Late Laughs

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Today [Oct. 24], [Kamala] Harris got a big thumbs up from 82 American Nobel Prize winners, endorsing Harris writing: "This is the most consequential presidential election in a long time, perhaps ever, for the future of science." So, no big deal, but the smartest people on Earth fear the end of science. I for one would miss everything science has given us from germ theory, to the light bulb, to the Smucker's Uncrustables.

Kamala Harris has been racking up major endorsements. But this weekend [Oct. 26-27], she didn't get a big one, because the Washington Post announced that it will not endorse a presidential candidate in the upcoming election. ... Here's what WaPo's opinion editor said of the decision: "The Post was no longer going to tell people how to vote, a posture that would reflect the paper's independent bona fides." OK. Counterpoint, you're the opinion editor! Your whole job is to have an opinion about important stuff like this! That would be like a movie critic writing, "I give 'Megalopolis' thumbs. To say how many or which direction they're pointing would ruin my independent bona fides. Adam Driver gives a performance."

The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon

Election Day [Nov. 5] is just a week away, and a new report found that Americans are changing their vacation plans due to election anxiety. People are waiting until after the election so they know whether to buy a round trip or a one-way.

Jimmy Kimmel Live!

There's a new character in the MAGAverse, one who has inexplicably embraced Donald Trump, and his name is Dr Phil. Dr Phil wants you to know that you shouldn't listen to celebrities when it comes to politics because celebrities don't know about that stuff. But do listen to him — a celebrity — because he is not a celebrity. ... He does realize he's endorsing Donald Trump right from ... "The Celebrity Apprentice." Oprah's Frankenstein monster has finally turned on us.

Late Night With Seth Meyers

Former President [Donald] Trump held a rally yesterday [Oct. 27] at Madison Square Garden in front of a crowd of 20,000 people. And it was the most vitriolic, rage-filled group of white people in that building since the last [New York] Rangers game.

Vice President Kamala Harris's campaign launched a new virtual world this week [Oct. 27-Nov. 2] in the video game Fortnite called Freedom Town, USA. Not to be outdone, Elon Musk built a truck in Minecraft. [Shows picture of the Cybertruck]

Former California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger yesterday [Oct. 30] endorsed Vice President Kamala Harris. Or he endorsed a carnival in Paris. It's hard to say.

New York Mayor Eric Adams spoke today [Oct. 31] at the NYPD recruit graduation ceremony. It's wild to think that someday one of those fresh, young faces could be the one who finally takes Adams into custody.

Giving thanks to 'Changemakers': Bastianich travels America to talk sustainable eating

By Dana Simpson
TV Media

Lidia Bastianich and Sean Sherman in "Lidia Celebrates America"

Lidia Bastianich loves food. But in truth, the Istrian-born chef's interest in food is so strong because of her love of people.

With more than 60 years under her belt in the service industry and a still-growing cooking education brand that includes a series of popular cookbooks and TV specials, Bastianich is hitting the road one more time to experience some of the best food in America. This time, however, Bastianich has sustainability on the brain as she interviews chefs and entrepreneurs from across the country to find out what drives them to create and share the magic of good food.

A part of the three-time Emmy-winning series "Lidia Celebrates America," chef Lidia Bastianich pays homage to her chosen home country in the docuseries' newest installment, subtitled "Changemakers." Releasing on PBS just in time for the American Thanksgiving holiday, the hour-long special is the public television icon's way of saying "thank you" to the America she knows and loves.

"Lidia Celebrates America: Changemakers" premieres Tuesday, Nov. 26, on PBS. Check local listings for times.

Having opened her first restaurant — Buonavia in Queens, N.Y. — with her then-husband Felice in 1971, there is no denying that Bastianich's knowledge in the kitchen is extensive. But unlike many other celebrity chefs whose public personas come off as aloof, pretentious or downright nasty, Bastianich's love for people is evident — a fact of which I am reminded with each encounter.

This time, my discussion with Bastianich took place over video conference, where she joined from the sunny, white study of her Long Island home. After a brief introduction, she tells me how thankful she is to live in the United States and how, at every step in her journey, she continues to meet wonderful people doing what they can to make a difference.

"My message is to thank America," says Bastianich, "because I am grateful."

"America is always great," she later continues, adding, "There are such great people out there … respecting each other, helping each other. [With 'Changemakers',] I want to bring [viewers] that beauty that exists in reality in America."

In the hour-long "Changemakers" special, Bastianich visits towns and cities in Minnesota, California and Virginia to learn more about what drives other food enthusiasts who are at the forefront of beneficial change.

"Lidia [Bastianich] travels … to visit those who work hard to change the availability of healthy food in their communities and to alter the way we perceive food in America," reads the PBS news release for the special.

