"Insecure"

Fiercely funny females

Kelli (Natasha Rothwell, "Love, Simon," 2018) gives Issa (Issa Rae, "The Misadventures of Awkward Black Girl") some financial advice in a new episode of "Insecure," airing Sunday, Aug. 19, on HBO. Meanwhile, Daniel (Y'lan Noel, "The First Purge," 2018) attempts to make an important music industry connection. Yvonne Orji ("Night School," 2018) also returns this season as Issa's BFF, Molly, in the acclaimed comedy-drama created by Rae and Larry Wilmore ("The Daily Show").

Third time's the charm

HBO comedy 'Insecure' is back for season 3

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

As young women navigate the ups and downs of modern life, it helps to have a crew of steadfast girlfriends along for the ride.

Issa Dee (Issa Rae, "The Misadventures of Awkward Black Girl") relies on her close friends in another eight-episode season of the award-winning HBO series "Insecure," airing Sunday, Aug. 19. When the season opened the week before, Issa was living with her ex, Daniel (Y'lan Noel, "The First Purge," 2018), and her precarious financial situation means it would be unwise to move out. Meanwhile, her BFF, Molly (Yvonne Orji, "Night School," 2018), struggles to keep it together now that she's finally landed her dream job at a black-owned law firm.

Created by Rae and loosely based on her hit web series "Awkward Black Girl," the series offers viewers a glimpse into the lives of a tight-knit group of black women, who are often underrepresented in prime-time television. This season, the women strive to make the right decisions as they continue to evolve in their 30s. In an interview with the Hollywood Reporter, Rae talked about how the characters grow in season 3.

"This season is about not acting like you're naive anymore or that you don't know better," Rae explained. "So it is about, what does it look like to know better and to do better?"

Following their mantra to "know better, do better," Issa and her pals face the realities of their situations. Now that she's no longer with Lawrence ("Jay Ellis, "The Game"), Issa is conflicted about her complicated relationship with Daniel, her childhood friend and on-again, off-again lover. Professionally, she isn't sure about her future with the nonprofit she's been working for, We Got Y'all.

As for Daniel, he struggles to get his music career off the ground. While fans of Ellis, who played Issa's love interest in the first two seasons, are likely disappointed he isn't back, this season opens the door to explore a new side of African American culture through the eyes of Daniel. In a June interview with Vibe.com, Rae revealed one of this season's major themes.

"I love black masculinity as it relates to black women," Rae said. "I think that's something interesting that we haven't gotten a chance to explore yet — and specifically toxic male black masculinity as it relates to black women. I'm trying to find a way to explore that and get a rounded storyline that isn't preachy."

Issa and her relationship issues may take up a lot of time, but black female friendship is still at the core of "Insecure" in season 3. While Issa tries to figure out what to do about Daniel and her career, Molly deals with her own problems. She may be a successful corporate lawyer, but she hasn't been able to translate that kind of success into her romantic pursuits. To make matters worse, her hang-ups and insecurities could sabotage her newly secured dream job.

A very pregnant Tiffany (Amanda Seales, "My Brother and Me") deals with the pressures of impending motherhood, but she still finds time to spend with her girlfriends. However, it's obvious the dynamics of the group are changing.

Natasha Rothwell ("Love, Simon," 2018) — who's been in the news recently because of her casting in "Wonder Woman 1984" (due in 2019) — reprises her role as the group's straight shooter, Kelli. Rothwell also works as a writer on the series, which focuses on diversity both in front of and behind the camera.

From the beginning, Rae was determined to assemble an inclusive team to work on "Insecure." When HBO was looking for a director for the comedy-drama, she recommended Grammy-winning music video director Melina Matsoukas, known for her work behind the camera of Solange Knowles' "Losing You" video. She's directed a number of episodes of "Insecure," and her involvement led to Knowles becoming the show's music consultant.

