

3 journalists needed

The Coastside News Group, which publishes the Half Moon Bay Review and Pacifica Tribune on the San Mateo County coast, has immediate openings for three journalist positions.

- Fulltime photographer: Our photographer shoots for the weekly newspapers as well as Coastside magazine, a glossy four-color monthly lifestyle magazine. The successful candidate will likely have been published before, be able to move nimbly between hard news and feature assignments and enjoy working on deadline. There is no better environment for a photographer than our coverage area, which includes coastal bluffs and soaring redwoods for backdrops.
- Fulltime news reporter: This position focuses primarily on the city of Pacifica and monitors public agencies as well as reporting on events and people who shape the city. Our news reporters are likely to have worked for news organizations previously and to have college degrees in journalism or a related field.
- Fulltime community/sports reporter: This reporter splits coverage roughly equally between concerts, events and people that together build community, and coverage of sports at four local high schools. This is an entry-level position perfect for someone in the community who might have more contacts than experience in journalism.

All three positions include health benefits and an unparalleled coastal working environment. Our publications routinely win top awards, including the General Excellence prize given by the California News Publishers Association. The work will primarily be conducted out of our charming Half Moon Bay office, though there is the opportunity for some remote work. Some night and weekend work can be expected.

Send resume, cover letter and no more than three work samples to jobs@coastsidenewsgroup.com. Please, no phone calls.
