Mr. Fix-it

The new season of "Ray Donovan" sees the titular Ray (Liev Schreiber, "X-Men Origins: Wolverine," 2009) turn his attention back to his celebrity fixer firm after a shift of focus in season 4. This year, a major client is played by a major talent: look for Oscar winner Susan Sarandon ("Thelma & Louise," 1991) in a recurring role in season 5, when "Ray Donovan" returns Sunday, Aug. 6, on Showtime.

■ho knew rich and glamorous celebrities had so many hush-hush problems? Well, maybe they do in real life and maybe they don't, but they sure keep "Ray Donovan's" eponymous anti-hero busy. Last season's finale episode included some uncommonly high notes for Hollywood's problem solver and his rather dysfunctional family, but those sweet moments are fleeting. Catch the season 5 premiere of "Ray Donovan," airing Sunday, Aug. 6, on Showtime.

Among the fictional elite, Ray Donovan (Liev Schreiber "X-Men Origins: Wolverine," 2009) is the guy you call if you need an unsavory problem dealt with quickly and quietly. A native of South Boston, he pulled himself up from his blue-collar roots to mingle expertly with the glitterati as he goes about his shady work making their problems discreetly disappear. He's a firm family man at heart, though the various and sundry members of the Donovan clan are constantly clashing against one another.

The new season sees Ray turning his attention back to his celebrity fixer firm, after season 4 shifted focus to an ongoing crime plot line. A major client this year is played by a major talent: look for Oscar winner Susan Sarandon ("Thelma & Louise," 1991) in a recurring role in sea-

Things were looking good for the Donovans at the end of last season. Ray avoided prison, and we were even granted an unusually lighthearted scene of him playing video games with his kids. His wife, Abby (Paula Malcomson, "Deadwood"), announced that her cancer is gone, and that she wants the two of them to make a fresh start, while his daughter, Bridget (Kerris Dorsey, "Brothers & Sisters"), was accepted into NYU.

Don't assume the good times will carry on throughout the new season, though. The cast and showrunners aren't saying much about what happens this season, but, as Schreiber told Collider, "It's a very dark year for Ray." He expanded on this in a promo clip:

"Fairly early in the season, something very profound and big has changed in Ray's life — something I people — and the impact of that on this family, and Ray himself, is pretty heavy."

Schreiber, a presence both on the stage and screen, has earned a good deal of recognition for his role over the past four seasons. He's received four Golden Globe nods and three Emmy nominations, the most recent of which could very well turn into a win in September.

It's not just Schreiber who has seen success from the show. "Ray Donovan" opened to record-breaking numbers, becoming Showtime's biggest premiere of all time. It's won a Critics' Choice Television Award, a Golden Globe and an Emmy, among its many nominations, and averaged 1.2 million viewers last season.

The well-known cast is one major draw of the show, with Schreiber being just one of a number of big-name actors. Oscar winner Jon Voight ("Mission: Impossible," 1996) plays Mickey Donovan, Ray's abusive father who turns up in the first episode after 20 years in prison. Though murderous, selfish and contemptible, Mickey is also charismatic and charming, and the character is a real fan favorite. Eddie Marsan ("Jonathan Strange & Mr. Norrell") and Dash Mihok ("The Day After Tomorrow," 2004) play Ray's two brothers, Terry and Bunchy Donovan, who both have their own personal struggles to deal with throughout the series. Pooch Hall ("The Game") rounds out the family as Daryll Donovan, Ray's half-brother and Mickey's son from an affair, who now works for Ray.

Each season has seen its share of talent among the guest stars and supporting cast as well. The likes of Elliott Gould ("Ocean's Eleven," 2001), Hank Azaria ("The Simpsons"), Ann-Margret ("Grumpy Old Men," think is going to really shock a lot of 1993), Ian McShane ("Deadwood") and Lisa Bonet ("The Cosby Show") have graced the roster of supporting cast members, and there are some big names on deck for season 5 as

The biggest of these is surely the ubiquitous Sarandon. The awardwinning acting powerhouse has held well over 100 roles between TV and film since launching her career in the early '70s, and the list of accolades attached to her name is dizzy-season. She joins the cast as mogul Samantha Winslow, the legendary head of a motion picture studio, who employs Ray's "fixing" services.

She's sure to be another feather in "Ray Donovan's" already wellfeathered

"Susan Sarandon plays someone who Ray comes to work for, who has a very, very, very profound effect on shifting Ray's life," Schreiber revealed in the Collider interview. Sarandon added to this in a Showtime promo: "They both are kind of outside the law, and so, she has a secret that brings Ray into her life."

