Late Laughs

Jimmy Kimmel Live! With Tiffany Haddish

I'll be hosting all week, and here's how it's going to go. Tonight [Aug. 18], I'll find my footing. Tomorrow, I'll hit my stride. Wednesday, not going to lie to you, I'll be calling in sick, but really I'll be on a party bus in Vegas. And on Thursday, I'll still be partying my ass off because I'm young.

Not only am I filling in for Jimmy this week, I actually have an important announcement to make. Drum roll, please. I, Tiffany Sarah Cornelia Haddish, am running for president of the United States of America. That is right. I've got all the qualifications to be president. I'm rich, I've been arrested a few times and I always say crazy [things] and I have a vision for this country that will blow your mind.

When I'm president, all profiles on dating sites must include your credit score. If you can't handle your business, you ain't touching my business. Under a Haddish presidency, every Subway sandwich shop will now carry pastrami sandwiches. Just the way the founding fathers wanted it to be.

I will issue an executive order allowing people to pay their taxes with old gift cards. We're going to run this country, this government, like a company, and that company is Sizzler.

I also will make it a crime to show up on time to a dinner party. Who in the hell is walking into my house at 6 o'clock for a 6 o'clock dinner? White people. That's it.

Instead of elevator small talk, let's do elevator big talk. "Quick, tell me about your divorce before the doors open."

And finally, I'm getting rid of those little robots that deliver food. In my America, robots will only be used for sex stuff. And my campaign is built around a very simple idea: America, mind your own damn business.

We've had an actor as president, a reality host president, but now it's time to elect a comedian. Finally, a president who is funny on purpose. Most of the time.

The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon (R)

I saw that the CEO of Boeing said 2025 could be the company's turnaround year. I'm sorry. Could be? It's never good when a company that makes planes has a comeback story.

This fall, Hershey is releasing a Reese's Oreo Cup and an Oreo Reese's cookie. Yeah, Ozempic is like, "Well, we tried."

The makers of Pop-Tarts and Pringles said that they are removing all synthetic dyes from their foods. Yeah. People who eat Pop-Tarts and Pringles are like, "Good, because my health is very important to me."

Apparently, Mr. Beast spent $500,000 to rent out Disneyland so he could have a private date night with his fiancée. Nothing more romantic than being all alone in the Hall of Presidents.

Back at the board: Olson, cast return for second season of 'High Potential'

By Dana Simpson
TV Media

Growing up, many of us heard about our potential. Whether from parents, teachers, siblings, friends or employers, the concept that one's potential was something to be lived up to was — and continues to be — culturally pervasive despite the problematic ideals and near-impossible standards it so often sets. That said, there is very little in this world more frustrating than seeing one's potential go unfulfilled.

This cultural expectation is the foundation for the ABC series "High Potential," which premieres its second season Tuesday, Sept. 16, on the cable network. Landing on Hulu the following day, the series stars Kaitlin Olson ("It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia") as Morgan Gillory, a single mom and diagnosed "high-potential intellectual" who lands a promotion from nighttime cleaning lady to LAPD consultant after providing a string of insights that helped the Major Crimes Unit solve a particularly complex case.

Following the two-part Season 1 finale in which Morgan and the team used their knowledge of puzzles, games and codes to track down a serial kidnapper known only as the Game Master (David Giuntoli, "A Million Little Things"), fans have been looking forward to a second season of the hour-long procedural comedy (45-minute episodes if streaming) since this past February. And while, in a world where it could be years between streaming seasons, the fact that "High Potential" has such a dedicated following is a testament to its writing, acting and direction.

Ranked ABC's "highest-rated new show among adults in seven years," as stated by the network, "High Potential" edged out both "American Idol" and "Grey's Anatomy," shows that had previously garnered the most network attention. So, needless to say, fans of the series have high expectations for the long-awaited second season. (And for those who are not yet caught up, beware of minor Season 1 spoilers ahead.)

