"The Resident"

Life savers

Doctors have the power to save lives, but medicine isn't practiced by saints — it's a business. "The Resident" pulls back the curtain on the power, money and corruption behind modern medicine, as seen through the eyes of a new doctor on his first day. One senior resident takes on the recklessness of doctors in power, even if that means losing face. See who lets the money go to their head in "The Resident," premiering Sunday, Jan. 21, on Fox.

Doctors or businessmen?: 'The Resident' shows both faces

Doctors may have the power to save lives, but they can also use that power to cover up their mistakes. Medicine isn't practiced by saints — it's a business, after all, and that reality can have some dramatic repercussions. See its effects on new doctors in "The Resident," which premieres Sunday, Jan. 21, on Fox.

The network's newest drama examines the good, the bad and the ugly behind the blue curtain of modern-day medicine. Doctors — especially new doctors — struggle with the realization that they can't fix an institution that's more focused on money than on saving people's lives.

Dr. Conrad Hawkins (Matt Czuchry) is more frustrated than anybody by this fact, as he tells Dr. Devon Pravesh (Manish Dayal) on the latter's first day of his residency. Pravesh is the first-year resident that Hawkins socializes to the hospital. Young and ambitious, he wants to be an outstanding doctor — one of the only things the two can find common ground on — but Pravesh realizes that his indoctrination will be nothing as he expected. In the first 10 minutes, Hawkins informs him that everything he's learned about medicine is wrong, and to take off his tie because he's "not at Harvard anymore." When Pravesh asks for a new supervisor (he maintains that Dr. Hawkins is a psychopath), a nurse tells him to watch and learn.

Considering the success of both "Scrubs" and "House," the medical field basis for the series seems to be a good sign for its longevity. Plus, Czuchry has his acting chops. He made his big debut in the big-screen horror-comedy "Eight Legged Freaks" (2002), but he's probably best known for his role as Logan Huntzberger in "Gilmore Girls" and as an alumnus of "The Good Wife."

Dr. Hawkins has the same level of brilliance as Dr. House, but with better social skills. Kind of. He has the whip-smart comebacks that resembles Dr. Cox from "Scrubs," and in one scene he tells the junior residents to "try and not kill anyone" while he's on another floor.

Dayal is best known for his starring role in "The Hundred-Foot Journey" (2014) and "Viceroy's House" (2017), but fans may also recognize him from his role as Vijay Nadeer in "Marvel's Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D."

Melina Kanakaredes plays Dr. Lane Hunter, an oncologist who tells Dr. Hawkins that they can't save everyone — of course, he replies with a cocky "says who?" Kanakaredes is no amateur when it comes to television, either. Her early television credits include a recurring role in "NYPD Blue," and she also guest-starred in "The Practice," "Oz," and starred for five seasons as Dr. Sydney Hansen in NBC's critically acclaimed series "Providence." After a brief hiatus from television for a role in "Cabaret" on Broadway, she returned in 2004 for a role in "CSI: NY" and appeared opposite movie legend Robert De Niro in "15 Minutes" (2001).

Emily VanCamp ("Revenge") plays Nicolette, the nurse who tells Dr. Pravesh to listen and learn from Dr. Hawkins. She's also Dr. Hawkins' on-again, off-again romance. The rate of medical error was shocking for the actress, who studied statistics intently for her character. It's the third-leading cause of death, she told Access Hollywood in an interview.

Hawkins uses unorthodox methods, such as throwing ice on a patient to revive her, but he never forgets the risks of the job. Unlike Dr. Soloman Bell (Bruce Greenwood, "Mad Men"), Hawkins knows the repercussions of a bad decision. Dr. Bell is a celebrity doctor with a lot to lose: he bills over $20 million per year, and he's also the chief of surgery. So, after he hits an artery during a relatively safe procedure and kills a patient, no one questions him when he covers it up with a pre-existing condition — no one except Hawkins, of course, who tells the chief of medicine to consider changing his methods before killing additional patients.

Hawkins may be young, but he's not out of line — he's experienced the fallout of his mistakes. He carries around a picture of a little girl who died due to an error on his part, and the reminder helps him stay humble and diligent.

Most doctors only want to help their patients — but what they don't teach, Hawkins explains, is that there are so many ways to harm. The doctors of "The Resident" will break all the rules that they followed in school. But if it were easy, as Hawkins says, everyone would be a doctor. After all, saving people's lives is the best job in the world.

"The Resident" will replace Fox's "Rosewood," the network's recently canceled medical drama. Other than "The X-Files" revival and Seth MacFarlane's live-action dramedy "The Orville," it's the only drama picked up this season.

There are many medical shows, but "The Resident" will get to the root of what it feels like to be in the trenches of the medical profession today. Don't miss the series premiere airing Sunday, Jan. 21, on Fox.

Jigsaw

The Jigsaw killer returns to his bloody ways in this resurrection of the "Saw" franchise. When detectives Halloran (Rennie) and Hunt (Bennett) begin an investigation into a series of murders, they become suspicious of a former doctor they suspect may be staging copycat killings in the vein of the legendary Jigsaw serial killer. As they get drawn deeper into the killer's twisted views of right and wrong, their very lives are put at stake as they draw closer to exposing the deadly criminal.

Directors: Michael Spierig, Peter Spierig. Stars: Matt Passmore, Tobin Bell, Callum Keith Rennie, Clé Bennett, Hannah Emily Anderson, Laura Vandervoort, Paul Braunstein. 2017. 92 min. Crime.