"We're really dependent on story being generated by guest stars," showrunner David Hollander told the Hollywood Reporter. "There is no big bad guy that Ray has to fight year in and year out, and there is no procedural element of whodunit. So we use new characters to bring in what we feel

Not long after Uther Pendragon, King of the Britons (Bana), defeats a villainous warlock, he is betrayed by his own brother, Vortigern (Law), who stages a coup and murders his brother. Years later, Uther's son Arthur (Hunnam) has grown into a man ignorant of his royal heritage, but when he successfully pulls the magical sword Excalibur out of its stone, the truth of his lineage is revealed. This draws the ire of King Vortigern, and the attention of an underground resistance movement whose members want Arthur to lead it in its fight to overthrow the tyrant. Vortigern, however, will stop at nothing to see his royal nephew captured and executed to preserve his own place on the throne. Director: Guy Ritchie. Popular culinary series 'Man v. Food' returns to Travel Channel culinary favorite has returned. After five years without new episodes, one of Travel Channel's most loved series is back with new locations, new foods and a new host.

By Andrew Warren

"Man v. Food" premiered in 2008 and became an instant hit. lasting four seasons (with the last one changing both its format slightly, and its name to "Man v. Food Nation"), and remains popular to this day in reruns.

For the new season, "Man v. Food" is returning to its roots, albeit with a new face on screen. Former host Adam Richman ("Food Fighters") has not returned, but actor, food lover and restaurant industry veteran Casey Webb ("Part Timers") is only too eager to take over in the Monday, Aug. 7, premiere.

For the revived series's first episode, Webb checks out some of the biggest and most outrageous foods that the Big Apple has to offer. First, he pays a visit to Manhattan, where he tracks down a burger that's stuffed with French fries and fondue. Then, he heads to Brooklyn for a taste of what might be the city's most innovative eat: a pizza on a pizza, served in a box made out of (you guessed it) pizza.

Each episode of "Man v. Food" starts out like this: with the host paying a city a visit and experiencing some of its most outrageous foods. The real fun, though, comes in the second half of the episode when Webb takes on one of the host city's food challenges.

For his New York visit, that challenge is at a little place on Staten Island called the Lunchbox. Here, he finds not just one but three extreme culinary tests: an eight-pound sloppy joe, a 151-ounce milkshake and a halfdozen wings doused with habanero ghost chili sauce that packs a million Scoville heat units (that's a lot). Unable to choose which challenge to take on, he leaves it up to chance before diving right in.

And that's where the show really lives up to its name. It's Casey Webb v. Food in "Man v. Food," with a whole new season of the fan favorite premiering Monday, Aug. 7, on Travel Channel.

Q: I'm just catching up on the most recent season of "Brooklyn Nine-Nine," and was wondering about the guy who plays Gina's new boyfriend in the second-to-last episode of the new season. He looks so familiar. A: The casting of Milton Boyle, Gina's new boyfriend (and Charles's cousin), is a clever bit of meta-humor by the writers — the identity of the actor himself is part of the joke.

Gina says at one point that he's famous, but then admits that was a lie. Later, when he is revealed to be Charles's cousin (but before he appears on screen), Charles says multiple times how ugly he is. When he finally shows up, near the end of the episode, he's not ugly at all. He's Ryan Phillippe.

Of course, that means that the actor is, in fact, famous, though the character isn't. That's the essence of meta-humor in TV: It's a joke about the making of the show.

Phillippe is an established star, though perhaps not as big as he once was. In the late '90s, he was in demand and promised to be Hollywood's next big thing, having starred in a string of teen hits such as "I Know What You Did Last Summer" (1997) and "Cruel Intentions" (1999). This is likely the source of "Brooklyn Nine-Nine's" joke regarding his looks — he's best remembered as a teen heartthrob.

He made the right moves after that, appearing in smaller roles in a couple of prestige dramas, namely "Gosford Park" (2001) and "Crash" (2004), both of which earned him multiple awards.

Nonetheless, he sort of fizzled afterwards — he's worked fairly steadily but hasn't drawn the attention he did in his earlier days.

That may be about to change, though, thanks to a move to TV. He's starring in a new show on USA Network called "Shooter." Though it's new to the schedule, the show has actually been around for years, plagued by a long series of delays. It's a pretty high-profile show, based on a popular 2007 film of the same name, which in turn is based on a book ("Point of Impact" by Stephen Hunter).

And of course, his brief turn in "Brooklyn Nine-Nine" could turn in to a recurring thing. We'll find out when show returns Sept. 26 on Fox.

Q: Why don't they show any reruns of "House"?

A: They do, you just have to know where to look.

"House" is still being rerun, but on the somewhat high-numbered cable channels Universal HD, Oxygen and WE (Women's Entertainment).

It used to be easier to find. When the medical drama was finally dropped by Fox after eight hit seasons, it lived on in syndication on the popular basic cable USA Network.

However, USA ran through all 177 episodes in the course of a couple of years and then dropped it.

But take heart — "House" was a huge hit for Fox, and transformed Hugh Laurie from a British comedian into a dramatic star in Hollywood, so "House" will more than likely be bouncing around the dial for years to come. You'll find it on yours soon enough.
