The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

I love everything about the Super Bowl: the commercials, the halftime show, the beers, the seven-layer dip, the chips to dip in the dip, the wings and the growing pile of wing bones that make me feel like an ancient king.

Another treasured American institution is having to take drastic measures because, due to shortages, Waffle House is adding a 50-cent-per-egg surcharge. Well, if there's one thing I know about Waffle House customers is that they'll handle the news with grace and aplomb.

Yesterday [Feb. 5] we found out a second bird flu strain was detected in U.S. dairy cattle. Well, this can only mean one thing: the birds are having sex with the cows. Please, please, no one tell the bees. They're going to feel so betrayed.

Right now, the egg shortage is so severe that at the Waffle House, they have a 50-cent surcharge per egg. Now, I never thought I'd live in a time where there'd be surge pricing on eggs. This is going to be a tough Easter, kids. Get ready to start hunting Swedish meatballs.

It's the day after Groundhog Day today [Feb. 3]. Apparently, we're in for a long winter. That is according to Punxsutawney Phil, who emerged from his hole, and when I say emerged, I mean, forcibly dragged out of a box, for reasons that are clear to no one..

'Born Again' vigilantism: Daredevil returns to political change on Disney+

By Dana Simpson
TV Media

Vincent D'Onofrio in "Daredevil: Born Again"

The world needs heroes. Whether that means saving kittens from a burning building or working a double shift to put food on the table for your family, heroism looks different to everyone. But when it comes to superheroes — a genre beloved by people of all ages the world over — few do double duty better than Daredevil.

First introduced to the Marvel Universe by Stan Lee in April 1964, the blind, red-clad vigilante has been fighting crime day and night in books, in film and on television ever since. Now, six and a half years after the Netflix series "Daredevil" ended, the Disney-owned Marvel Cinematic Universe launches a brand-new installment. "Daredevil: Born Again" premieres Tuesday, March 4, on Disney+.

Reappearing at a time when many need him the most, Daredevil, a.k.a. Matt Murdock (Charlie Cox, "The Theory of Everything," 2014), is back in action after "a line was crossed," leaving him little choice but to take a necessary hiatus from vigilante crime fighting. While those familiar with Netflix's "Daredevil" may remember the incident alluded to in the "Born Again" trailer, let's just say — for the sake of providing some context while avoiding gratuitous spoilers — that the masked man of the people may have let his impulse get the better of him, leading to unnecessary brutality and, quite possibly, the death of an innocent or two.

While the reboot's "Born Again" subtitle does heavily allude to Murdock's Christian faith and the return of his crime-fighting alter ego, it is also a title that holds some historical significance for fans of Frank Miller and David Mazzucchelli's "Daredevil" comic book run. With the phrase "Born Again" often uniquely attributed to the 1986 story arc that spanned "Daredevil" comic issues 227 to 231 — and which would later come to include No. 226, 232 and 233 in order to tie up loose ends — its plot follows Daredevil's path back to vigilantism after his true identity is revealed to his archnemesis, Kingpin, leading to the hero's downfall and eventual humbling destruction.

While it is unclear if "Daredevil: Born Again" will stick to the main themes of the 1986 comic book arc — which include, among other things, heavy Catholic imagery and iconography — it does seem unlikely that all plot details will be rehashed in full, as Season 3 of Netflix's "Daredevil" already covered much of that content in the lead-up to the character's current period of "rebirth." Instead, "Daredevil: Born Again" looks poised to pick up shortly after the events of Netflix's final season, with Fisk in power and Murdoch having hung up the red suit for good; only donning suits of the professional variety for his day job as a lawyer.

One thing that is clear from the "Born Again" trailer regardless of the viewer's level of context, however, is that Murdock is inextricably linked to Wilson Fisk, a.k.a. Kingpin (Vincent D'Onofrio, "Full Metal Jacket," 1987), who is now the mayor of New York City, for better or for worse. While he insists he is "serving his city," Fisk is known for strong-arming his way into deals, pressuring his opponents into submission and eliminating his problems through less-than-legal means. Now that Kingpin is more powerful than ever, Murdock is likely to have plenty of work on his plate — either at his day job as a criminal attorney or as his highly tuned, nocturnal counterpart. Either way, "Daredevil: Born Again" is slated to feature oodles of violence and rumored to bring about a few highly anticipated "fixes" to the 2015-18 Netflix series.