"Season 1 had a fun two-part ending surprise and everything gets addressed in the new season," Olson told the press, as reported by USA Today. "That parking lot meeting turned out to be so creepy, and he got so close to Morgan's kids. It's every mother's nightmare."

Both Amirah J ("Shameless") and Matthew Lamb ("Smile," 2022) return for Season 2 as Morgan's children, Ava and Elliot, with each of them rumored to take on a larger role as they settle into their characters and develop more intricate storylines. Ava, for example, takes on a more active role in the search for her father, missing person Roman Siquerra (casting has yet to be announced), who, as the story goes, disappeared one day while out picking up diapers and milk for his then-infant daughter. After learning that Roman was living a double life as an FBI informant prior to his disappearance, Morgan — and now Ava — have become determined to find the long-gone man of mystery in the series' second season.

"Roman is a really important and amazing piece of casting. I fantasize about who it could be, but I haven't zeroed in on a person yet," show-runner and executive producer Todd Harthan ("The Resident") told Us Weekly during the hiatus between seasons, adding, "We've never met Morgan's mother and father, either. We haven't met anybody."

While this may be an indication of things to come in Season 2, the plot appears to hinge on two ongoing searches: the first for Roman and the second for the ever-elusive Puzzle Master, who continues to escalate his tactics and gets personal following Season 1's harrowing trip to the grocery store.

And although many of the series' more sentimental viewers have been wondering whether Karadec (Daniel Sunjata, "The Devil Wears Prada," 2006) and Morgan's chemistry will take flight this season, Sunjata told Us Weekly that "there's definitely some electricity between the two of them."

"There's a reluctant mutual attraction that's happening," the actor noted to the online magazine, "but I don't think we should expect to see anything crazy about that happening anytime soon."

Morgan is a very busy woman, after all.

Other returning characters this season include type-A detective Daphne Forrester, played by "Batman" and "God Friended Me" star Javicia Leslie; Forrester's partner Lev "Oz" Osman, portrayed by "The Flight Attendant's" Deniz Akdeniz; Major Crimes Lt. Selena Soto, played by "Scrubs" and "Devious Maids" actress Judy Reyes; Morgan's ex and co-parent Ludo Radovic, played by comedian and former "Saturday Night Live" cast member Taran Killam; and perhaps the LAPD's most invasive employee, Lt. Melon, played by "Raising Hope" and "No Country for Old Men" (2007) actor Garret Dillahunt.

Additionally, "E.R." alum Mekhi Phifer and "Shameless" actor Steve Howey joined the cast this summer during the interseason break. Howey will reportedly star as the precinct's new captain, Nick Wagner, while Phifer's role remains a mystery as of writing.

Don't miss a new season of clever deduction, puzzle solving and hijinks when Season 2 of "High Potential" premieres Tuesday, Sept. 16, on ABC. Episodes release next day on Hulu.

Doors open on 'Black Rabbit': Bateman, Law star as brothers in new limited series

By Dana Simpson
TV Media

Brotherhood is a concept that is, at its heart, rooted in a common bond. Whether blood brothers, fraternity brothers, religious brothers (such as monks) or natural brothers through family connection or DNA, "a brother's love," as stated by Delroy Lindo's character in the 2000 film "Gone in 60 Seconds," "is a brother's love."

When it all comes down to brass tacks, a brother's bond is a precious one that can provide comfort and security in the toughest times. Unfortunately, it can cause the utmost trouble when weaponized.

"Black Rabbit," Netflix's new limited series premiering Thursday, Sept. 18, stars two familiar faces — Jude Law ("The Talented Mr. Ripley," 1999) and Jason Bateman ("Ozark") — as New York City brothers who struggle to keep their heads above water while navigating their complicated and potentially dangerous relationship.

The series, which had its world premiere Sept. 4, at the Toronto International Film Festival, follows "Jake [Law], the owner of the Black Rabbit restaurant and bar," who "floats from back-of-house to front-of-house with confidence, knowing everyone's name and drink order. His short-term goals are a glowing review and Michelin star, though his larger plan is expansion," the TIFF description reads.

