Finally - no parents were notified. I should not be finding out about this having happened at my daughters school a year later. Appropriate information should have been shared with the appropriate people. This is not fear-mongering this is information to protect our children. Information should have been shared with parents/care givers on what was known, how it was being taken care of, and how to speak to our children. We don't know if there are other victims/survivors of Mr Craswell but I will certainly be having a conversation with my child and I pray S15(1) was never a victim.

As I have said - I am beyond disturbed by this information. I am disgusted with how it was handled. And I feel stuck. I am sending my child to school where I can't trust the substitutes, the PSB is not sending out appropriate information, and I already Section 15(1) , with the response from both ends being more concerned about that being "not my job" than keeping our children safe.

I'm sure I will not be the only parent with many feelings. And we deserve to have these feelings. And I hope something will be publicly announced about how PSB will do better in their hiring practices and communication so we can keep our most precious children - our futures - safe.

Respectfully,

Section 15(1)