"The earlier show, at its best, was fantastic," showrunner Dario Scardapane ("The Punisher") told SFX Magazine. "At its worst, it was two characters in a room talking about what a hero is."

As for how "Born Again" compares to Netflix's series on a stylistic level, Scardapane says the new series is "more New York crime story" than "noir."

"It has elements of 'The Sopranos' and 'King Of New York' [1990]. ... They were very dark, cinematically, not necessarily story-wise, although there were some dark elements."

He then added, "We're much darker."

When actively comparing "Born Again" to other TV/streaming superhero content, however, Scardapane acknowledges that DC's 2024 Batman spinoff "The Penguin," starring Colin Farrell ("The Banshees of Inisherin," 2022), is the series' best competition out there to date. Lauded for its gritty depiction of big-city crime, its impressive character development and its nuanced, sensitive portrayal of a character widely accepted as evil, "The Penguin" unknowingly helped to set the stage for "Daredevil: Born Again."

"It's really strange," Scardapane told SFX. "I would say in many ways 'The Penguin' is our direct competition. However, we're even more grounded, even less stylized, even more rooted in the here and now. I loved 'Penguin,' [but] we're a little faster, meaner [and] cleaner in our storytelling."

"Daredevil: Born Again" co-stars Wilson Bethel ("Hart of Dixie"), Jon Bernthal ("The Bear"), Elden Henson ("Idle Hands," 1999), Deborah Ann Woll ("True Blood") and Genneya Walton ("Candy Cane Lane," 2023).

Don't miss a minute of the action when "Daredevil: Born Again" premieres Tuesday, March 4, on Disney+.

British newsroom dramedy 'Douglas Is Cancelled' gets North American premiere

By Dana Simpson
TV Media

Hugh Bonneville and Karen Gillan star in "Douglas is Cancelled"

In this age of social media dominance, at least a minutiae of media literacy is encouraged among the masses. Whereas '90s and '00s parents once cautioned their children to "surf the net" safely, watching for catfishers, child predators and information-stealing bots, it is the elder generations who now often find themselves in hot water online. From teens with trendy TikTok accounts and Instagram feeds to social justice warriors with live streams and informational YouTube videos, cameras are everywhere and chances are that if you have said or done something foolish in public, it has already been committed to the digital record. Just ask Douglas Bellowes (Hugh Bonneville, "Downton Abbey") — he knows all about it.

"Douglas Is Cancelled," the hit British series that first aired last summer on iTV abroad, premieres Thursday, March 6, on BritBox.

Described by the Guardian as a show "you might hate ... for daring to exist," "Douglas Is Cancelled" chronicles the multi-level undoing of one of Britain's best-known and most respectfully sombre news readers, the titular Douglas Bellowes, after a crude joke he made at a wedding was captured on video and shared with the world. Potentially made worse by his younger, more aware co-host Madeline Crow (Karen Gillan, "Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 3," 2023), Douglas's social media snafu quickly escalates to the point of interference with his career, his family and his hard-earned reputation as a staunch man of the people.

"Douglas is a perfectly decent, pleasant man who's doing a good job and is well liked for what he does," Bonneville told iTV press in a statement ahead of the show's U.K. release. "Is he smug? I wouldn't say so. Unguardedly confident? Definitely. But just as the dinosaurs didn't know they were a dying breed, Douglas is blithely unaware that the next generation is smarter, more streetwise and capable of sheer ruthlessness when the chips are down."

One such member of the next generation is Madeline, who is described by her portrayer as "a very determined" woman "who set her sights on getting into this particular industry," noting that "she went through a few experiences along the way that shaped her, and she quickly realized that she needed to harden up a little bit."

During a press interview with iTV, Gillan says, "When we meet [Madeline] at the start of this drama, you just can't quite get a read on her. The idea is that you don't quite know what her motivations are, and you don't quite know whether you can trust her or not. That was really fun to play."