She begins in Minneapolis, meeting with James Beard Award-winning chef and restaurateur Sean Sherman to discuss foods, herbs, flavors and culinary traditions that are important to Indigenous cuisine.

Stopping first at the Indigenous Food Lab located in the Global Midtown Market, Bastianich enjoys a lunch of chili topped with bison birria and a side salad dressed in a juneberry vinaigrette. Later, she visits Sherman at his upscale restaurant, Owamni (a Dakota word for "turbulent water"), to indulge in mushroom tacos, hominy and bison stew, a tepary bean dip and more.

Next on Bastianich's Minneapolis checklist is the Great Minnsect Show at the University of Minnesota, where she meets cricket-focused power couple Claire and Chad Simons, owners and operators of 3 Cricketeers, a company dedicated to producing, packaging, marketing and selling crickets. Packed with protein in every crunch, crickets are a sustainable source of nutrients and make the perfect addition to salads and pesto.

"The whole idea of [eating] crickets and insects [is ancient]," Bastianich said over the video call. "I've traveled to Mexico City, and at the big market, I ate ant eggs, I ate chocolate-covered ants. … In Thailand, they have bugs that [are a] delicacy."

With insects consumed by more than two billion people globally, Bastianich reflected aloud that perhaps "cultures way before us" — before "the colonial way of eating" — were more in tune with nature and more adept at balancing meals based on local diets. This is something Appalachian-based chef Kari Rushing also spoke to in "Changemakers."

The owner and head chef of Vault & Cellar in Middletown, Va., Rushing takes a few minutes in the special to prepare what she calls "rabbit food" for Bastianich. Dedicated to reframing the historical opinion of Appalachian cooking, Rushing makes delicious meals from ingredients that are readily available, living off the land and being "resourceful."

In California, Bastianich visits Patricia Miller of Centre Plate LLC in Stockton and the kind-hearted volunteers of Inglewood's Social Justice Learning Institute.

The co-founder of the Black Urban Farmers Association of Stockton, Miller has taken on the task of farming to feed locals in need, many of whom work for organizations that export food away across America. Meanwhile, "SJLI brings produce to their distribution center, giving away up to 15,000 pounds of produce to community food banks, churches, non-profits and individuals" (per PBS).

For Bastianich, the message is clear: we must pay close attention and be grateful to the world around us.

"There's so many things that we neglect," the TV personality said as we prepared to say goodbye. "So, [in 'Changemakers',] I go for things that matter to me, the things that I see in America and I want to highlight."

Don't miss your chance to give thanks to the nature and cuisine of the United States when "Lidia Celebrates America: Changemakers" premieres Tuesday, Nov. 26, on PBS.

London calling: One agent makes a daring return home in 'The Agency'

By Sarah Passingham
TV Media

India Fowler and Michael Fassbender in "The Agency"

We all get the call to return home from time to time, whether it's a literal phone call or the need to return to some old stomping ground. A covert CIA agent ordered to get back to London Station faces an incredibly high-stakes homecoming in the premiere of the new spy thriller series "The Agency," streaming Friday, Nov. 29, on Paramount+ with Showtime.

Academy Award nominee Michael Fassbender ("Kneecap," 2024) stars as Martian, a CIA agent pulled out of his undercover mission to return to the agency's London office to find a missing agent. After disappearing from his former life without a trace so long ago, Martian is reunited with his old flame, Sami Zahir (Jodie Turner-Smith, "Bad Monkey"), a professor of social anthropology who may or may not also be "in the game" — as they say in the international intrigue business.

Big boss station agent Bosko, portrayed by Richard Gere ("Pretty Woman," 1990), and Henry, the director of operations played by Jeffrey Wright ("American Fiction," 2023), try to keep Martian in line and on task as his mission spills out into a twisted game of espionage. A mentor figure to Martian, Henry does his best to relate to his agent, but it's clear he is playing both sides in order to get Martian to do the agency's dirty work.

Part of a team that handles long-term undercover missions for the CIA, Martian is trained to do what is necessary for the job. But what happens when an agent begins questioning his organization? In a tense scene featured in the official trailer for the series, Martian sits opposite Dr. Blake (Harriet Sansom Harris, "Clipped") in an intimidatingly slate grey interrogation room and tells her exactly how it is.

"Lie to everyone. Pretend to be someone you're not. Risk your life on a daily basis. No glamour, no exploding watch. I believe there's one type of agent, the insane," Martian monologues at the doctor, before concluding, "You're not trying to help me, doctor. You're worried I may have somehow become sane."

Sanity and independent thought are liabilities to an agency like the CIA, which relies on its agents to do exactly what they are asked — often at the expense of personal safety and comfort. Having sunk years of his career into the agency, Martian's latest assignment forces him to face himself both as a man and an agent.

