Roll the 'Dice'

Andrew Dice Clay attempts another TV comeback

By Kyla Brewer

TV Media

verything old is new again. In the 1990s, Andrew Dice Clay ("The Adventures of Ford Fairlane," 1990) was known for his expletive-laden, brash brand of humor. For a while, he was on top, but the entertainment industry is notoriously fickle, and he faded from view within a decade of his rise to fame.

Now, he hopes to be famous for a new four-letter word. The comedian stages a comeback in the semi-autobiographical scripted comedy "Dice," premiering Sunday, April 10, on Showtime. Created by Scot Armstrong ("Old School," 2003), the six-episode series follows Clay as he moves his family to Las Vegas in the hopes of kick-starting his career after a slump. The aging comedian also struggles to pay his gambling debts, manage his sons' rock band and keep his family afloat, all the while fending off old fans.

The situations Dice finds himself in are billed as "semi-true" in Showtime's release, which Clay reiterated in a behind-the-scenes promo for the series.

"The show is the most berserk thing, and it's funny that I'm saying that because it's a hybrid of my life," he said, adding: "Now, after 38 years of comedy, I like to make fun of where I am."

"Dice's" premise isn't terribly new. Matt LeBlanc ("Friends") won a Golden Globe in 2012 for his portrayal of himself in "Episodes," and Larry David popularized the premise as a fictionalized version of himself in his comedy "Curb Your Enthusiasm," which ran from 2000 to 2011 on HBO. Clay offers viewers a similar self-deprecating take on the genre, but also intends to inject his prime-time doppelganger with sentimentality.

"I'll do anything, but now and then, we should see this guy's heart," explained Clay. "That's what makes any comedy a suc-

The cast should also factor into the show's success, and producers have lined up some high-profile guest stars to keep things interesting. Kevin Corrigan ("Grounded for Life") co-stars as Dice's right-hand man and partner-in-shenanigans, a guy known as Milkshake. His character, according to Clay, is a hybrid of a few of his friends. Corrigan explained he liked to think of Milkshake as Dice's conscience.

Natasha Leggero ("Another Period") portrays Dice's girlfriend, Carmen. It's interesting to note that she's listed as a quest star and not a series regular. which leads to speculation she may not be around for very long. That wouldn't come as a surprise, considering Dice's antiquated views about women.

In October, it was announced Lorraine Bracco ("The Sopranos") would join the cast of "Dice" for two episodes as Toni, a Las Vegas overlord in control of Dice's gambling debts. Adrien Brody ("The Pianist," 2002) guest stars as himself in one episode, and other guest stars announced so far include Michael Rapaport ("Boston Public"), Wayne Newton ("Smokin' Aces," 2006), Criss Angel ("Criss Angel Mindfreak") and Rita Rudner ("Hollywood Squares").

It's an impressive roster that just might put "Dice" on the map and help revive Clay's floundering career. He rose to fame on the stand-up comedy circuit and became the first comedian to sell out New York's Madison Square Garden two nights in a row in 1990. However, his controversial persona and material led to a lot of backlash from the public and he ultimately fell from favor. His 1990 appearance on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" was boycotted by both series star Nora Dunn and musical guest Sinead O'Connor.

"Dice" isn't Clay's first attempt at a comeback. Back in 2007, he starred in his own reality TV series — "Dice: Undisputed" on VH1, but it only lasted six episodes. He represented the charity StandUp for Kids in the second season of "The Celebrity Apprentice" but was fired by Donald Trump in the very first episode.

Despite being lambasted by tible" the same year. His role in women's groups for his sexist humor and being named one of the Woody Allen's "Blue Jasmine" world's worst standup comedians by Complex Magazine in 2011, he soldiered on with his calook at the performer as a charreer throughout the 2000s. He

Also, he boozle festival exemplified and embraced his in 2012 controversial history when he and hosted Showtime's comedy starred showcase "The Blue Show" in in the 2015. More recently, he guest starred in HBO's '70s-era dra-Showma "Vinyl." He's guest starred as himself several times

The Forest

At the base of Japan's Mount Fuji lies the famous Aokigahara Forest, a place that features prominently in Japanese folklore and is a popular destination for people with suicidal intentions. Some locals believe that the lost souls of those who have taken their lives still haunt the forest. When Sara's (Dormer) identical twin sister disappears into the forest, the police confess that they believe she has taken her own life. Unconvinced, Sara teams up with a handsome reporter named Aiden (Kinney) to journey deep into the woods in search of her sister. Despite the objections of their guide, Sara and Aiden leave the path and spend the night in the forest, and its horrifying reality begins to come to light.

Director: Jason Zada. Stars: Natalie Dormer, Taylor Kinney, Yukiyoshi Ozawa. 2016. 93 min. Horror.

Standoff

While visiting her parents' grave on the anniversary of their death, a young girl named Bird (Ballentine) witnesses a hitman (Fishburne) killing everyone attending a nearby funeral. She catches the killer's face on camera and flees the cemetery, but the killer gives chase. Bird comes across a remote farmhouse and seeks help from its owner, a jaded veteran named Carter (Jane). With only a single shell left in his shotgun, Carter fortifies the second floor of his home while the hitman roams the first floor, uncovering secrets buried in Carter's past and desperately trying to kill the little girl who can identify him. Director: Adam Alleca. Stars: Thomas Jane, Laurence Fishburne, Ella Ballentine. 2016. 80 min. Thriller.