Those watching the series have also reacted to the clever duality of the Madeline character, commenting, as did Guardian writer Lucy Mangan, that, "Whether [Madeline] is a manipulative careerist, simply sick of the sexism that surrounds her, or motivated by a genuine grievance is the question that builds around her." Regardless of the answer, several reviews from the Guardian, to RadioTimes.com, to the common Redditor, hail Gillan as the shining light of the series.

That said, the series is chockablock with captivating performances from a handful of well-respected actors. Alex Kingston ("ER"), for example, co-stars as Douglas's wife, Sheila, a tabloid newspaper editor and fierce defender of those she loves; Ben Miles ("The Crown") as Douglas and Madeline's producer, Toby Patterson; Simon Russell Beale ("House of the Dragon") as Bently Cassock, whom iTV dubbed "the worst agent in the world"; and Nick Mohammed ("Ted Lasso") as Morgan, the news program's not-so-funny comedy writer.

The keen observer (and Whovian) may have also recognized a few of the names from "Douglas Is Cancelled." Yes, the series does, in fact, serve as somewhat of a reunion for Gillan and Kingston, who previously appeared together in "Doctor Who" alongside leading man Matt Smith ("Last Night in Soho," 2021). Bonneville, too, has appeared in "Doctor Who," his performance as Capt. Henry Avery coinciding with Gillan's in 2011's "The Curse of the Black Spot," and with both Gillan and Kingston in that season's later episode titled "A Good Man Goes to War."

Comprised of just four hour-long (with ad breaks) episodes, "Douglas Is Cancelled" is a short series, even by British standards, but that doesn't mean the content isn't riveting. Rather, its production team has recognized its assets and promotes the miniseries for its realism; even if the show isn't based on any one driving incident from reality.

"It's not based on any actual incident," series creator Steven Moffat ("Sherlock") told iTV, "however, the drama does exist in a world in which all that [cancel culture] has happened."

Don't miss the North American premiere of "Douglas Is Cancelled" when it drops Thursday, March 6, on BritBox.

Host Phil Keoghan puts a fork in Season 37 of 'The Amazing Race'

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Diverging paths: With over 20 Emmy nominations to its name — and an impressive 10 wins — "The Amazing Race" returns for its 37th season Wednesday, March 5, on CBS.

With Phil Keoghan ("Human Edge") returning as producer and host, this next season of the reality-adventure series sees 14 teams of adventure-loving globetrotters take on an epic journey as they race across cities, countries and continents for a shot at the $1 million prize. Along the way, the contestants must stop to take part in entertaining and educational experiences, trying everything from riding bullet trains in Japan to taking part in a traditional Bulgarian folk dance.

Dubbed the "season of surprises" by Keoghan himself, this season is said to feature the largest cast of players in the show's history — but it doesn't stop there. Throughout the season, these players will encounter game-changing twists and turns in every episode. While some classic challenges will make an appearance — such as Fast Forward and U-Turn — others will be brand-new to racers and dedicated fans alike, like the "Fork in the Road," for example. This new twist calls for the players to think on their feet as they are offered the opportunity to choose their own adventure, following one of multiple offered paths forward. While some choices may lead to advantages or involve shortcuts, others could have major consequences on a player's game — even leading to elimination for some.

While speaking with Gold Derby regarding the upcoming season, Keoghan shared: "I think we're getting more excited about it because we are continuing to be part of the mix of what's considered the best reality shows.

"It's almost like that's our measure of, 'Are we still hitting the mark? And are we still part of people's reality television-watching?'" he continues. "[So] it's something that we never get blasé about because we're striving to be there with the best shows and there are some good ones out there. And I think for us to still be in the mix is pretty awesome."

Featuring supersized, 90-minute episodes, this game-changing new season of "The Amazing Race" is set to premiere on CBS this Wednesday, March 5.

Phil Keoghan hosts "The Amazing Race"

Carpenter can: This Women's History Month, celebrate the legacy of Women's Rights Activist Liz Carpenter — a trailblazing journalist, political activist and adviser — during "Shaking It Up: The Life & Times of Liz Carpenter," available to stream on PBS.org the week of March 2 and airing on public television stations around the country throughout the month (see local listings).

