

Cleanup, concerns continue

Staff photo by Edward Lea

Shelters busy

In addition to evacuees are recent arrivals who can't stay in their storm-damaged homes. C1

Beware scams

Some unscrupulous contractors will be eager to take advantage of property owners. A5

Can't get to job?

Residents of 8 counties may qualify for federal Disaster Unemployment Assistance. A11

Staff photo by Edward Lea

Slots still silent

Gov. Chris Christie expresses concern about issues in the rest of the city. A10

NJEA cancels

The move gives school districts a chance to make up days missed because of Sandy. C4

Staff photo by Michael Ein

Fighting looting

Atlantic City resident Angela Jones found her home emptied out by burglars. A14

Open and shut

See what's closed and what to check when you return home. C8

AP photo by Kathy Kmonicek

Across the East

Frustration mounts in New York and other states hit by Sandy. A3

Press editorial

Erroneous reports on damage are the last thing A.C. needs. A12

At The Shore

Your entertainment guide takes a look at Restaurant Week. Inside

POST-SANDY ASSESSMENT

Staff photo by Dale Gerhard

Sand covers Central Avenue at 52nd Street in Ocean City. See how the city is coping with storm damage on C1, and more photos on C7.

Press photo by Dave Griffin

Homes along the Delaware Bay in Fortescue were severely damaged while others were swept away during Sandy. See story on C1.

Staff photo by Danny Drake

Members of the Ship Bottom Volunteer Fire Company are going house to house checking gas meters for leaks.

SAND, SAND EVERYWHERE

Storm left behind clogged roads and much damage on LBI

By DONNA WEAVER

Staff Writer

As Hank Bechler watched the water rise Monday night at the 20th Street beach in Ship Bottom, he said, he was thinking about the movie "The Perfect Storm."

"When the moon came out, all I could think of was George Clooney saying, 'It's not going to let us out.' And it didn't," Bechler said.

On Long Beach Island Thursday, authorities opened access to parts of the island after a storm brought by Hurricane Sandy on Monday and Tuesday caused massive flooding and wind damage. Essential personnel were allowed back on the island and workers struggled to restore utilities to homes and businesses.

Other contractors are working to clear away sand that has rendered many of the roads impassable, according to the island's joint offices of emergency management.

Bechler was sifting through the remnants of his life Thursday afternoon at his bayfront Bayview Terrace home, a small

Staff photo by Danny Drake

Contruction equipment pushes sand into a pile on Atlantic Avenue in Beach Haven. Many of the roads on Long Beach Island remain impassable. See a full page of photos of damage on the island on C6.

Mayor submits request to reopen Atlantic City

By LYNDIA COHEN and EMILY PREVITI

Staff Writers

Mayor Lorenzo Langford will make a formal request that the governor reopen Atlantic City this morning.

Langford, along with Public Safety Director Willie Glass

and Police Chief Ernest Jubilee, surveyed the city Thursday evening and found enough power was back to merit the reopening at 8 a.m.

Earlier in the day, Gov. Chris Christie reopened all but two

LANGFORD

See Reopen, A8

Island residents angry over lack of access, info

By STEVEN LEMONGELLO

Staff Writer

Howard Rosenfeld said he would never leave his home in Margate again after not being allowed back for three days — and not being given a timeline of when he could return.

On Thursday, Gov. Chris Christie rescinded the evacuation order for Margate, Longport and Brigantine. Atlantic City and Ventnor remained under evacuation on the orders of local officials, who continue to prohibit access while public safety and public health concerns are resolved.

While the governor's decision was

See Access, A8

Price gouging allegations in hundreds

By LYNDIA COHEN and ANJALEE KHEMLANI

Staff Writers

Sandy isn't the only thing that has devastated state residents — hundreds of allegations of price gouging have come into the state Division of Consumer Affairs.

"We've deployed approximately 50 investigators and teams throughout the state," Eric Kanefsky, acting DCA director, said Thursday. "We're actively investigating and being very, very aggressive to combat it."

He said the main complaints have been about gas stations, lodging, food and other necessities.

Kanefsky would not name the places allega-

See Prices, A4

Expressway clogged at detour

Staff photo by Vernon Ogrodnek

Cars are backed up on the Atlantic City Expressway attempting to get into Atlantic City near Exit 5.

Residents beat travel ban by walking to A.C.

By ANJALEE KHEMLANI and LYNDIA COHEN

Staff Writers

Frustrated by the continued ban on travel into the barrier islands, and running low on cash and supplies, some Atlantic City residents walked miles to get into the city via the Black Horse Pike on Thursday morning.

Gov. Chris Christie lifted the ban Thursday into other Atlantic County barrier islands, but the ban remained in Atlantic City and Ventnor.

"It was all about persistence," said Daniel King. "Our motivation was to get

See Walking, A11

Index

ATS TodayB6
Bridge, HoroscopeC9
BusinessA10
ClassifiedC6-10

ComicsB4
CrosswordB5
LifeB1-6
ObituariesC2

OpinionA12-13
Region, New JerseyC1-5
SportsD1-6
TV/PuzzlesB5

Sunny

High: 54
Low: 37

At Atlantic City International Airport. Forecast, A2

7 42999 00002 8

SAVOR BORGATA

RESTAURANT WEEK NOV 4-9

Wolfgang Puck American Grille
Bobby Flay Steak • Fornelletto • Izakaya
Old Homestead • SeaBlue

PRIX-FIXE MENU FROM $39*

For more information and reservations, visit theborgata.com or call 609.317.1000

*Bobby Flay Steak and Old Homestead prix-fixe from $49. Subject to availability. Available during restaurant dining hours. Menu items subject to change.