stars in "Sharp Objects"

Home sweet home

When a big city crime reporter (Amy Adams, "Arrival," 2016) returns to her hometown to cover a string of gruesome killings, not all is what it seems. Jean-Marc Vallée ("Dallas Buyers Club," 2013) reunites with HBO to helm another beloved novel adaptation in Gillian Flynn's "Sharp Objects," premiering Sunday, July 8, on HBO. The ensemble cast also includes Patricia Clarkson ("House of Cards") and Chris Messina ("The Mindy Project").

A crime reporter is drawn home in 'Sharp Objects'

By Francis Babin
TV Media

In recent years, we've seen a real renaissance of the television miniseries. These limited series dominated the '70s and '80s, with such heavy hitters as "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Roots," "Shogun" and "North and South" winning numerous awards and drawing viewers by the millions.

The format fell out of favor in the '90s, however. It was nearly revived in the new millennium with "Band of Brothers," "Angels in America" and others, but its real comeback arguably wasn't until 2012, with History's mega hit "Hatfields & McCoys" ruling the airwaves. Since then, we've seen many quality limited series, and on Sunday, July 8, HBO's "Sharp Objects" looks to join this prestigious group.

Since breaking onto the scene with her debut novel "Sharp Objects" in 2006, bestselling author Gillian Flynn has been a force to be reckoned with. Her sophomore novel, "Gone Girl," was adapted for the big screen in 2014 by Academy Award-nominated director David Fincher to great acclaim from critics and audiences alike. The adaptation was a smash success and turned Flynn into a household name.

The following year, her third and most recent novel, "Dark Places," was successfully adapted into a feature film starring Academy Award winner Charlize Theron ("Atomic Blonde," 2017). It was just a matter of time before Flynn's only unadapted novel was given the big screen — or in this case, small screen — treatment.

The eight-episode series follows St. Louis-based journalist Camille Preaker (Amy Adams, "Arrival," 2016), who returns to her hometown of Wind Gap, Mo., to investigate the grisly murder of two young girls. This is her first assignment after a stint in a psychiatric hospital as a result of years of self-harming, and the homecoming isn't all roses. Although some elements of this story sound a tad familiar, like all of Flynn's works there's much more to it.

While authorities are still trying to solve the heinous crime, a new body is discovered, and Preaker finds herself identifying with the victims a bit too closely. Her return home has forced her to confront some personal demons under the watchful and critical eye of her mother, Adora, expertly portrayed by Patricia Clarkson ("House of Cards").

Three preteen victims and a potential serial killer on the loose is a salacious story that should be easy to write, right? Not in Wind Gap. Even with her insights into the town and her understanding of the local culture, Preaker finds it hard to get any information from anyone. Her family name is supposed to open doors, but at every turn she finds herself getting stonewalled by the natives — the worst offender being her mother (who's hosting her in her lavish mansion) standing in the way of the truth.

Preaker's nights alternate between (unsuccessfully) investigating leads and drinking away her troubles with the lead investigator, Det. Richard Willis (Chris Messina, "The Mindy Project"), but more often than not, alone. The boozy nights help with her ever-growing sense of paranoia but trigger painful recollections of her sister Marian's (Lulu Wilson, "Annabelle: Creation," 2017) mysterious death.

Through a series of flashbacks, we grow to understand why Preaker is the way she is, and why she still holds such hostile feelings for her hometown, her socialite mother and her half-sister, Amma (Eliza Scanlen, "Home and Away"). Wind Gap is extremely tight-lipped for a reason, and throughout the series, viewers are pulled further into the small-town secrets, mysteries and anguish.

Last year, HBO struck gold with its wildly popular adaptation of "Big Little Lies." The series garnered rave reviews and tons of buzz. This summer, the network will try to replicate its success by following the same formula: a trendy, well-known novel, big name talent and a celebrated auteur/director in Jean-Marc Vallée ("Dallas Buyers Club," 2013). After his excellent work on "Lies," it's easy to see why he was once again tasked with bringing a heavy and dark novel to the small screen.

We are living in a glorious era of small-screen book adaptations. In the past, Hollywood bigwigs believed that the go-to medium was the big screen, yet the tide has turned in recent years; some stories are just better suited for television (last year's "The Dark Tower" didn't get the memo). Originally envisioned as a feature film, "Sharp Objects" was retooled into a multi-hour series in order to better understand Preaker's character. Adams discussed this at the ATX Television Festival in Austin, Texas, explaining that "Camille needed to be explored over eight episodes. To try to do that in 90 minutes to 120 tops would have been really tricky. The internal monologue of Camille is almost impossible to capture in a 90-minute story."

Not everything is what it seems. Small towns harbor big secrets, and family feuds burn bright while townsfolk look the other way. This is the world in which Camille Preaker was raised, and the world she thought she had escaped. In the years she's been gone, things have only gotten worse. Embrace the darkness, follow the clues and get lost in the twists and turns with the television event of the summer, "Sharp Objects," premiering Sunday, July 8, on HBO.

A Quiet Place

Blind monsters that hunt by sound have killed off most of Earth's people, but on a remote farm, a family lives a silent life, communicating only with sign language to avoid attracting the hungry beasts. Mother Evelyn (Blunt) is pregnant with the couple's fourth child, and husband Lee (Krasinski) desperately tries to keep his family alive, making sure they keep silent during all of their day-to-day activities. With a baby on the way, however, the pain of childbirth and an infant's cries are guaranteed to attract the deadly and hungry creatures.

Director: John Krasinski. Stars: Emily Blunt, John Krasinski, Millicent Simmonds, Noah Jupe, Cade Woodward. 2018. 90 min. Drama.