Also starring in "The Agency" are Katherine Waterston ("Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them," 2016) as Naomi; John Magaro ("Past Lives," 2023) as Owen; Alex Reznik ("Babylon," 2022) as Coyote; Andrew Brooke ("After Life") as Grandpa; India Fowler ("The Nevers") as Poppy; Saura Lightfoot-Leon ("Masters of the Air") as Danny; and Reza Brojerdi ("Boy Kills World," 2023) as Reza.

Hugh Bonneville ("W1A") guest stars in the upcoming series as James Richardson, a British agent who has a history with Martian. Recurring cast of "The Agency" also includes Adam Nagaitis ("The Terror") as Grandma; Ambreen Razia ("The Curse") as Blair; Bilal Hasna ("3 Body Problem") as Simon; David Harewood ("Supergirl") as Dalaga; Kurt Egyiawan ("House of the Dragon") as Osman; Ray BLK ("Champion") as Dozer; Tom Vaughan-Lawlor ("Frank of Ireland") as Ben; and Sabrina Wu ("Unforgotten") as Raine.

"The Agency" is based on a French espionage thriller, "Le Bureau des Légendes" — or "The Bureau" translated — which followed agents in France's external security service as they worked long-term undercover missions outside of France. The original series aired for five seasons between 2015 and 2020, garnering international attention, including some high-profile viewers.

"The one thing that I feel terrible about is I probably can't watch this, because I hate watching myself," Gere told Entertainment Weekly in an interview in October, admitting he and his wife "were hooked on" the original French thriller series.

Fassbender, too, shared that he connected with the show as a viewer, telling EW, "This doesn't really happen to me a lot, but I actually thought while I was watching, 'I wonder what I could do in that role?'"

The Irish actor applied a psychologist's lens to the role, saying, "There are sociopathic elements there where the same rules don't apply to [Martian] because he knows better and he is effective and gets the job done."

The American adaptation of the French series is produced by Hollywood heavyweight George Clooney ("Wolfs," 2024) and his frequent collaborator, producer and director Grant Heslov ("The Boys in the Boat," 2023). The screenplay writing team behind the 2014 blockbuster "Edge of Tomorrow," Jez and John-Henry Butterworth, penned the series.

The London-set series scored one of the most prolific London-born directors working today. The man behind the camera of 2005's "Pride & Prejudice," 2007's "Atonement," 2012's "Anna Karenina" and more recently 2021's "Cyrano," Joe Wright, set "The Agency" on its way, directing the series premiere and the following episode. Wright also executive produces the series.

Don't miss the premiere of "The Agency," when it debuts Friday, Nov. 29, on Paramount+ with Showtime.

Tough Canadians brave the cold in all-new docuseries

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Northern attitude: Follow five extraordinary outdoorsmen as they brave elemental extremes in the all-new Canadian Original series, "Hard North," arriving Friday, Nov. 29, on Prime Video.

Across eight wild episodes, this docuseries follows a group of young Canadians as they embark on a mission that many would never dare to attempt: living in the rugged and remote northern wilderness for all 365 days of the year, with only themselves to rely on. "These aspiring homesteaders face the harsh realities of living off the land and strive to not just survive — but to thrive in these wild places they now call home," the Prime Video press release describes.

This first season, viewers will be introduced to homesteaders Matty Clarke, from Lake St. John, Newfoundland; Margot Bossus, from Plata Trap-Line, Rouge Range, Yukon; Billy Rioux, from the Gaspé Peninsula of Quebec; and couple Emily Veilleux and Gilbert Chookomoolin, from Peawanuck, Ontario.

While each homesteader faces their own set of challenges, many of their struggles — such as finding housing, food and warmth — are fundamental to all hoping to brave the freezing temperatures and unforgiving winds of a Canadian winter. In the trailer alone, Clarke, Bossus and the other homesteaders can be seen brandishing chainsaws as they take down trees, building structures from natural resources and digging into inches-thick sheets of frozen water as they try their hand at ice fishing.

Whether it be hunting, preparing for the first big storm of the season or sweating it out through brief (but often boiling and unrelentingly hot) summers, the group agrees that the freedoms offered far outweigh the risks. As one participant shares in the series' trailer: "No matter what challenges come, it'll be worth it in the end."

Margot Bossus in "Hard North"

Another adds: "There is a lot more freedom here. You know, if you want to go build something, you can go build it."

Regardless, not everything goes according to plan while at the mercy of the elements. Structures collapse, weather can change on a dime and food can prove itself scarce when the seasons change. Despite this, the subjects of "Hard North" continue to share a singular goal: to live a sustainable life in the wilderness.

From showrunner Paul Kilback ("Life Below Zero: Canada") and executive producers Matthew Hornburg ("Canada's Drag Race: Canada vs the World"), Mark J.W. Bishop ("Race Against the Tide"), Tara Elwood ("Mysteries from Above") and Donna Luke ("Mr Dressup: The Magic of Make-Believe," 2023), "Hard North" premieres Friday, Nov. 29, on Prime Video.

