ("The West Wing") rounds out the cast as nononsense court clerk Tina Kriss-

The cast of the ensemble drama is now part of the Shondaland dynasty, which includes hits "Grey's Anatomy," "Scandal" and "How to Get Away With Murder." The distinction was not lost on Rappaport, who spoke with tvinsider.com in early April about landing a role in "For the People."

"I would describe getting into Shondaland like getting an acceptance letter to an lvy League school," Rappaport explained. "You feel like you're a part of a very special group and club. The whole company, top to bottom - Rappaport plays one half of the show's will-they-won't-they couple, Seth and Allison, who broke up after she used information gleaned from a private conversation to win a case against him. The tension between them is just one example of how the show delves into both the professional and personal lives of the characters. It's a formula familiar to fans of Shonda Rhimes, who's an executive producer of "For the People," along with Davies, Betsy Beers ("Grey's Anatomy"), Donald Todd "This Is Us") and Tom Verica "How to Get Away With Murder"). "For the People" has continued the Shondaland tradition of primetime winners. It showed promise right out of the gate as the series debut pulled in ABC's highest ratings in its Tuesday night time-slot in the key 18-to-29-year-old demographic in five months, with more than 3.2 million viewers in the U.S. In fact, the show is now part of a

Tuesday

I mean everybody — it's just a great culture of respect." night lineup that's earned ABC its longest winning streak in 11 years longest winning streak in 11 years, thanks to a lead-in from comedies "Roseanne," "The Middle," "Blackish" and "Splitting Up Together."

A cut above other legal dramas, "For the People" has plenty to offer viewers in addition to the romantic tension between Oliver and Adams. There are stereotypical overconfident attorneys such as Adams and Knox, who need a healthy slice of humble pie, but there are also a couple of underdogs viewers can't help but root for in Bell and Simmons.

Wise leaders Carlan and Gunn offer audiences a look at both sides of the court cases as they attempt to inspire and motivate above. Meanwhile, brash clerk Krissman keeps evervone in line. and no-nonsense judge Byrne serves as the voice of reason.

One of the reasons the series works so well is the chemistry between the performers. Even viewers who might not be inclined to indulge in legal dramas may enjoy the richly developed relationships between the characters. In fact, the chemistry between the actors is so critical to the cast and crew, production shut down when two of the roles were recast within the first two episodes so writers could adjust dialogue and storylines to reflect the new on-screen personalities. Britne Oldford ("Skins") was originally cast as Sandra and Lyndon Smith ("Parenthood") played Allison, but both left the show early on.

While there's no shortage of personal drama in "For the People," there's just as much excitement inside the courtroom as the lawyers argue cases and defend clients in controversial trials. Each episode tracks the lawyers as they debate such topics as mandatory minimums, whistleblowers, the opioid crisis and white supremacy.

In the season finale, Bell defends a scientist who's been accused of spying for the Chinese government, but memories of a similar case from her past haunts her. At the > same time, Simmons and Littlejohn go head to head in the courtroom in a case involving a drug-dealing PTA president whose clientele was comprised of students. Elsewhere, Adams receives a tempting offer, and Knox asks Littleiohn for advice.

Don't miss the season finale of "For the People," airing Tuesday, May 22, on ABC.

'Iron Chef America' returns to its classic formula

By Andrew Warren

TV Media

Two chefs enter the kitchen, and only one emerges a culinary champion — a classic format for a contest, to be sure, but when one of those competitors is an Iron Chef ... well, let's just say that the lack of a home-field advantage is the least of the challenger's hurdles.

"Iron Chef America" returns to Food Network on Sunday, May 20, with new challengers, a new floor reporter and all sorts of new secret ingredients. That spiffy freshness, though, is tempered by a return to what made the series great and oh-so popular in the first place.

After new episodes failed to materialize for several years despite the show never officially being canceled, "Iron Chef" burst back onto the culinary scene last year with "Iron Chef Gauntlet," a spinoff series that saw Chicago chef Stephanie Izard earn a coveted Iron Chef's jacket. Not long after that, "Iron Chef Showdown" entered the fray: it was more or less the same show as the original "Iron Chef America," but with the addition of a showdown between two non-Iron Chef hopefuls in the first half of each episode, battling each other for the right to challenge the Iron Chef.

Well, "Iron Chef Showdown" is no more — long live "Iron Chef America." Alton Brown ("Cutthroat Kitchen") is back as the competition's host, spinning his vast culinary knowledge into play-by-play commentary for those of us watching from home. The Chairman, played by "Hawaii Five-0" actor Mark Dacascos, also returns, overseeing the competition and revealing each battle's secret ingredient. Jet Tila ("Chopped") takes over as the floor reporter, getting up close and personal with the chefs as they cook.

In this week's premiere, chef Brittany Anderson of Richmond, Virginia, enters Kitchen Stadium to challenge Iron Chef Alex Guarnaschelli. In classic "Iron Chef America" style, the Chairman will reveal the battle's secret ingredient, and both the Iron Chef and the challenger then get 60 minutes to prepare five stunning dishes — and, of course, the secret ingredient must be the star in all of them.

It certainly isn't an easy cooking competition, but it sure is riveting to watch. "Iron Chef America" returns to its roots on Sunday, May 20, on Food Network.

Q: I saw the movie "Southpaw," and the boxing commentator in that movie was the same guy I saw in "Creed," another boxing movie that came out the same year. Is he a former boxer or something?

A: Both of those movies ---2015's "Southpaw" and "Creed" — were aiming for authenticity in their representations of the boxing world, and there are few easier ways to boost your boxing bona fides than hiring legendary commentator Jim Lampley.

Lampley has been calling boxing matches for HBO since 1988, and that job has created an inseparable link between his voice and boxing for the modern-day fan.

And so it shouldn't be surprising that he often gets called on to add a little realism to boxing movies. Other instances include 2010's "The Fighter." 2006's

"Rocky Balboa" and 2001's "Ocean's Eleven."

He wasn't the only real-life boxing personality to get the call for "Southpaw" and "Creed," though. In "Southpaw," he appeared alongside his current HBO on-air partner Roy Jones Jr. (a former fighter himself). And in "Creed," Lampley appeared alongside a number of real pro boxers, such as British heavyweight Tony Bellew and, as the villain of the movie, recently retired champ Andre Ward.

Q: Why did Amy Carlson leave "Blue Bloods"? And is she doing any other projects now?

A: Amy Carlson has never given a ing about her exit, and a few straight answer about her departure from "Blue Bloods," but she has suggested that she wanted to try out other roles. She's proven true to her word — she already has two films poised for release in the comina months.

Carlson has had two main chances to explain the bizarre death of her character — which happened off-screen, in a workrelated helicopter accident that had nothing to do with the events of the show. When the new season premiered without her, Carlson posted an open letter to fans on her social media accounts talkweeks later she did an extensive interview with Deadline.com to discuss it. In both cases, she didn't actually explain much.

All she said directly was that her contract expired at the end of season 7. That, of course, isn't saying much — contracts expire all the time. However, she suggested indirectly that she chose not to renew because she wanted to pursue other projects. In support of this, she had nothing but nice things to say about her co-stars and about CBS.

Because she's been sparing with the details of her decision to leave (assuming it was her decision), it's hard to say whether the two films she's currently booked came before or after.

She has roles in two indie pictures slated for release sometime this year — "The Incoherents," a comedy about a rock band reuniting in middle age, and "A Bread Factory, Part One," a film whose plot details haven't been announced, and couldn't possibly be guessed based on that weird title.
