A film crew from the Travel Channel was in Stony Creek this past week focusing on the mystery surrounding a lost fortune. The Keefer Brothers produce an outdoors-themed show for the network, and are behind the production that was filming at Lodge at Harrisburg Lake (red square) and surrounding areas in the remote western Warren County town. The episode of "Code of the Wild," focuses on the mysterious missing fortune of Prohibition-era bootlegger and gangster Dutch Schultz, whose riches were said to be buried in a remote area of Upstate New York to avoid tax evasion before he was murdered in 1935.