Beloved Beatles: Producer Martin Scorsese ("Killers of the Flower Moon," 2023) invites viewers to experience the mayhem and the magic of Beatlemania in the feature-length documentary "Beatles '64," premiering Friday, Nov. 29, on Disney+.

"On Feb. 7, 1964, The Beatles arrived in New York City to unprecedented excitement and hysteria," explains the streamer. "From the instant they landed at Kennedy Airport, met by thousands of fans, Beatlemania swept New York and the entire country. Their thrilling debut performance on 'The Ed Sullivan Show' captivated more than 73 million viewers, the most watched television event of its time.

"'Beatles '64,'" they continue, "presents the spectacle, but also tells a more intimate behind-the-scenes story, capturing the camaraderie of John, Paul, George and Ringo as they experienced unimaginable fame."

From director David Tedeschi ("Personality Crisis: One Night Only," 2022), the film delves into this once-in-a-lifetime trip to America — the first in their career — in which the band encountered legions of enthusiastic young fans who helped make The Beatles one of the most influential, recognizable and beloved bands of all time.

Featuring never-before-seen footage originally filmed by documentarians Albert and David Maysles (both of "Grey Gardens," 1975), now beautifully restored in 4K by Park Road Post in New Zealand, "Beatles '64" shares the group's first appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" — Feb. 9, 1964 — alongside live performances from their very first concert on American soil at the Coliseum in Washington, D.C., only two days later. There, the group performed timeless hits such as "I Want to Hold Your Hand," "Twist and Shout" and "I Saw Her Standing There" to a ravenous crowd of 8,092 fans, cementing themselves as icons of the era.

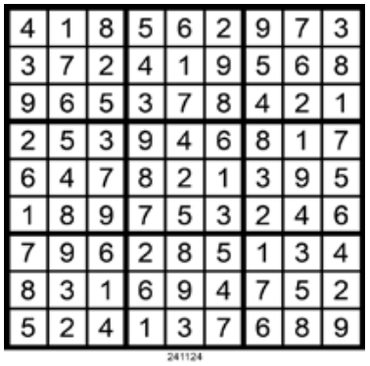

Additionally, the film promises interviews with the two surviving members of the band — Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr — who recount their time spent on stage alongside late members John Lennon and George Harrison, sharing details from the height of their career as the Fab Four.

Breathing new life into cultural moments past — ones that still inspire and influence musicians and music fans today — Tedeschi's documentary takes time to shine a spotlight not only on the band itself but also the dedicated fans "whose lives were transformed by The Beatles" (per Disney), offering a look at those who lined the streets of D.C. as four boys from Liverpool, England, made their way into the coliseum.

With McCartney, Starr and Sean Ono Lennon ("Isolation") producing alongside Scorsese, "Beatles '64" is available Friday, Nov. 29, on Disney+.

Colman Domingo stars in "The Madness"

Ian Harding, Lindsay Lohan, Katie Baker and Jon Rudnitsky star in "Our Little Secret"

"The Madness" - Season 1

Dive into the hectic world of politics and public personas when the new Netflix miniseries "The Madness" premieres Thursday, Nov. 28. Colman Domingo ("Fear the Walking Dead") stars as political consultant-turned-TV pundit Muncie Daniels, who finds himself caught up in the rat race and off track from the things that are really important in life. Taking a sabbatical to get himself back on track, Muncie isolates himself in the Poconos, hoping to write the next great American novel. But unlucky enough to soon become the only witness to the murder of a known white supremacist — and quickly being framed for the crime — Muncie's relaxing sabbatical becomes a desperate fight for his innocence. Forced to go on the run as he attempts to clear his name and unravel a deep global conspiracy, Muncie "reconnect[s] with his family, find[s] unlikely allies and fight[s] against disinformation in a post-truth age" along the way (per Netflix). From creator Stephen Belber ("What We Do Next," 2022), the series production team includes producers Chris Hatcher ("Shadowhunters") and Felicia Hilario ("All Rise"), alongside executive producers and co-showrunners Belber and VJ Boyd ("S.W.A.T."), as well as executive producers Clement Virgo ("Greenleaf"), Jenno Topping ("Hidden Figures," 2016), Kaitlin Dahill ("Daredevil") and Peter Chernin ("Ford v Ferrari," 2019). Marsha Stephanie Blake ("When They See Us"), Deon Cole ("Black-ish"), Thaddeus J. Mixson ("Reasonable Doubt"), John Ortiz ("American Fiction," 2023), Gabrielle Graham ("In the Shadow of the Moon," 2019) and Tamsin Topolski ("Slow Horses") also star.