"His poise and intentions are tested when his ne'er-do-well brother Vince [Bateman] returns home. With Vince comes debt, trauma and drama that are set to impact his brother's plans for the Black Rabbit," the description continues.

Both Law and Bateman are highly involved in the series, with each actor executive producing alongside series co-creators Zach Baylin and Kate Susman, who are jointly known for co-producing the 2024 true crime action flick "The Order." Bateman also directs the first two of the series' eight episodes.

And while both Law and Bateman were tied to the project early on, Bateman told Netflix's Tudum that they did not initially have official roles assigned to them.

"When Jude and I were first talking about our roles, there wasn't a decision yet about who was going to play which part," Bateman said during press time. "We both agreed that I usually play the character that he's playing: the one who doesn't make bad decisions all the time. Wouldn't it be interesting if I didn't play that character this time?"

"On the page, Vince is volatile, unpredictable, he has this reputation for blowing things up literally and emotionally," Law added. "And what's extraordinary is, of course, Jason [Bateman] brings to it this innocence, this beautiful likability. The fact is, you understand why this guy gets away with it."

The strained sibling relationship is a tried-and-true device in film and television, featuring in everything from sports dramas such as "Warrior" (2011) and the aforementioned early-aughts action favorite "Gone in 60 Seconds" to television series such as FX's "The Bear," the Apple TV+ Original "Bad Sisters" and the critically acclaimed NBC tearjerker "This Is Us." The trope, however, exists for a reason: it's highly relatable.

"It's really about these brothers who love each other but don't match — one's a screw-up, and the other is much more buttoned up," Bateman elaborated to Tudum about his and Law's character dynamic. "Everybody's either got a sibling or a friendship where you love being with one another, but it's kind of dangerous; where that person usually gets you in trouble but they're really exciting to be around."

As for how the creators first engaged with the project, Tudum reports that the pair initially began by imagining the ideal setting, the Black Rabbit itself, before stepping out to test their lead characters' bond.

"We just started talking about setting a TV show in a restaurant — a scene we've always been captivated and intoxicated by — and what would that mean as a backdrop," Susman told Netflix. "Then we got to talking about characters and brothers. We both have siblings and were interested in exploring the idea that you're one person with your sibling and someone else in the world; and that no matter what you do or where you go in life, your childhood dynamic can be really hard to escape."

"Black Rabbit" also stars Sope Dirisu ("Gangs of London") as musician and businessman Wes; Cleopatra Coleman ("Infinity Pool," 2023) as interior designer Estelle; Dagmara Dominczyk ("Succession") as Val, Jake's philanthropist ex-wife; Odesa Young ("The Staircase") as Gen, a New York tattoo artist and friend of the brothers; and Chris Coy ("Lawmen: Bass Reeves") and Troy Kotsur ("Curb Your Enthusiasm") as bookies known to the brothers.

Amaka Okafor ("The Sandman"), Robin de Jesus ("tick, tick ... BOOM!" 2021), Abbey Lee ("Old," 2021) and Don Harvey ("The Deuce") each star as a chef or bartender in the series, while Amir Malaklou ("The Old Man"), Forrest Weber ("The Blacklist"), Francis Benhamou ("Inside Amy Schumer"), Gus Birney ("Shining Vale"), John Ales ("Euphoria") and Steve Witting ("Tulsa King") round out the cast as fellow New Yorkers of various backgrounds.

Don't miss the grand opening of "Black Rabbit" when it premieres Thursday, Sept. 18, on Netflix.

First season of 'Celebrity Weakest Link' sees countless television reunions

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

'Glee'-ful competition: Packed full of nostalgic reunions (for both its host and its competitors), the inaugural season of "Celebrity Weakest Link" makes its debut Monday, Sept. 15, airing on Fox for the first time in broadcast history.

Much like its predecessor — "Weakest Link" — this star-studded return follows contestants as they try to complete an uninterrupted chain of correct answers while being asked general knowledge questions within a time limit. At the end of each round, contestants vote on a group member to be considered the "weakest link," seeing the player eliminated.