Flight 7500

A routine flight from Los Angeles to Tokyo is anything but when a supernatural horror makes its presence known in the aircraft's cramped cabin. When Lance (Kelly), a businessman traveling with a wooden box, suddenly dies mid-flight, a terrifying series of events is set in motion. Soon, the plane's systems begin to malfunction in bizarre ways, and the passengers start to hallucinate and see things that are anything but ordinary for a routine plane ride. Director: Takashi Shimizu. Stars: Ryan Kwanten, Amy Smart, Rick Kelly, Leslie Bibb, Jamie Chung, Nicky Whelan. 2014. 97 min. Horror.

'Spring Baking Championship' brightens up the kitchens

By Andrew Warren TV Media

t's been spring for a few weeks already, and the temperature's on its way up — both outside in the sun and inside in the Food Network kitchens.

April showers bring frosting flowers, at least it does in the "Spring Baking Championship." The Food Network competition premieres Sunday, April 10, and continues with an hour-long episode every Sunday evening until the spring wedding-themed finale airing May 15.

Eight of the best bakers in the country have signed up for the challenge of pleasing both the eyes and the palates of the three judges. Duff Goldman ("Ace of Cakes"), Nancy Fuller ("Farmhouse Rules") and the U.K.'s Lorraine Pascale ("Baking Made Easy") are all back to judge the sophomore season, and when it comes to all things sweet and baked, these three aren't to be trifled with.

Food Network personality Bobby Deen ("Not My Mama's Meals") also returns as the host overseeing the events, a role he also fills for the festively themed "Holiday Baking Championship."

For the premiere, the bakers are getting a little bit fruity. For their first challenge, Deen charges them with making a springtime classic: a sumptuous, tender shortcake.

This is "Spring Baking Championship," though, not the local church social, and these bakers need a bit more of a challenge than just a plain old strawberry shortcake. In a "berry" sweet twist, the bakers have to make their shortcakes without any berries at all.

It's a twist that's turned on its head for the night's second challenge. With the shortcakes behind them, the bakers turn their attention to naked cakes that must feature berries as their main flavor. The stakes are high, too: whoever bakes the least satisfying confection is sent home empty-handed.

Of course, by the end of the series, all but one of the eight bakers will be going home without anything but their experiences. For the winner, though, there's a sweet $50,000 waiting at the end of the finale, along with the bragging rights that come with out-baking some of the country's top talents.

Q: Will the ABC series "Blood & Oil" be back soon, or at all? I'm a big fan of Don Johnson and loved the series!

A: Your suspicion about the show's fate was right: "Blood & Oil" has been canceled.

The prime-time soap about oil barons in a booming North Dakota town, a sort of "Dallas" in the north, failed to retain its strong early following. It drew more than six million viewers for its premiere in September, but by late October it had shed almost half of them, causing ABC to reduce its episode order from 13 to 10.

And that's all it ended up getting — the show's 10th episode, which aired in mid-December, was its last. The producers seemed to see that coming, so there was a fair bit of closure provided for the various, tangled plotlines

Though the ratings were disappointing, this may be one of the rare cases where that wasn't the main reason the show ended. A number of sources reported that there was internal strife between the writers and the network, and even among the writers themselves.

An article in the Hollywood Reporter at the time of the show's episode reduction said the network wanted "more 'OMG' moments," while the writers wanted to make an "emotional soap." The conflict meant that, at one point, the show was operating two separate writers' rooms. Of course, anything would have been workable if the ratings had been high enough.

None of the principle cast (that is, Don Johnson, Amber Valletta, Chace Crawford or Rebecca Rittenhouse) has announced any new project, though supporting star Delroy Lindo (who played Sheriff Tip Harrison) is remaining on ABC's schedule by joining the cast of "Marvel's Most Wanted," a spinoff of the network's comic book hit "Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D."

Q: Are there any plans for any of the networks to rerun "The West Wing"?

A: The short answer is no, there's been no word of a new syndication deal for "The West Wing."

But it's not the sort of thing that would get a big announcement anymore. When Bravo bought the rights to be the first network to rerun the show back in 2003, it was big news — partly because the show was still producing new episodes, and partly because of the price Bravo paid (reportedly $1.2 million per episode). Today, though, it slips under the radar.

For example, it ran on Yes TV, a relatively high-numbered cable network, for a few years until 2014, coming and going from the schedule with little fanfare.

In 2013, Warner Bros. (the current rights holder) made a deal with Netflix to make "The West Wing" reruns available online, but it reserved the right to sell to traditional TV networks as well. This suggests that a return to TV is likely at some point, but that it won't be treated as a big deal when it does.

A&E Storage Wars

When the buyers head to an auction in Westminster, California, the units there sell for thousands of dollars in a new episode of "Storage Wars," airing Tuesday, April 12, on A&E. While Jarrod and Brandi hope for a quick and easy score, Ivy goes on a buying spree, and Renee finds a collector's unit.