Produced and directed by Peabody award-winning filmmaker Abby Ginzberg ("Agents of Change," 2016) and by Liz's very own daughter, first-time filmmaker Christy Carpenter, this hour-long documentary offers an up-close-and-personal look at Carpenter's life and career, spent as a breaker of glass ceilings both in the White House and out.

"Over her 89 years," reads the film's summary, "Liz Carpenter [1920-2010] was often front and center where history was unfolding, leaving her own indelible mark on some of the most vivid moments and movements that shaped the 20th century. Journalist, vice-presidential adviser, White House official, author, humorist, political activist and feminist leader — hers is the story of blazing professional trails while pushing forward an agenda for women's rights, political engagement and the environment that remains highly relevant today."

Throughout her career, Carpenter was involved with some of the most pivotal moments of the 21st century. As chief of staff and press secretary to the wife of President Lyndon B. Johnson — Lady Bird Johnson — Carpenter helped to execute the promotion of LBJ's Great Society, also using her voice to amplify the president's messaging surrounding the War on Poverty and with environmental programs. Later on, she co-founded the National Women's Political Caucus, co-chaired ERAmerica and led the battle for State ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — all triumphs discussed in "Shaking It Up."

According to the documentary's website, the feature will "[tell] Liz's story using archival film and still images, interviews from those who knew her, journalists who covered the history as it was made, and scholars who study this remarkable past." Additionally, it will also share candid interviews with the likes of feminist leader Gloria Steinem, journalists Dan Rather and Bill Moyers, presidential historian Douglas Brinkley and with Luci Baines Johnson and Lynda Johnson Robb, daughters of the late LBJ.

"[Our] goal was to show how one pioneering 'can-do' woman, gutsy, and blessed with boundless energy, an expansive heart and an unflappable nature, can leave a positive and indelible mark on her times," says co-director Christy Carpenter.

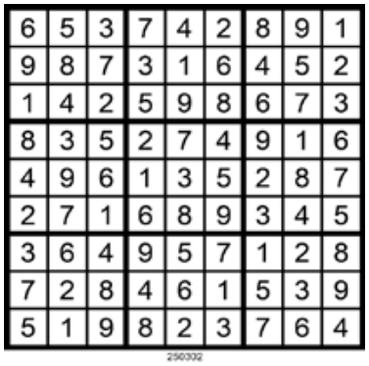

"Shaking It Up: The Life & Times of Liz Carpenter" will be available to stream on PBS.org the week of March 2. See local listings for more details.

Offering unprecedented access to the talented drivers and the hard-working teams that bring the races to life, "Drive to Survive" follows them through their racing season as they compete for the 2024 FIA Formula One world championship. As revitalized teams shake up the track, Season 7 is also set to bear witness to some intense personality clashes and controversies. Featuring never-before-seen footage and exclusive interviews, the series features Formula One's 2024 lineup of athletes from around the world, including Max Verstappen and Sergio Perez for Red Bull Racing Honda RBPT; Charles Leclerc and Carlos Sainz for Ferrari; George Russell and Lewis Hamilton for Mercedes; Lando Norris and Oscar Piastri for McLaren Mercedes; Esteban Ocon, Pierre Gasly and Jack Doohan for Alpine Renault; Lance Stroll and Fernando Alonso for Aston Martin Aramco Mercedes; Kevin Magnussen, Nico Hulkenberg and Oliver Bearman for Haas Mercedes; Daniel Ricciardo, Yuki Tsunoda and Liam Lawson for RB Honda RBPT; Alexander Albon, Franco Colapinto and Logan Sargeant for Williams Mercedes; and Valtteri Bottas and Zhou Guanyu for Kick Sauber Ferrari.