Here, Jane Lynch, known for shows including "Glee," "Only Murders in the Building" and "Hollywood Game Night," is the series' host, welcoming players from across the TV industry to take part in the classic game show. Fans can expect to see celebrities from both scripted and unscripted television, with plenty of guests announced ahead of the premiere. Most excitingly, Lynch will be reuniting with her fellow "Glee" cast members, as Max Adler, Dot-Marie Jones, Heather Morris, Alex Newell, Chord Overstreet, Amber Riley, Becca Tobin and Jenna Ushkowitz take part in a game.

As Deadline explains: "That crew rarely gets together anymore (on screen, at least), despite the enduring popularity of the former Fox series, making this quite a special reunion."

A trailer for the upcoming season hints more at what's to come, with Lynch poking at former castmates in a manner befitting her "Glee" character, Sue Sylvester.

Jane Lynch hosts "Celebrity Weakest Link"

"Listen up, dorks, I'll ask you questions one at a time," Lynch jokes, eliciting some delightful reactions from her former co-workers.

This first season also promises a "High School Reunion" episode, bringing together actors who once starred together as teenagers. Scott Porter and Aimeé Teegarden represent "Friday Night Lights" in the episode, while Daphne Reid and Tatyana Ali from "Fresh Prince of Bel-Air," Shenae Grimes and Matt Lanter from "90210" and Barry Watson and Beverly Mitchell from "7th Heaven" fill out the rest of their "Weakest Link" team.

With plenty more to come — including episodes filled with reality TV couples, famous comedians and on-screen doctors — "Celebrity Weakest Link" makes its star-studded debut Monday, Sept. 15, on Fox.

Celebrity dance battle: Carrie Ann Inaba ("The Talk"), Bruno Tonioli ("What a Girl Wants," 2003) and six-time series winner Derek Hough ("Nashville") will certainly have their work cut out for them as judges when internet famous faces take to the floor during the Season 34 premiere of "Dancing With the Stars," airing Tuesday, Sept. 16, on ABC.

A staple on broadcast television since 2005, the dance competition series has made itself notoriously known for keeping tight-lipped about its upcoming competitors, leaving fans to be surprised when popular — and unexpected — celebrities make their way onto the dance floor.

For this upcoming season, however, "DWTS" has made an impression by announcing not one, not two, but four of its Season 34 competitors, all months in advance of the show's return.

First to be announced was Robert Irwin — son of the late "Crocodile Hunter" Steve Irwin — who confirmed his participation back in April on "Good Morning America." At 21 years old, the animal enthusiast will be following in the footsteps of older sister Bindi, who appeared on Season 21 of "DWTS" and eventually won the Len Goodman Mirrorball Trophy alongside her professional dance partner, Derek Hough.

"I cannot tell you what an honor, what a privilege it is to be joining this season," Irwin shared during Hulu's "Get Real!" event.

At only 11, Irwin watched his sister become a champion, claiming she had the "most incredible time" on the competition floor.

"I just thought, 'One day that's gonna be me.' I have these little dreams, and now that dream is a reality. I am over the moon. Let's do this," Irwin concluded.

Next announced is TikTok star Alix Earle, who has plenty of social media experience with 7.5 million TikTok followers and four million Instagram followers to show for it. Earle, however, also has more than a little dance experience, as she danced competitively until her sophomore year of high school.

Finally, two contestants were announced during the "Secret Lives of Mormon Wives" reunion special, in which both Jen Affleck and Whitney Leavitt shared they would be traveling from Utah to Los Angeles to compete on "DWTS" this fall.

Leavitt took to Instagram to share her excitement, posting a video of her dancing at home alongside the caption: "Get ready 'cause I do be comin' for that mirrorball."

With plenty more celebrities to be announced, "Dancing With the Stars" 34th season premieres Tuesday, Sept. 16, on ABC.