Geostorm

After a series of brutal and deadly natural disasters kill untold numbers of people and wreak horrific devastation around the globe, a number of weather-controlling satellites are built by the world's major powers. When one of them seems to suffer a glitch and freezes an entire town, the system's chief architect, Jake (Butler), is sent to the orbiting space station that controls the satellites to figure out the source of the problem and prevent it from happening again. What he finds, though, is a conspiracy to weaponize the satellites to create a massive, global-sized weather event that will kill millions and devastate nations.

Director: Dean Devlin. Stars: Gerard Butler, Jim Sturgess, Abbie Cornish, Daniel Wu, Alexandra Maria Lara, Eugenio Derbez. 2017. 109 min. Action.

Thank You for Your Service

After returning from a tour of duty in Iraq, Adam Schumann (Teller) has difficulty readjusting to civilian life. Although he has a loving and supportive wife (Bennett) and two beautiful children, his frequent nightmares and flashbacks to his time in Iraq make his return to family life anything but perfect, and his buddies Solo (Koale) and Billy (Cole) aren't doing any better. Together, they try to deal with their psychological issues to do what's best for themselves and their families.

Director: Jason Hall. Stars: Miles Teller, Haley Bennett, Joe Cole, Beulah Koale, Amy Schumer, Erin Darke, Keisha Castle-Hughes. 2017. 109 min. Biography.

'Cake Hunters' challenges bakers to make crowd-pleasing creations

A scene from "Cake Hunters"

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

You know, it occurs to me that there are three different categories of cake.

There's the sort that's easy to whip up at home and that doesn't get too elaborate with the decorations or with teetering tatters: they have just a simple icing, maybe a nice ganache or even some sprinkles. Then there's the more elaborate creations, the sort usually pulled out of the oven for birthdays, anniversaries or other special events, with colorful themes and well wishes written in icing on the top.

It's that third category, though, where things get really interesting. We're talking towering creations, the sorts of edible art that shows like "Cake Boss" love to show off, and the surge in popularity for these stunning creations has led to a bunch of TV shows being made about them. "Cake Hunters" on Cooking Channel is just one of them, albeit one with its own special style.

The latest season premiered last week and currently airs Friday evenings on the culinary network, and in this week's Jan. 26 episode, a mother and daughter can't agree on a cake style for Kendelle's upcoming Sweet 16 party. She wants a cake that celebrates her maturity, with a theme that embraces her love of music, theater and the arts.

Her mom, Bambi, has different ideas for her little girl's celebration. She wants sugar, spice and everything nice in a cake that Kendelle thinks would be better suited for a toddler.

In each week's episode, two conflicting cake visions are tackled by three professional bakers. This week they're challenged to design a cake that will please both mother and daughter, and once the family chooses which design they want to go with, the bakers face their next daunting challenge: baking, building and decorating the edible art creation on a tight schedule, and then getting it delivered to the party venue in one piece.

Combining two conflicting visions into one cake isn't easy, but it's the sort of thing that the pros do on the job every day. "Cake Hunters" takes audiences inside that flour-filled world Friday evenings on Cooking Channel.

Q&A hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I know "Happy Days" had several spinoffs, but is it true that "Happy Days" was a spinoff itself?

A: Like the show itself, which is a family sitcom on the surface that's really about nostalgia and the fading of innocence, that question is more complicated than it seems.

If series creator Garry Marshall had gotten his way, "Happy Days" would not have been a spinoff. It would have appeared fully formed as a new show in prime time.

However, the pilot he wrote didn't get picked up at first, and so he eventually adapted it to be aired as an episode of the anthology series "Love, American Style." Thus, it did begin life as part of another series, but not in the sense that any of its characters were part of a different show's fictional universe (which is how spinoffs usually work).

Reportedly, director George Lucas watched it on "Love, American Style," and was impressed by Ron Howard's mature performance (he was, of course, already familiar with his immature performances as Opey in "The Andy Griffith Show"). As a result, he cast Howard in his 1973 film "American Graffiti," a critically acclaimed and popular snapshot of '70s teen culture.

The attention Howard got from that film brought renewed interest to the "Happy Days" pilot, and so ABC (which also owned "Love, American Style") picked it up.

So "Happy Days" wasn't a spinoff in the textbook sense, but it did begin life as part of another show.

Q: Is it true that Ben Affleck guest starred in an episode of "Buffy the Vampire Slayer"?

A: Close, but not quite. Ben Affleck appeared as an uncredited extra in the 1992 film "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," which eventually spawned the show (though actually "sired" is the more popular vampire term).

The generally accepted narrative attached to Affleck is that he and his school friend Matt Damon exploded onto the Hollywood scene with their indie smash "Good Will Hunting," in which they wrote and starred. However, few remember that they both struggled through a series of small parts before getting the megastars they are today. (Adorably, the inseparable buddies even did some of that struggling together — they appeared as uncredited baseball fans in 1989's "Field of Dreams.")

One of Affleck's small parts was as "Basketball Player #10" in the surprise-hit 1992 comedy "Buffy the Vampire Slayer."

He was in good company, too. I'm not necessarily referring to the stars — it actually toplined some

'80s and '90s stars who were on the downward slope of their fame arc, namely Luke Perry and Kristy Swanson — but rather to Affleck's fellow extras. Rock star Slash (of the band Guns N' Roses), future talk show great Ricki Lake and film and TV star Seth Green were among those putting in uncredited appearances.

Many also don't know that Affleck appeared in a number of made-for-TV movies before he was famous, including one of the notorious "ABC Afterschool Specials" in 1986.