"Plankton: The Movie"

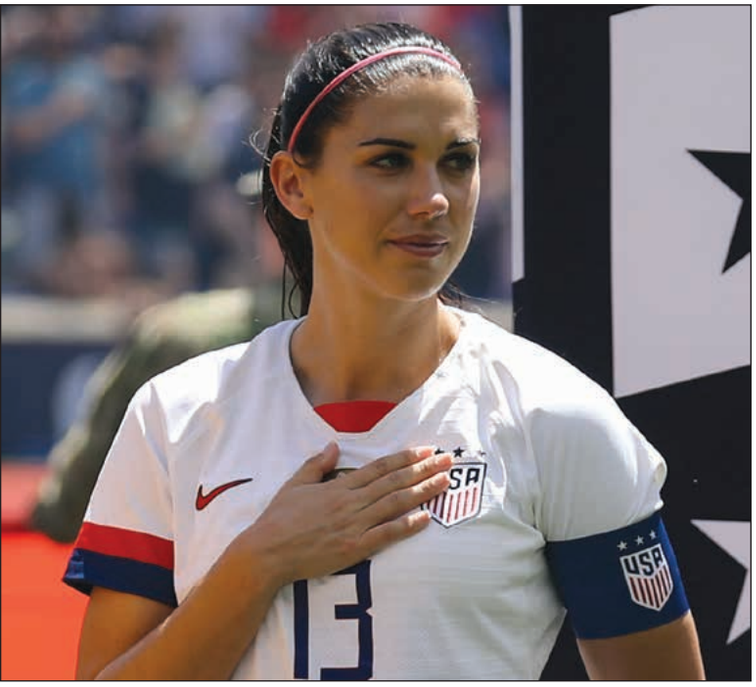

It's time for a new adventure under the sea! The newest "SpongeBob Squarepants" spinoff movie, "Plankton: The Movie," premieres Friday, March 7, on Netflix. For years, Plankon (voiced by Mr. Lawrence, "Rocko's Modern Life") has been trying and failing to steal Mr. Krabs' (Clancy Brown, "The Penguin") Krabby Patty formula — and to take over the world. When another one of his plans fails, his computer wife, Karen (Jill Talley, "The Loud House"), finally hits her limit. Fed up with Plankton's failures, as well as his poor attitude towards her, Karen sets out on her own mission for world domination without him. Now, Plankton must team up with SpongeBob (Tom Kenny, "Kiff"), Sandy (Carolyn Lawrence, "Jimmy Neutron: Boy Genius," 2001), Pearl (Lori Alan, "Inside Out," 2015), Mrs. Puff (Mary Jo Catlett, "Serial Mom," 1994) and Patrick (Bill Fagerbakke, "How I Met Your Mother") to stop Karen and save not only Bikini Bottom, but the world at large. Directed by Dave Needham ("The Loud House Movie," 2021), the movie, based on a story by Mr. Lawrence, features a screenplay by Lawrence, Kaz ("Phineas and Ferb") and Chris Viscardi ("The Adventures of Pete & Pete").

"Beauty in Black" - Season 2

The drama-packed saga continues when "Tyler Perry's Beauty in Black" premieres its second installment Thursday, March 6, on Netflix. Kimmie (Taylor Polidore Williams, "All American: Homecoming"), having been kicked out of her house by her mother, is struggling to make a living. Mallory (Crystle Stewart, "For Better or Worse"), meanwhile, is running a successful business. Set in Atlanta, the story soon finds these two women entangled in each other's life as "the story brings together a wealthy Black family atop a hair care dynasty and an exotic dancer caught up in the seedy underbelly of a famed Magic City strip club" (per Netflix Tudum). Directed, written and executive produced by multihyphenate talent Tyler Perry ("Sistas"), "Beauty in Black" also stars Amber Reign Smith ("Wu-Tang: An American Saga"), Ricco Ross ("Aliens," 1986), Debbi Morgan ("All My Children"), Richard Lawson ("Poltergeist," 1982), Steven G. Norfleet ("Watchmen"), Julian Horton ("Tough Love: Atlanta"), Terrell Carter ("Diary of a Mad Black Woman," 2005), Shannon Wallace ("City on a Hill"), Bryan Tanaka ("La La Land," 2016), Joy Rovaris ("Wicked," 2021), Charles Malik Whitfield ("Chicago Med"), Tamera "Tee" Kissen ("White Men Can't Jump," 2023), Ursula O. "Picture This" (2025)