"Our Little Secret" (2024)

Dysfunctional family holidays take on a new meaning in the new Christmas rom-com "Our Little Secret," premiering Wednesday, Nov. 27, on Netflix. After a less-than-amicable breakup, exes Avery (Lindsay Lohan, "Mean Girls," 2004) and Logan (Ian Harding, "Pretty Little Liars") have moved on with their lives and are happy to stay as far from each other as possible. But when they each discover that their new partners are siblings, the former couple are forced to grin and bear it to try to make it through the holidays while staying under the same roof. Deciding to keep their past secret to avoid making the situation any more awkward than it is, Avery and Logan soon find old feelings and resentments clashing with new sparks as they spend time together again. From director Stephen Herek ("Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure," 1989) and first-time screenwriter Hailey DeDominicis, "Our Little Secret" also stars Kristin Chenoweth ("Schmigadoon!"), Tim Meadows ("Mean Girls," 2004), Jon Rudnitsky ("I Love You Forever," 2024), Henry Czerny ("Mission: Impossible," 1996), Judy Reyes ("Scrubs"), Chris Parnell ("Archer"), Dan Bucatinsky ("Scandal"), Katie Baker ("The Mosquito Coast"), Jake Brennan ("Palmer," 2021) and Brian Unger ("Yellowstone").

"Is It Cake? Holiday"

With ever-advancing techniques and skilled artists dedicated to their craft, Netflix is baffling viewers once again when the fun confectionary competition series "Is It Cake?" returns to the streamer with a special limited holiday installment on Thursday, Nov. 28. Hosted once again by "Saturday Night Live" mainstay Mikey Day, the series, which is part game show and part baking show, is ready to put more celebrity judges' sleuthing skills to the test. Deception is the name of the game as talented, hyper-realistic cake makers put their sweet creations next to everyday objects that are identical in almost every way — except, of course, for the fact that one is edible and one is not. Across four new episodes, a lineup of series all-stars — including Jonny Manganello, April Julian and winner Andrew Fuller from Season 1; Miko Kaw Hok Uy, Danya Smith and winner Elizabeth Rowe from Season 2; and Grace Pak, Jujhar Mann and winner Henderson Gonzalez from Season 3 — return to the kitchen, hoping to fool the judges and take home the grand prize. As they create sneaky seasonal and sweet look-alikes of everything from ice skates and wreaths to nutcrackers and more, the celebrity guest judges are tasked with the tough task of determining which item is real and which is the cake imposter. Guest judges for "Is It Cake? Holiday" include Rachel Bloom ("Crazy Ex-Girlfriend"), Wayne Brady ("Whose Line Is It Anyway?"), Sebastian Maniscalco ("Bookie"), Hannah Berner ("Hannah Berner: We Ride At Dawn," 2024), Tiffany Haddish ("The Afterparty"), Devon Walker ("Saturday Night Live"), James Austin Johnson ("Saturday Night Live"), Chris Witaske ("The Bear"), Sasheer Zamata ("Agatha All Along"), Terry Crews ("Brooklyn Nine-Nine"), Punkie Johnson ("Saturday Night Live") and Randall Park ("Fresh Off the Boat").

"The World According To Kaleb: On Tour"

Becoming an international darling as the ever-exasperated farm hand-turned-farm manager in the Prime Video docu-reality series "Clarkson's Farm," Kaleb Cooper is taking his fan-favorite personality to the stage. A special performance from his national tour, "The World According to Kaleb: On Tour," sees Cooper on stage for his final performance at the Everyman Theatre in Cheltenham, U.K., when it premieres Friday, Nov. 29, on Prime Video. Running for 37 performances across the United Kingdom, the tour showcases Cooper as he shares his "unique observations and strong views on anything from sheep, to famous people, to why farming is the best job in the world, whilst also highlighting some of the many challenges that British farmers face today" (per Prime Video). Produced by Expectation, "The World According to Caleb: On Tour" is executive produced by Ben Wicks ("Have I Got News for You") and Anthony Caveney ("Stand Up for the Week"). Abigail Dankwa ("Pointless") directs.

"Get Millie Black"

Get back on the case with the new Channel 4 and HBO co-production, "Get Millie Black," available to stream via the Max Prime Video Channel when it premieres Monday, Nov. 25. After Jamaican-born detective Millie-Jean Black (Tamara Lawrance, "No Offence") is kicked out of Scotland Yard, she returns to Kingston to rebuild her life. Working with the local police back on the island, Millie and her new partner, Curtis (Gershwyn Eustache Jr., "Britannia"), take on some tough missing persons cases. Along the way, Millie attempts "to solve a case that will blow her world apart and prove almost as tough to crack as Millie Black" (per HBO). Also starring Joe Dempsie ("Game of Thrones") and newcomer Chyna McQueen, the series is created and written by Marlon James ("Anthony") and directed by Tanya Hamilton ("Winning Time: The Rise of the Lakers Dynasty") and Annetta Laufer ("My Almost Famous Family").