"Matchroom: The Greatest Showmen" - Season 1

A gripping portrait of ambition, spectacle and family legacy, "Matchroom: The Greatest Showmen" premieres on Netflix this Wednesday, Sept. 17, with all six episodes available to stream. The docuseries takes viewers inside the world of Matchroom Sports, the United Kingdom's largest sporting promotion that was built by Barry Hearn and now led by his son, Eddie. For the first time, cameras are granted full access to the Hearn's empire, capturing the relentless drive, negotiations and family tensions that keep Matchroom in motion. "We have provided access [to] all areas to a film crew to give fans an unprecedented glimpse at what goes on behind the scenes to power the Matchroom machine," Eddie Hearn said in a statement. "We want to push storytelling to new heights across boxing, darts, snooker and multi-sports, so we are delighted to partner with a production powerhouse in Box to Box." The docuseries also pulls back the curtain on some of the most dramatic moments in recent sports history, from Benn v Eubank Jr. to Taylor v

Serrano II and AJ v Dubois, with appearances from darts champion Luke Littler ("PDC World Darts Championship") and snooker legend Ronnie O'Sullivan ("Ronnie O'Sullivan's American Hustle"). Produced by Warren Smith ("Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins") for Box to Box Films.

"Next Gen Chef" - Season 1

Get ready to step into the kitchen of the future when "Next Gen Chef" makes its debut Wednesday, Sept. 17, on Netflix. Set within the hallowed halls of the Culinary Institute of America, "Next Gen Chef" assembles 21 rising stars under the age of 30 for a culinary showdown. Hosted by Olivia Culpo ("The Culpo Sisters"), each week contestants face a succession of demanding challenges designed to test their creativity, technical chops and composure under pressure. As they navigate through signature dishes, surprise ingredient gauntlets and nerve-racking eliminations, every plate becomes a statement and every decision could seal their fate. Judges Carlton McCoy ("Nomad with Carlton McCoy") and Kelsey Barnard Clark ("Top Chef") oversee each round; guest judges this season include food writer Francis Lam ("Par-kour: Beat Your Fear," 2011), Milk

Bar CEO Christina Tosi ("With Love, Meghan"), and chefs Cat Cora ("Iron Chef America: The Series"), Paul Carmichael ("Agony") and Susan Feniger ("Ideal Home," 2018), among others. "Haunted Hotel" - Season 1

Pack your bags! A stay at this "Haunted Hotel" is not easily forgotten. Premiering Friday, Sept. 19, on Netflix, this hauntingly whimsical animated tale follows a single mother of two as she tries to manage the Undervale, a hotel with a major ghost problem. Her unexpected helper is her estranged brother — who is now one of the ghosts and believes he and his fellow phantoms have some pretty good ideas on running the place. The series features the voices of Emmy-nominated actor Will Forte ("The Last Man on Earth") as Nathan, Eliza Coupe ("Happy Endings") as Katherine, Skyler Gisondo ("The Righteous Gemstones") as Ben, Natalie Palamides ("The Powerpuff Girls") as Esther and Emmy nominee Jimmi Simpson ("Westworld") as Abaddon. From creator Matt Roller ("The Goldbergs"), "Haunted Hotel" is executive produced by Chris McKenna ("Spider-Man: Homecoming," 2017), Dan Harmon (creator of "Rick and Morty") and Steve Levy ("Strange Planet"). "Gen V" - Season 2

From the world of "The Boys," dark secrets and dangerous powers collide as "Gen V" returns for Season 2, arriving Wednesday, Sept. 17, on Prime Video with its first three episodes. After the violent fallout at Godolkin University, where Marie (Jaz Sinclair, "Paper Towns," 2015), Jordan (London Thor and Derek Luh, "The Rolling Soldier" and "Shining Vale," respectively), Emma (Lizze Broadway, "Ghosted," 2023) and Andre (Chance Perdomo, "Chilling Adventures of Sabrina") were framed and imprisoned following the betrayal by Cate (Maddie Phillips, "The Boys") and Sam (Asa Germann, "Monsters"), Season 2 reveals the students' harrowing time in a brutal rehabilitation center before their reluctant return to campus. But Godolkin is far from safe as Homelander (Antony Starr, "Wish You Were Here," 2012) consolidates power across the United States, backed by President Calhoun (David Andrews, "The Boys") and an army of supes, while humans at the university are forced to wear identifying badges under the oppressive regime. Now facing constant surveillance, moral compromises and escalating threats from both supes and authority, the students must now fight for their freedom. Michele Fazekas ("Law & Order: Special Victims Unit") serves as showrunner and executive producer.