Fall in love with Prime Video's new rom-com "Picture This," premiering Thursday, March 6, on the streamer. The film stars Simone Ashley ("Bridgerton") as Pia, a struggling photographer whose life takes a turn when she receives a jarring prediction: within the next five dates she goes on, she will find not only her true love but career success, too. With her sister's wedding looming, her family plays matchmaker by setting her up on a number of increasingly off-kilter blind dates. But, when her ex-boyfriend (Hero Fiennes Tiffin, "The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare," 2024) reappears, everything spirals further out of control — but it still has the potential to work out in the end. Written by Nikita Lalwani ("The Outlaws") and directed by Prarthana Mohan ("The Christmas Break," 2023), "Picture This" also stars Sindhu Vee ("The Pradeeps of Pittsburgh"), Luke Fetherston ("Big Mood"), Nikesh Patel ("The Devil's Hour"), Adil Ray ("Ackley Bridge"), Anoushka Chadha ("Unforgotten"), Eben Figueiredo ("National Theatre Live: Much Ado About Nothing"), Kulvinder Ghir ("Goodness Gracious Me"), Asim Chaudhry ("People Just Do Nothing") and Phil Dunster ("Ted Lasso").

"For the Win: NWSL"

Directed by Marie Margolius ("30 for 30"), the insightful and exciting four-part docuseries, "For the Win: NWSL," makes its debut this Thursday, March 6, offering soccer fans of all ages the unprecedented opportunity to tag along with the 2024 National Women's Soccer League (NWSL) as they journey from playoffs to Championship game. Go behind the scenes and relive a thrilling season of gameplay, as episodes of "For the Win" share insight on the passion, professionalism and unmatched talent found across the league, and conclude at an impressive high, as the top teams battle for the coveted Championship trophy. "With players like Alex Morgan and defending 2024 NWSL Champion Orlando Pride legend Marta solidifying their legacies and emerging stars like Trinity Rodman and Croix Bethune from the Washington Spirit picking up the torch, the series delves into the lives of the athletes who have become icons on and off the field," Prime Video describes. "Through exclusive interviews, locker-room access, and heart-pounding match highlights, the documentary captures the nostalgia, emotion, and fierce competition that shapes a playoff run within the fastest growing league in the world." Connor Schell ("Super League: The War for Football"), Libby Geist ("NASCAR: Full Speed"), Eli Manning ("Eli Manning Presents: The Undercovers," 2024) and Alex Morgan ("Alex & Me," 2018) feature as executive producers.

"Thomas Muller – Einer wie keiner"

The feature-length sports documentary, "Thomas Muller – Einer wie keiner," (or "Thomas Muller – One of a Kind") premieres on Prime Video this Tuesday, March 4, celebrating one of Germany's all-time greatest footballers. From humble beginnings in rural Bavaria to global acclaim on the pitch, director André Hörmann's ("Till Murder Do Us Part: Soering vs. Haysom") offers a behind-the-scenes look at the life and career of player Thomas Müller, who found his start at FC Bayern Munich when he was only 10 years old. Through highs and lows (both on and off the field), viewers will be offered an in-depth look at the challenges and triumphs that have marked the star's professional career, before then following Müller through a dramatic season of gameplay that concludes with his heartfelt goodbye to Team Germany at the 2024 European Championships. Immortalizing an "honest, authentic and quick-witted" player (per Amazon MGM Studios), "Thomas Muller – Einer wie keiner" was produced by NEO Studios.

Markle gives back

'With Love, Meghan' premieres following delay from California wildfires

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Meghan Markle ("Suits"), the Duchess of Sussex, welcomes friends, family and celebrity guests to join her at a beautiful Californian estate, where they share cooking, gardening and hosting tips during every episode of "With Love, Meghan" — arriving Tuesday, March 4, on Netflix after an unexpected (but meaningful) delay.

According to a description given by Netflix, "With Love, Meghan," will "[blend] practical how-to's and candid conversation with friends, new and old."

They continue: "Meghan shares personal tips and tricks, embracing playfulness over perfection, and highlights how easy it can be to create beauty, even in the unexpected. She and her guests roll up their sleeves in the kitchen, the garden and beyond, and invite you to do the same. In each episode, we join Meghan in the kitchen, garden — and even at the beehive — as she prepares to host friends both old and new. Whether Meghan is sharing personal tips and tricks, or taking the opportunity to learn something new, it's a time for connection."