"It's in the Game: Madden NFL" – Season 1

Whether you were a kid in 1993, 2003 or 2023, you've heard of "Madden NFL." Explore the history of the seminal, generation-jumping football video game during "It's in the Game: Madden NFL," a four-part docuseries premiering on Prime Video this Tuesday, Nov. 26. First released in 1988 – at the time, called John Madden Football – this fan-favorite game reflects the current state of the league with each annual release, using real players and teams from the NFL to offer a right-on-the-field experience. According to a press release from Amazon Studios, "'It's in the Game: Madden NFL' reveals the never-been-told story of Madden NFL, from its archaic 8-bit origins to its success as an annual must have—against all odds. For the first time ever, EA SPORTS is opening their vault of rare and never-been-seen footage, while also allowing cameras to follow along as the team finishes the next generation of the game."

"Thursday Night Football" – Black Friday Football Special

Some hear "Thanksgiving" and think turkey … others think football. Airing as a part of "Thursday Night Football's" third season of exclusive game coverage, 2024's Black Friday Football Special airs live this Friday, Nov. 29, on Prime Video. Now in its second year, this post-Thanksgiving match up will see the Super Bowl Champion Kansas City Chiefs hosting the Las Vegas Raiders as they take part in an AFC West showdown at Arrowhead Stadium in Kansas City. Last year, during the first-ever Black Friday game, fans came home from their holiday shopping to watch as the Miami Dolphins conquered the Jets 34-13, offering (for some) an even bigger reason to celebrate. While this year's winners are up in the air, good deals and great gameplay are both in the forecast.

'Chef's Table' returns for a mouth-watering seventh season

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Continuing its mission to showcase the world's most extraordinary chefs — and their extraordinary dishes — "Chef's Table" returns to Netflix with four new episodes this Wednesday, Nov. 27.

"Chef's Table" aims to meet with those crafting today's culinary landscape, and this season's diverse group of chefs is no exception. "Each bringing their unique perspective and creativity to the table," says Netflix, the subjects of Season 7 put global flavors on the menu as they welcome viewers to take a trip around the culinary world — without ever leaving the comfort of their own home.

In Philadelphia, Nok Suntaranon brings the bold flavors of Thai cuisine to life. Nok hopes to "[push] the boundaries of traditional Southern Thai cuisine," according to Netflix, utilizing aromatic spices, fresh seafood and more. At 50 years old, Nok opened one of the country's most highly regarded Thai restaurants, Kalaya, in South Philadelphia, earning herself immense acclaim and recognition as one of Esquire's and Food & Wine's Best New Restaurants.

Next, viewers are introduced to chef Kwame Onwuachi, who celebrates his Afro-Caribbean heritage with his vibrant restaurant, Tatiana By Kwame Onwuachi.

Chef Kwame Onwuachi in "Chef's Table"

"Since its opening," the streamer says, "the restaurant has been named 'the No. 1 Restaurant in New York City' by The New York Times two years running," turning hungry eyes in his direction. As the author of the critically acclaimed "My America" and "Notes from a Young Black Chef," Kwame's story will soon be spread far and wide, adapted into a feature film by A24.

Known as the "Chef of the Sea," Spanish visionary Angel Leon acts as the star of Season 7's third episode. A talented sailor, Angel's "passion for fishing and knowledge of nature, seaweed, salts and beyond informs his experimental approach to fine dining" (per Netflix). With three Michelin stars to his name, Angel remains dedicated to exploring the oddities found in the ocean, searching endlessly for new ingredients and species to spice up his dishes as he promotes sustainability.

Finally, in Mexico City, we meet dynamic couple Norma Listman and Saqib Keval, a duo dedicated to fusing Mexican and South Asian flavors in order to create a unique culinary experience. As the owners and co-chefs of two restaurants — Masala y Maiz and Mari Gold — the pair "[advocates] for food as a tool for exploring justice, decolonization and the establishment of community-based businesses" (Netflix), utilizing their self-made labor justice foundation and chef residency program.

From creator David Gelb ("Jiro Dreams of Sushi," 2011), Season 7 of "Chef's Table" arrives Wednesday, Nov. 27, on Netflix.

Luis Gerardo Hernandez Mendez in "Skincare"

Skincare
Hope Goldman (Banks) is a successful aesthetician running a skincare clinic in Los Angeles with her PR agent, Marine (Rodriguez). Following a segment on a talk show to promote the upcoming launch of her skincare line, Hope learns that a rival clinic will be opening up directly across from her, owned by Angel Vergara (Mendez). Soon after, Hope begins receiving threatening messages and has both her work and personal life targeted by a saboteur determined to sink her at any cost.
Director: Austin Peters. Stars: Elizabeth Banks, Lewis Pullman, Michaela Jae Rodriguez, Luis Gerardo Mendez, Nathan Fillion. 2024. 96 min. Thriller.