Music is a big part of the series. Featuring indie acts and established artists, the show's soundtrack has earned praise from critics and fans, who can't get enough of Rae's raps in front of her mirror. Songs from Drake, Vince Staples, Blood Orange and D'Angelo have been featured on the show, along with music from "Insecure's" official composer, Raphael Saadiq, who rose to fame as a member of the R&B group Tony! Toni! Toné!

The mix of music, comedy and drama has earned the first two seasons of "Insecure" many accolades for Rae and her cohorts, including two pending Emmy nominations. Rae has been nominated in the Outstanding Lead Actress in a Comedy Series category and Patrick Cady has been nominated for a cinematography Emmy for season 2's "Hella LA" episode. Rae's role as Issa has also earned her a Golden Globe nomination and consecutive NAACP Image Award nominations for both acting and writing. "Insecure" was named one of the top 10 TV programs of the year in 2017.

Rae may be enjoying her success these days, but things aren't so great for her on-screen alter ego. Luckily, Issa has her gal pals to lean on in the new season of "Insecure," airing Sunday, Aug. 19, on HBO.

Deadpool 2

After his girlfriend is killed by a target that he'd failed to kill, Deadpool (Reynolds) tries to help a young mutant named Firefist (Dennison) but ends up getting both of them arrested and imprisoned in a facility for criminal mutants. When a time-traveling cybernetic soldier named Cable (Brolin) attacks the prison with the goal of killing Firefist before he can grow up into a murderer, Deadpool vows to protect the boy and begins assembling his own team of misfit mutants, called X-Force. With the members of X-Force at his back, including the incredibly lucky Domino (Beetz), Deadpool sets out to protect the boy from Cable's wrath.

Director: David Leitch. Stars: Ryan Reynolds, Josh Brolin, Julian Dennison, Zazie Beetz, Brianna Hildebrand, Stefan Kapicic, T.J. Miller. 2018. 119 min. Action.

Show Dogs

Police dog Max (Ludacris) goes undercover at a dog show with Frank (Arnett), his human partner, as they try to crack the case of an animal-smuggling organization. While the gruff dog is bathed, groomed and pampered, he digs for clues and information from the show dogs while trying to not seem too out of his element. Meanwhile, Frank works the human side of the event as the two partners close in on stopping the sale of a baby giant panda.

Director: Raja Gosnell. Stars: Will Arnett, Ludacris, Natasha Lyonne, Omar Chaparro, Jordin Sparks, RuPaul, Gabriel Iglesias. 2018. 92 min. Adventure.

First Reformed

Ernst Toller (Hawke) is the reverend of a dwindling historical church in a small New York town who, since his son's death, has struggled with his thoughts and grief. He's approached by Mary (Seyfried), a loving wife seeking help for her troubled husband, Michael (Ettinger), who has become increasingly dismayed and radical about the state of the environment. When Mary finds a bomb-strapped vest that her husband made in the garage, all three of them have their lives radically changed.

Director: Paul Schrader. Stars: Ethan Hawke, Amanda Seyfried, Cedric the Entertainer, Philip Ettinger. 2017. 113 min. Drama.

Food hackers: New series makes the latest food trends easy as pie

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

When it comes to cooking, there are the timeless classics that every basic cookbook and how-to culinary show tries to teach. But what if you're a humble home cook who wants to replicate that amazingly complex dish that you had while out at a restaurant? Or what if the latest food fad has you interested, but the actual steps behind making it leave you scratching your head?

No need to worry — Food Network's newest show has you covered. "Let's Eat" premiered last week and currently airs Sunday mornings. Three talented hosts and a ton of special guests check out all that is current in the culinary world, and they break down the latest trends into easy-to-follow steps while sharing their best tricks, tips and recipes.