"Scariest House in America" - Season 2

Retta ("Good Girls") visits more of the spookiest houses across the United States in Season 2 of "Scariest House in America," coming Friday, Sept. 19, to Prime Video. The six-episode season will see the actress "tour 15 more petrifyingly paranormal or horrifically hideous houses whose owners say are haunted by scary stories and hair-raising sights," per HGTV's description. This season's spine-chilling stops include a funeral home with a morgue in the basement, a home resting on a graveyard and a witch's hat-shaped property, all alive with shadows, flickering lights and mysterious noises. Each episode features unfiltered views from Retta about each of the homes' scary appearance, unlivability and fright factor. Whichever house is deemed the scariest in the season finale will receive $150,000 renovation by HGTV's Alison Victoria ("Ugliest House in America"). The series is executive produced by John Brimhall ("Ink Master").

"Belén" (2025)

Based on the novel "What Happened to Belén: The Unjust Imprisonment That Sparked a Women's Rights Movement" (written by author Ana Elena Correa) – itself based on a very true story – director Dolores Fonzi's ("Blondi," 2023) 2025 film, "Belén," makes its debut on Prime Video this Thursday, Sept. 18. Also starring

Fonzi, alongside César Troncoso ("Yosi, the Regretful Spy"), Julieta Cardinali ("A Less Bad World," 2004), Laura Paredes ("Argentina, 1985," 2022), Luis Machín ("Mensaje en una botella," 2025), Camila Plaate ("The Snatch Thief," 2018), Sergio Prina ("The Man Who Loved UFOs," 2024), Lili Juárez ("Thirty2," 2023) and newcomer Ruth Plaate, this eye-opening story follows the harrowing case of a 25-year-old woman living in Argentina, who is falsely accused of infanticide after she experiences a miscarriage – despite not knowing she was pregnant in the first place. With a fearless lawyer at her side, she enters a trial that soon becomes monumental in the ongoing fight for women's reproductive rights, and battles for her freedom despite the corrupt, classist and patriarchal legal system she faces. "Belén" features a screenplay written by Fonzi, Paredes, Agustina San Martín ("To Kill the Beast," 2021) and Nicolás Britos ("El método: principio de identidad").

'Halloween Baking Championship' returns for Season 11

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Ushering in the 2025 spooky season, the beloved seasonal competition series, "Halloween Baking Championship," returns Monday, Sept. 15, on Food Network, starting with a super-sized premiere.

Seeing the return of judges Carla Hall ("The Chew"), Stephanie Boswell ("Next Baking Master: Paris") and Zac Young ("Unique Sweets") — and host John Henson ("My Name Is Earl") — this annual competition, now in its 11th year, allows America's top bakers to battle it out in the kitchen of a haunted mansion as they create countless desserts celebrating the fun and fantastical world of Halloween.

"Over the course of seven episodes, the bakers will be tested with a series of sinister challenges inspired by the haunted manor — and, the most terrifying aspect of all, their own personal fears," Food Network says of the series.

Additionally, the network has shared that this upcoming season will feature some unexpected "tricks" along with its usual treats, as "the bottom three bakers in most episodes will be forced to bake for their lives" (per Food Network).

Host John Henson and judges Carla Hall, Zac Young and Stephanie Boswell in "Halloween Baking Championship"

With elimination constantly on the menu, there's no room for mistakes. For this season's bakers, the pressure is on from the very first episode, as the series begins with a bloody and brutal challenge.