Attachment
Maja (Park) is a struggling actress living in Copenhagen when she encounters Jewish Londoner Leah (Kendrick), who is studying abroad. The two develop a romantic relationship, but Leah soon suffers a strange seizure and is injured. Maja returns her to her mother, Chana (Grabol), and helps her to recuperate. While staying with them, Maja senses a dark presence in the house surrounding Leah and her mother. As Maja delves into Jewish tradition and culture, it dawns on her that there's something otherworldly and sinister preventing Leah from recovering.
Director: Gabriel Bier Gislason. Stars: Josephine Park, Ellie Kendrick, Sofie Grabol, David Dencik. 2022. 105 min. Romantic Horror.

Night of the Missing
On Christmas Eve in a small suburban town, a distraught woman (Awbrey) arrives at a police station. The sheriff (Thomas), who uses her position to cover up the fact that she is a serial killer, prepares herself to take the woman's statement. Instead, she is regaled with four stories of the strange and horrific circumstances surrounding missing persons.
Directors: Samuel Gonzalez Jr., Matthew Hersh. Stars: Meredith Thomas, Jill Awbrey, Philip Estrin. 2023. 73 min. Horror.

Michael Chiklis in "Accused"

Dancing With the Stars

22 8:00 PM

After weeks of competition, it all comes down to this three-hour finale. The remaining dancers will need to pull out all the stops to wow judges Derek Hough, Carrie Ann Inaba and Bruno Tonioli enough to walk away with the Mirrorball Trophy.

Night Court

5 12 8:30 PM

Despite her attempts to bring Jake (Ryan Hansen) and Dan (John Larroquette) closer, Abby (Melissa Rauch) starts feeling like a third wheel in the whole ordeal. Then, Gurgs (Lacretta) gets irritated over Julianna (Wendie Malick) smoking in the courthouse.

Lidia Celebrates America

33 57 9:00 PM

In this season premiere, chef Lidia Bastianich explores how culinary traditions have been preserved by immigrants as they found a new home in America and how those traditions have laid the groundwork for future generations of Americans.

Accused

44 9:00 PM

Each episode of this crime anthology series follows a new story of crime and punishment from the perspective of the accused. Through a series of flashbacks, viewers learn everything they need to know about the case, those involved and the defendant.

"Nutcrackers" (2024)

Settle in for a heartwarming dramatic comedy when "Nutcrackers" makes its Hulu debut Friday, Nov. 29. Inspired by true events, the film follows big city real estate developer Michael (Ben Stiller, "Zoolander," 2001), who is more than happy to live his productive, hyper-independent life. But, when Michael's sister and her husband are killed in a terrible accident, Michael is the only person available to take in their four boys — played by real-life siblings Homer, Ulysses, Atlas and Arlo Janson, on whose lives the film is based. As Michael and the boys adjust to this new way of life, they learn that family can grow in the unlikeliest of circumstances. From director David Gordon Green ("The Righteous Gemstones"), "Nutcrackers" features writing by Leland Douglas ("The Wrong Woman," 2013) and Nate Meyer ("Pretty in the Face," 2007). Linda Cardellini ("Dead to Me"), Edi Patterson ("The Righteous Gemstones"), Tim Heidecker ("Killing It") and Toby Huss ("Halt and Catch Fire") also star.

"Vow of Silence: The Assassination of Annie Mae"

Explore the intricacies of a chilling true crime case when the limited docuseries "Vow of Silence: The Assassination of Annie Mae" premieres Tuesday, Nov. 26, on Hulu. Annie Mae Aquash — a Mi'kmaq woman from Nova Scotia, Canada — had a full life as "a mother of two daughters, a teacher and a revolutionary who fought for Indigenous rights in the 1970s" (per Hulu). After Aquash was murdered in December 1975, her case remained unsolved for 30 years. Jumping back and forth between the volatile political landscape of the 1970s and the present day, the series follows along as Aquash's daughter spearheads the investigation into her mother's case, hoping to uncover more secrets from the past. "A fascinating story of murder, intrigue, love and betrayal," says Hulu, the series "contextualizes Annie Mae's story within the larger story of the struggle of Native and First Nations women in their own communities that continues even today." Directed by Yvonne Russo ("The Rescuers," 2011), "Vow of Silence" is executive produced by Russo, Ezra Edelman ("Real Sports with Bryant Gumbel"), Amy Kaufman ("Beasts of No Nation," 2015), Alec Macrae ("Fishing Without Nets," 2014), Riva Marker ("The Guilty," 2021), Caroline Waterlow ("O.J.: Made in America," 2016) and Hank White ("8:37 Rebirth," 2021).