Chappaquiddick

After an evening of partying and drinking on Chappaquiddick Island, U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy (Clarke) drives his car off a bridge and into the water below. He escapes, but his passenger, political aide Mary Jo Kopechne (Mara), does not, setting in motion a huge political scandal that's made even worse when Kennedy doesn't immediately report the accident and drowning to the police. As the scandal intensifies, his actions increasingly draw the ire of his father, Joseph Sr. (Dern), and cousin Joe Gargan (Helms). Based on true events.

Director: John Curran. Stars: Jason Clarke, Ed Helms, Jim Gaffigan, Kate Mara, Bruce Dern, John Fiore. 2017. 106 min. Drama.

Lean on Pete

A young man named Charley (Plummer), who lives with his estranged father (Fimmel), gets a summer job caring for the horses of an esteemed horse trainer (Buscemi) and forms a bond with the racehorse Lean on Pete. When he learns that Lean on Pete's racing days are nearly finished and that the animal will be put down once it's retired, Charley desperately tries to convince the trainer to spare the animal. When his pleas for mercy go unheard, he takes the horse and goes on the run across the country, leaving his old life behind and searching for a new home for himself and the very special horse.

Director: Andrew Haigh. Stars: Charlie Plummer, Travis Fimmel, Steve Buscemi, Amy Seimetz. 2017. 121 min. Adventure.

Culinary creativity is on full display in new Cooking Channel series

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Let's be honest: summer carnivals have a ton of attractions and reasons to spend a day enjoying them. There are thrilling rides, catchy live music, prize-laden games and fun-filled shows at any carnival worth its salt, and they're all very well and good. For some of us, though, they're just the icing on the proverbial cake: the real attraction at a summer carnival is the over-the-top food.

"Carnival Kings" is a new series that premieres Thursday, July 12, on Cooking Channel, and it's all about the wild and outrageous eats that can only be found at a carnival. Similar to "Carnival Eats," another Cooking Channel favorite, each episode of the new series follows Michelin-starred chef Richie Farina ("Top Chef") as he visits some of the biggest fairs he can find, where he immediately zeros in on the most outrageous food item that he can find. He isn't there just to taste the decadent dish, though — he's there to improve on it.

It's a format that evokes memories of the defunct Food Network series "Throwdown! with Bobby Flay": the super-creative chef Farina challenges carnival chefs on their own turf and tries to make an over-the-top dish somehow even more mouthwatering and extreme. In the premiere, the host is at the Pima County Fair in Tucson, Arizona, where he encounters a bacon-wrapped duck slider with flaming hot cheese puffs and caramel apple slaw that's served with a side of bacon fat tater tots. It's decadent, it's wildly delicious and oh-so wild, and the host has just 24 hours to break it down, figure out what makes it tick, and then create his own take on it that not only tastes just as good, but that also somehow exceeds its creativity.

Many carnival chefs love to compete, and plenty of fairs even have competitions between them to see who can come up with the most creative dish. Chef Richie Farina is definitely going up against the best in his quest to create the most over-the-top foods imaginable. "Carnival Kings" premieres Thursday, July 12, on Cooking Channel.

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: A couple of years ago I watched a movie called “The Care and Handling of Roses” starring Ann Jillian and Lee Horsley. She owned a flower nursery. It may have been on a regular TV channel and not cable. I keep looking for it to be on again — a nice love story. Where can I find it?

A: You might want to give up looking. The advent of the Hallmark Channel and Hallmark Movies & Mysteries channel have produced a bit of a boon for old telefilms, but unfortunately, 1996’s “The Care and Handling of Roses” wasn’t a Hallmark movie. It was made for CBS, and no one’s rushing to dig up its back catalog.
Another thing adding to its obscurity is the fact that it’s an Ann Jillian movie — that’s not a comment on the quality of her movies, just the quantity. She stands as a sort of telefilm legend, having starred in more than 20 of them over the course of her long career. Most notably, of course, she starred in 1988’s “The Ann Jillian Story,” portraying herself in a dramatization of her life and struggle with breast cancer.

Some of her old telefilms can still be found, but usually just the ones with an extra angle of some kind. For example, you can still pick up DVD copies of “MacShayne: Winner Takes All” (1994), but that’s primarily a Kenny Rogers movie, and he has a bigger and more enduring fan base (thanks to that music thing he does on the side).

“The Care and Handling of Roses,” on the other hand, is a pure telefilm — a classic example in all the ways that make it unlikely to endure. It was made on a pretty low budget, with a small cast, and tells a slightly sad but ultimately heartwarming story, about two married film-club members who fall for each other.
Q: Didn’t Jeff Bridges do a boxing movie when he was young? What was it called, and what can you tell me about it?
A: I can tell you that 1972’s “Fat City” was based on a book, that it was one of Jeff Bridges’ first major roles, and that he owes it to his big brother Beau. Beau Bridges auditioned for the role of Ernie, a fresh young kid with a natural talent for boxing, but he said (in an interview on the podcast “WTF With Marc Maron”) that he was told he was too old. And so he recommended his little brother Jeff in his stead.

Jeff, of course, fit the bill perfectly. At the time, he was just starting to gain fame playing innocent-looking kids, most notably in “The Last Picture Show,” released the previous year.

He shared top billing with another relative newcomer, Stacy Keach, who played an aging boxer who develops a friendship, and rivalry, with Bridges’ character. They both ended up being good choices, as “Fat City” is now considered a classic. It was helped by its source material — the 1969 novel of the same name by Leonard Gardner, which was a finalist for the National Book Award in 1970.