At Meghan's request, however, the season's debut was postponed from its original Jan. 15 premiere date due to the ongoing devastation caused by the Los Angeles wildfires that began on Jan. 7 of this year.

Meghan, Duchess of Sussex in "With Love, Meghan"

"I'm thankful to my partners at Netflix for supporting me in delaying the launch, as we focus on the needs of those impacted by the wildfires in my home state of California," Meghan says.

In the meantime, the Duke and Duchess have been busy meeting with survivors and emergency medical workers impacted by the disaster, and have, according to Town and Country Magazine, "made donations to relief efforts through their Archewell Foundation and have donated clothing, children's items and other essential supplies to those affected by the fires." Additionally, "they have opened their Montecito home to loved ones who were forced to evacuate due to the blaze," and are "working alongside World Central Kitchen to help with relief efforts."

While life is not fully back to normal for those impacted by the recent fires in Los Angeles, Markle's series — called a "heartfelt tribute to Southern California" by the platform — is sure to celebrate the beauty, culture and community found in The Golden State.

Produced by Markle herself, "With Love, Meghan" debuts Tuesday, March 4, on Netflix.

"Deli Boys" - Season 1

Get into the meat of the family business when the new comedy series "Deli Boys" makes its debut Thursday, March 6, on Hulu. With a convenience store magnate for a father, Pakistani American brothers Mir (Asif Ali, "Wrecked") and Raj (Saagar Shaikh, "Ms. Marvel") have never had to worry about wanting for anything. But, when their father suddenly dies, it's up to the brothers to pick up where their father left off or risk losing everything. However, they are soon forced to face the fact that not everything their Baba did was above board, and now they'll have to attempt to take his place in the underworld. Also starring Poorna Jagannathan ("Never Have I Ever"), Alfie Fuller ("The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel") and Brian George ("The Expanse"), "Deli Boys," from Onyx Collective, was created by Abdullah Saeed ("Bong Appétit") and developed by Jenni Konner ("Girls") and Nora Silver ("Single Drunk Female").

Categories at the 97th Oscars include actor and actress in a leading role; actor and actress in a supporting role; animated feature film; animated short film; cinematography; costume design; directing; documentary feature film; documentary short film; film editing; international feature film; makeup and hairstyling; music (original score); music (original song); best picture; production design; live action short film; sound; visual effects; writing (adapted screenplay); and writing (original screenplay).

"Hellboy: The Crooked Man" (2024)

Acting as the fourth installment of the live-action "Hellboy" franchise, the 2024 monster-hero film, "Hellboy: The Crooked Man," comes to Prime Video this Friday, March 7. Directed by Brian Taylor ("Crank," 2006), this latest chapter finds Hellboy (Jack Kesy, "12 Strong," 2018) in the 1950s, joined by rookie B.P.R.D. (Bureau for Paranormal Research and Defense) officer Bobbie Jo Song (Adeline Rudolph, "Resident Evil") for what seems to be a simple task: delivering a supernatural spider to their headquarters. As they journey across the Appalachian Mountains, however, the two are pushed off track, instead finding themselves in a remote community that worships an almighty demon – the Crooked Man (Martin Bassindale, "On Chesil Beach," 2017) – who roams Earth in search of souls for the devil. Finding the locals (and themselves) in unparalleled danger, Hellboy and Song must find a way to appease the Crooked Man once and for all. With a screenplay by Christopher Golden ("Ghosts of Albion: Legacy"), Taylor, and creator of the "Dark Horse" comic series, "Hellboy" (2004) writer Mike Mignola, "Hellboy: The Crooked Man" features a stunning cast, including Jefferson White ("Civil War," 2024), Leah McNamara ("Normal People"), Suzanne Bertish ("Benediction," 2021), Joseph Marcell ("Portraits of a Dangerous Women," 2024), Hannah Margetson ("Min kamp"), Siyana Nacheva ("The Resonance Principle," 2023), Anton Trendafilov ("Stonehearst Asylum," 2014), Jonathan Yunger ("The Offering," 2022), Nathan Cooper ("Man with No Past," 2025), Michael Flemming ("Rock Monster," 2008) and Laura Giosh ("Prey for the Devil," 2023), among many others.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I was watching an old episode of "Voyager" where a wrestler had to fight an android. Was it The Rock or did it just look like him, because he was popular at the time?