"The Polar Express" (2004)

Hop aboard for the ride of a lifetime during 2004's "The Polar Express," coming to Hulu this Wednesday, Nov. 27. Now celebrating its 20th anniversary, this animated Christmas classic from director Robert Zemeckis ("Forest Gump," 1994) — and based on the book by Chris Van Allsburg — follows a young boy struggling to believe in Santa Claus. As he contemplates the meaning of the season on a dark Christmas Eve, a magical train stops in front of his house and invites him onboard for a trip to the North Pole. After he reluctantly agrees, the boy finds himself making friends and facing unimaginable circumstances, rediscovering the spirit of Christmas with each and every stop. Tom Hanks ("Big," 1988), Chris Coppola ("Too Old to Die Young"), Michael Jeter ("Evening Shade"), Leslie Zemeckis ("Here," 2024), Eddie Deezen ("Greace," 1978), Nona Gaye ("Crash," 2004) and Peter Scolari ("Newhart") voice star.

"Fred Claus" (2007)

From director David Dobkin ("The Judge," 2014), the dark Christmas comedy, "Fred Claus" (2007), arrives on Hulu this Wednesday, Nov. 27, proving that even the most magical families have their problems. After leaving home and moving to Chicago to get away from his brother Nick (Paul Giamatti, "Cinderella Man," 2005) – who just so happens to be Santa Claus – Fred (Vince Vaughn, "Wedding Crashers," 2005) finds himself stuck and in need of cash. Nick agrees to lend him some … but only if he moves back to their home in the North Pole, where he'll have to help Santa and his elves prepare for Christmas.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: My husband and I were discussing the use of off-screen characters in shows, and we realized they've been used more than we thought. Mr. Bell in "The Drew Carey Show," Howard's mom in "The Big Bang Theory" and Charlie from "Charlie's Angels" were just a few we came up with. What is the oldest example of the unseen character you can find?

A: Pinning down the first heard-but-not-seen character is pretty tricky. There's a tradition of this on the stage, so it presumably reaches back to the pre-television days, but we're talking about TV here.

Unfortunately, even tracing the earliest TV examples requires a bit of hair-splitting: when we say "unseen," are we talking about just the face or any part of the body? Because one of the few recurring characters on the 1956-1960 detective show "Richard Diamond, Private Detective," aside from Diamond (David Janssen, "The Fugitive") himself, was just a pair of legs and a voice: his secretary, Sam. For two of the show's four seasons, the legs and voice were provided by comedy legend Mary Tyler Moore, just a couple of years before her star-making turn in "The Dick Van Dyke Show."

If we want to be strict about visibility, then the earliest example I could find was the PA announcer for "M*A*S*H." The voice, which was played by multiple people of the course of the series, was heard in nearly every episode of that classic dramedy, starting with its very first episode in 1972.

Indeed, the '70s were a golden age for this type of character, including the aforementioned Charlie Townsend (John Forsythe, "Dynasty") of "Charlie's Angels," as well as Carlton the Doorman (Lorenzo Music, "Garfield and Friends") in the 1974 sitcom "Rhoda," a spinoff of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Q: Is Madchen Amick still working? I assumed she'd be the breakout star of "Twin Peaks" but she wasn't.

A: "Twin Peaks" has come to embody the idea of a cult show. So while it didn't necessarily lead to anything bigger (it was pretty darn big at the time, to be fair), her role in the landmark weirdo-drama has continued to pay off for Madchen Amick.

Amick's role as Shelly Johnson was central to the show's complex, interwoven plot, so she's continued to benefit from its sustained fan attention. She's appeared at conventions, been interviewed for numerous documentaries, and then, of course, she reprised her role in the 2017 revival of the show on Showtime.

She's also gotten roles on shows that are clearly "Twin Peaks"-inspired, such as her most recent role, in CW's teen drama "Riverdale." She played Alice Cooper, the former newspaper editor and gang member, as well as the mother of the iconic Betty Cooper. And though "Riverdale" was officially based on the old "Archie" comics, the show's creators have said it owes just as much to "Twin Peaks" in terms of theme and tone.

That series just ended last year, so yes, to finally answer your question, Amick is still working.

She took the opportunity to direct a few episodes of "Riverdale," and that gives a hint to the direction her career is taking.

"I'm really gonna dedicate myself to my behind-the-scenes career that I'm growing and really excited about and inspired by," she told Decider.com ahead of the "Riverdale" series finale. She listed a number of projects, including a docuseries, a sitcom and a feature film, all of which are in various stages of development.

"It's [been] 36 years in the business in front of the camera, and I'm just excited to get behind it."