"Let's Eat" is hosted by Irish celebrity chef Stuart O'Keeffe, who starred in "Private Chefs of Beverly Hills," YouTube channel "POPSUGAR Food: Eat the Trend" host Brandi Milloy and former "Food Network Star" contestant Jamika Pessoa. Together, the trio teaches audiences the latest in innovative cooking techniques that make time spent in the kitchen easier, faster or just more creative. Whether it's a classic chicken pot pie that boasts a tater tot crust or hush puppies stuffed with bacon, cheddar and jalapeno, these three aren't afraid to take shortcuts or mess with traditional dishes so long as the end result is wow-worthy.

The hosts aren't tied to their kitchen, either. They frequently head out to restaurants that are home to dishes that have gone viral, where they dive into the secrets that have made them so popular and meet with their creators, getting tips for making them straight from the mouths of the chefs that know them best.

Much like fashion, food trends come and go, and it can be hard to keep up with not only the latest hot dishes but also the cooking techniques used to make them at home. Luckily, "Let's Eat's" three hosts are doing the legwork so that home cooks can focus on what's important: presenting absolutely beautiful and mouthwatering dishes. "Let's Eat" currently airs Sundays on Food Network.

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: Did Robin Williams ever guest star in "The Simpsons"? He was the best voice actor and it seems like everyone who was anyone was in "The Simpsons."
A: It does seem a little surprising that Robin Williams, one of the most prominent comic actors of his generation, never appeared in the show that made use of just about every comic voice actor available (and quite a few non-comic actors to boot).

Of course, there's more than one way to appear in "The Simpsons." Though the show couldn't land him as a guest, the writers felt free to mention him in a couple of episodes.
He even "appeared" in one, but he was voiced by series regular Dan Castellaneta. In the 2012 episode "How I Wet Your Mother," Williams appears in one of Homer's dreams, saying that Stanley

Kubrick asked him to star in "The Shining."
He doesn't appear in the other episodes, he's just the butt of some "Simpsons"-style jokes — lighting-fast riffs that draw references from random and unrelated areas of popular culture. Come to think of it, the kind of jokes Williams built a career on.
Q: I loved the "Broadway's Best" series that ran on PBS in the fall of 2017 and included broadcasts of "She Loves Me," "Holiday Inn," and "Present Laughter." Are there plans for more broadcasts in 2018, or even for making it a returning series like "Great Performances at the Met"?

A: If there are plans to continue the "Broadway's Best" series-within-a-series, no one's talking about them.
As it stands, the whole series consisted of just six specials, broadcasts of six hit Broadway musicals: "She Loves Me," Noel Coward's "Present Laughter," "In the Heights," "Indecent," Irving Berlin's "Holiday Inn" and "Falsettos." The first five on that list aired as part of PBS's ongoing "Great Performances" series, while the sixth aired as part of "Live From Lincoln Center."

Unfortunately, because of their unconventional format as series within series, and because that format is airing on the already-unconventional PBS, it's hard to get info about it, or a sense of when it might come back.
With a conventional series — one that airs in seasons and follows a normal production schedule — you can guess at a return date even if one hasn't been announced. If a series aired in the fall of 2017, it'll likely air again in the fall of 2018, unless it's been canceled (and then you'd get hints of that, such as announcements that the stars have taken new roles in other shows).

None of those things apply to the "Broadway's Best" series. It seems to have aired as a sort of experiment on "Great Performances" and "Live From Lincoln Center." And those shows air on PBS, which doesn't really follow seasons like the other broadcast networks, and which doesn't ask its various local channels around the country to air the same schedule (for example, while "Broadway's Best" began in the fall of 2017 for you, it didn't do so for all of the PBS stations across the country).

NBC

Making It

The holidays are here in a new episode of "Making It," airing Tuesday, Aug. 21, on NBC. First, the crafters must make inventive Halloween costumes. Then, in the master craft challenge, they're tasked with making festive door displays for their favourite holidays while hosts Amy Poehler and Nick Offerman offer words of encouragement.

Amy Poehler co-hosts "Making It"