A: Already in 2000 when the episode aired, Dwayne Johnson ("Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle," 2017) — then still known only as The Rock — was a pretty big get for "Star Trek: Voyager."

But it was, indeed, the man himself playing, well, essentially himself, but with some forehead prosthetics to look like an alien.

In the Season 6 episode, titled "Tsunkatse," the Voyager crew take some shore leave on a planet that's hosting a mixed martial arts tournament. Naturally, one of them — the cyborg Seven of Nine, played by Jeri Ryan ("Bosch") — is forced to compete in the tournament, fighting the champion, played by Johnson.

He gets to come out to a loud theme song and flashing lights, and their fight takes place in a wrestling ring — the producers are clearly counting on fans to know who The Rock is and to be as excited as they are to have him on the show.

And they were, indeed, excited. All sorts of promotional photos were shared of the cast and crew goofing around with Johnson behind the scenes.

Johnson was, as you say, already a big deal by 2000 — one of the most popular wrestling superstars ever. However, this was just his third acting role, after popping in for one-off episodes of the sitcom "That '70s Show" and the drama series "The Net" a year earlier.

In 2001, he would truly make his entry into acting in the big-screen smash "The Mummy Returns" — a turn that would lead to him getting his own standalone film, "The Scorpion King," the following year.

Q: Why did Lauren Lyle leave "Outlander"? And what's she doing now?

A: It was never officially announced that Lauren Lyle ("Vigil") was leaving her role as Marsali on Starz' smash-hit historical drama "Outlander" after its sixth season in 2022. The lack of a pre-announcement, plus the fact that her character was written off along with her on-screen husband (Cesar Domboy, "The Walk," 2015), would suggest that she was leaving for story reasons rather than career ones.

And she at least hinted the same in an interview in 2023, after Season 7 had premiered without her. "It feels weird to not be in it, but it's just the way the world lay at that time and it happens and it's fine," she told DigitalSpy.com.

Of course, Lyle can afford to be gracious. Mere months after leaving "Outlander," she was already starring in her own show, the iTV crime thriller "Karen Pirie."

That's part of the answer to what she's doing now. "Karen Pirie" (available over here on the BritBox streaming service) has aired one season so far, in 2022, but it's currently in production on a second.

Meanwhile, Lyle also has a leading role in the miniseries "Toxic Town," which just debuted on Netflix. And she's dabbled a little in film, including the horror films "Mercy Falls" (2023) and "Something in the Water" (2024), as well as the award-nominated 2024 drama "The Outrun."

But the biggest news for fans is that she's not quite done with "Outlander" yet. It was announced last year that she would return for the show's final, eighth season, along with her on-screen husband.

There's no release date set yet, but filming wrapped in September. It's speculated for late this year or early 2026.

Q: Is Mare Winningham still acting? She's the only star of "St. Elmo's Fire" whom I haven't heard much about.

A: "St. Elmo's Fire" (1985) is, of course, remembered as one of the most beloved films featuring the Brat Pack, the group of young '80s stars as famous for their off-screen antics as their on-screen work. Mare Winningham was one of the film's leads, so she'll always be associated with the group, even though she was only ever Brat Pack adjacent — for better and worse.

She never quite reached the same heights of fame as her fellow "St. Elmo's" stars, such as Emilio Estevez ("The Mighty Ducks," 1992) or Demi Moore (recently seen in the award-winning 2024 film "The Substance"). But she also never succumbed to the scandals that plagued some of them.

Instead, she's created a steadily successful career for herself on the big and small screens, and, lately, the stage — she's been nominated for two Tony Awards for her Broadway work, most recently in 2022 for her role in "Girl From the North Country."

That seems to be where her current passion lies. She just finished another run on Broadway in February, this time in the holiday story "Cult of Love."

On-screen, her most recent role was a reprisal of her "Girl From the North Country" part in the 2024 film adaptation. She also had a role in the prestigious 2020 film "News of the World," opposite Tom Hanks ("Forrest Gump," 1994).

On TV, she had leading roles on the award-winning miniseries "Dopesick" in 2021 and the HBO crime miniseries "The Outsider" in 2020.