"In a haunted mansion, Henson asks 10 bakers to make their No. 1 Halloween fright in a dessert that pumps edible blood," the network promises. "Judges Carla Hall, Zac Young and Stephanie Boswell decide which pulsing sweet treat wins $1,000, and one baker is eliminated. Then, the bottom three bakers must bake for their lives by creating witch symbol desserts designed to ward off evil spirits in the house. In the end, one baker is eliminated."

Knowing the chaos that erupted during the series' 10th season — which saw players competing in the so-called Henson Laboratories, using X-rays, mummies, poison potions and body parts as their baking inspiration — fans can assume plenty of on-theme episodes and over-the-top creations, all made to enhance the championship's overall creep factor.

From Triage Entertainment and Sonic Dog, the spook-loving 11th season of "Halloween Baking Championship" makes its debut Monday, Sept. 15, on Food Network, with all episodes streaming the next day on HBO Max.

Grey Goose is crafted in the legendary tradition of the Cognac region, under the watchful eye of the Maitre de Chai (or Master of the Cellar), who uses a proprietary five step distillation process to transform fine French wheat and pure artesian spring water into the World's Best Tasting Vodka

Bizarre and Fierce it says on the label, referring to the octopus-like sea creature logo. But it accurately describes this unique 'black spiced' rum, too. This dry-style rum smells like allspice and cola, and tastes dark and spicy, like overdone gingerbread, with loads of vanilla, plus ginger and pepper notes on the finish. Though too intense for sipping alone, tempered with mixers like ginger ale and lime juice, it has the potential to add rich spice and intrigue in all the right places. 92 Points Wine Enthusiast

"Swiped" (2025)

If you've tried dating in the modern age, chances are you've used an app to do it. Inspired by the provocative real-life story of the visionary founder of online dating platform Bumble, "Swiped," a feature-length film, makes its debut on Hulu this Friday,

Sept. 19. From director Rachel Lee Goldenberg ("Tiny Beautiful Things"), alongside writers Bill Parker ("Unpregnant," 2020) and Kim Caramela ("Inside Amy Schumer"), this drama follows recent college grad Whitney Wolfe Herd (Lily James, "Cinderella," 2015) as she uses extraordinary grit and ingenuity to break into the male-dominated tech industry and launch an innovative, globally lauded dating app (two, actually), paving the way to becoming the youngest female self-made billionaire in the world. "Swiped" also acts as a reunion for James and fellow "Downton Abbey" star Dan Stevens, who rounds out the film's cast alongside Dermot Mulroney ("My Best Friend's Wedding," 1997), Clea DuVall ("But I'm a Cheerleader," 1999), Ben Schnetzer ("3 Body Problem"), Jackson White ("Ambulance," 2022), Myha'la ("Industry"), Pierson Fode ("The Man from Toronto," 2022), Joely Fisher ("By the Rivers of Babylon," 2025), Coral Peña ("For All Mankind"), Olivia Rose Keegan ("Gotham Knights"), Mary Neely ("Happiness for Beginners," 2023), Ian Colletti ("Preacher"), Ana Yi Puig ("Goosebumps"), Pedro Correa ("My Dead Dad," 2021), Gabe Kessler ("Eddington," 2025), Tijuana Ricks ("The Corps") and more.

("Dude, Where's My Car?," 2000). "Futurama" is far from having taken its final bow, as Hulu has already announced a 14th season scheduled for 2026.

"Reasonable Doubt" - Season 3

All rise. Season 3 is now in session! Coming Thursday, Sept. 18, this season of "Reasonable Doubt" picks up after Jax Stewart (Emayatzy Corinealdi, "Middle of Nowhere," 2012) rescues her best friend from a life sentence and survives a deadly affair. At last, she's enjoying a bit of peace — even if it feels a little dull. But when former child star Ozzie (Kyle Bary, "Ginny & Georgia") lands himself in serious trouble, Jax takes the case. Soon, she's swept into a storm of Hollywood-size drama, while a sharp new associate threatens her hard-earned place at the firm. Season 3 stars McKinley Freeman ("End of Watch," 2012), Tim Jo ("The Neighbors"), Angela Grovey ("30 Rock"), Morris Chestnut ("Anacondas: The Hunt for the Blood Orchid," 2004) and Thaddeus J. Mixson ("Candy Cane Lane," 2023), with episodes directed by Pete Chatmon ("You") and written by Ryan Richmond ("Money Matters," 2011) and Loy A. Webb ("The Ms. Pat Show"). Kerry Washington ("Scandal"), Raamla Mohamed ("Little Fires Everywhere") and Pilar Savone ("Kill Bill: Vol. 1," 2003) return as executive producers.

"Futurama" - Season 13

You've been warned — the excitement might be too much! Season 13 of "Futurama" lands on Hulu Monday, Sept. 15, with all 10 episodes. With a volcano ready to explode, chaos erupts as Bender (John DiMaggio, "The Super Mario Bros. Movie," 2023) goes on a rampage, Fry (Billy West, "The Ren & Stimpy Show") faces off against a rival for Leela's (Katey Sagal, "Married with Children") heart and Dr. Zoidberg (also voiced by West) ... ascends to heaven? All in all, the Planet Express crew is back in action and the universe may never recover. Created by Matt Groening (also creator of "The Simpsons") and David X. Cohen ("Disenchantment"), season 13 of "Futurama" features a stellar voice cast, including Tress MacNeille ("The Simpsons"), Phil LaMarr ("Pulp Fiction," 1994), Lauren Tom ("Friends"), Maurice LaMarche ("Pinky and the Brain") and David Herman

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I was watching Season 2 of "Too Close to Home" and it ended abruptly; it didn't feel like the series was over. Where's the rest?

A: Unfortunately that's all we get. TLC's prime-time soap opera "Too Close to Home" was canceled in 2017, after the end of its second season.

You're not the only one puzzled by that. TVSeriesFinale.com, a website that tracks cancellations and renewals, called the decision "a little bit of a surprise," because the show's ratings actually went up in its second season. That's a rare feat.

Of course, ratings aren't everything. "Too Close to Home" was TLC's first-ever scripted series — the network's bread and butter has long been slice-of-life reality shows. Those are quite cheap to produce compared to scripted dramas.

Heather Locklear in
"Too Close to Home"

And reality shows often attract more viewers as well. Just over one million people tuned in to watch "Too Close to Home's" cliffhanger second-season finale — which is, of course, now its series finale. Yes, that's more than the number who watched the first season, but it's well below what TLC regularly pulls with reality shows, such as, for example, "90 Day Fiancé" and its various spinoffs.

There's also the possibility that creator Tyler Perry ("Beauty in Black") just got too busy. The incredibly reliable film and TV hit-maker was the mind behind "Too Close to Home," and it was just one of several shows he had on the air in 2017 (those being long-running hits "House of Payne," "The Haves and Have Nots," "If Loving You Is Wrong" and "Love Thy Neighbor"). He also produced, directed and starred in two films that year: "Ma-dea on the Run" and "Boo 2! A Ma-dea Halloween."

Q: Is Adam Scott going to do more "Party Down"?

A: The best anyone can say is it's not likely.

Adam Scott ("Parks and Recreation") starred in the cult-favorite sitcom "Party Down" on Starz from 2009 to 2010. But its reputation only grew afterward, partly due to many of its stars — most notably Scott — becoming more famous.

This led to a surprise revival in 2023.

It's since become clear that the revived third season was a one-off and there are no more episodes forthcoming.

Once again, Scott has moved on to new projects. Most notably, he now stars in Apple TV+'s "Severance," one of the buzziest shows on TV. It's been renewed for a third season, likely to release sometime next year.

He also has a busy big-screen sideline, with three different films in some stage of production now and several more potentials lined up.

All this is to say that a return to "Party Down" isn't likely. But the same thing could have been said prior to the surprise revival season, so anything's possible.

Maybe the best-case scenario for fans is that a new season comes out every 10 years or so. We could pop in on the increasingly bitter would-be actors as they age reluctantly in the catering jobs they thought were temporary.
