Late Laughs

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Folks, it was a big night on all the broadcast networks. Donald Trump at 9:00 gave a national prime-time address. It was concise, intelligent and brought the nation together with shared purpose. April fools. He gave a speech tonight on the first night of Passover. So, whether you're Jewish or not, I recommend having had four glasses of wine.

Despite Trump's best efforts, there is some good news in space. NASA is back, baby. I am psyched like a bike because if everything goes according to plan tonight [April 2], NASA launched their Artemis II moon mission. If you're really quiet, you can hear the sound of every dad in the country going, "Honey, they're successfully loading the liquid hydrogen into the propellant tank. This is the happiest day of my life. I love you, Jim Lovell. Am I a steel-eyed missile man?"

This is a huge deal because Artemis II is NASA's first manned mission to the moon since 1972. I'm old enough to remember that one. That was Apollo 17 when the crew consisted of Commander Eugene Cernan, Lunar Module Pilot Harrison Jack Schmitt and the entirety of Fleetwood Mac.

The four astronauts on board are Commander Reid Wiseman, Pilot Victor Glover, Mission Specialist Christina Koch and Canadian Space Agency Mission Specialist Jeremy Hansen. Wait, hold that. I don't see Katy Perry in there. Is it really a space mission if Jeff Bezos hasn't welded a terrified Gayle King into a metal tube?

The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon

Today [March 30] President Trump launched a new mobile app for people to receive news, updates, briefings and alerts directly from the White House. Yeah, and these days when you hear the phrase "President Trump launched," a new app is the best-case scenario.

[President] Trump just announced that he's going to renovate the Reflecting Pool between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument. More and more, it feels like he was the elected president of HGTV, don't you think?

Earlier tonight, NASA launched its first crewed mission to the moon in 53 years. Yeah, the rocket launch from Cape Canaveral did a quick flyby over Kid Rock's house, and then headed for the moon.

Speaking of Easter, a new survey found that most people eat their Peeps headfirst. Jesus heard and was like, "Guys, I think we're losing the plot here."

Jimmy Kimmel Live!

One of the more prominent and more vocal critics of the war in Iran was Pope Leo XIV, but I guess he's feeling pretty good about it now because today [April 8] Pope Leo caught up with the Harlem Globetrotters. There's Holy Moses Malone spinning the ball on his finger. Never has a scene at the Vatican felt more like an episode of "The Love Boat" than that.

Lord of the 'flix: Netflix premieres BBC adaptation of Golding classic

By Dana Simpson

TV Media

For those who attended high school in North America after 1970, the title "Lord of the Flies" likely conjures a somewhat Proustian return to ninth-grade English class: the smell of chalk, the high-pitched squeak of metal chair legs on vinyl tile flooring and the nervous feeling in the pit of your stomach as you realize you may be the next student called upon to read aloud from the book. Whether or not you enjoyed the novel, chances are at least one scene left an indelible impression in the back of your mind.

A powerful debut novel from British author and playwright William Golding, "Lord of the Flies" was first published in 1954 amid Cold War turbulence, the rise of rock 'n' roll and the peak of McCarthyism in the United States. As a piece of literature, "Lord of the Flies" serves as a startling depiction of the benefits and drawbacks of modern societal structures. As a television miniseries some 72 years later, the story still serves as a reminder of the horrors that persist at the heart of our shared will to survive against all odds.

"The Lord of the Flies," which first aired on BBC One and BBC iPlayer in the U.K. this past February, premieres Monday, May 4, on Netflix.

Adapted for the screen by "Adolescence" co-creator Jack Thorne, the four-episode series retells the harrowing tale of a group of British schoolboys who have become stranded on a remote island following a plane crash. Each episode is told through the lens of one of the story's main characters — Piggy (new talent David McKenna), Jack (played by Lox Pratt, who will star as Draco Malfoy in HBO's "Harry Potter" series, releasing this December), Simon (new talent Ike Talbut) and Ralph (Winston Sawyers, "The Crow Girl") — and benefits from three-time BAFTA winner Marc Munden's ("The Sympathizer") direction behind the camera.

For those less familiar with the plot of "Lord of the Flies," The Hollywood Reporter sums up the post-plane crash events as follows: "In an attempt to remain civil, they [the schoolboys] organize themselves, led by Ralph [Sawyers] and supported by the group's intellectual, Piggy [McKenna]. But when Pratt's Jack becomes more interested in hunting and vying for leadership, he soon begins to draw other boys away from the group, and hope soon descends into tragedy."

This theme of seeking power and control amid fear, anger and pivotal change is central to the novel, and Thorne notes that it's one of the driving forces behind his involvement in its adaptation for BBC (soon to land on Netflix in North America).

"As a society, we're having a conversation right now about boys," Thorne told Netflix, which released his other male teen-focused series, "Adolescence," last March. "We're losing a generation of boys, and we're losing it because of the hate they are ingesting — because it is an answer to their loneliness and isolation."

Pratt, who plays Jack (arguably the series' most sinister character), also spoke to this motif of young male loneliness addressed in the show. While discussing his first on-screen role with The Hollywood Reporter in a Feb. 4 article, the budding actor shared the process he adopted to play such a complicated and seemingly villainous character so early on in his career.

"I had quite a good, long chat to [Thorne] about the way Jack was neglected, the way that he's not a psychopath, the way he just doesn't know how to show affection, the way he doesn't feel love," Pratt said, later adding, "there's so much complexity."

Joining the four core cast members on-screen — three of whom are new to acting as of this project, thanks to an open casting call — are fellow rising talents Thomas Connor as Roger, Freddie Lee-Grey as Percival, Beau Thompson (who will star in "The Death of Robin Hood" this June) as Philip, Tom Page-Turner (who acted in upcoming short "Rule, Britannia") as Bill, and twins Noah and Cassius Fleming (Planet Coaster 2) as Sam and Eric, respectively. Additionally, Fred Jones, who previously appeared in Season 12 of the BBC One/PBS series "Call the Midwife," appears in "Lord of the Flies" as Johnny.

Although filming with young actors can often present challenges related to strict scheduling and working conditions, series director Munden told Netflix press that he feels their limitations actually enhanced the design of the series, which shot in Malaysia for its lush jungle landscapes.

"We couldn't shoot with the children after 6 o'clock, yet a lot of the action takes place after dark," said Munden, per Tudum.com. "[Director of Photography] Mark Wolf ["Triple 9," 2016] and I developed this idea of shooting day for night with an infrared camera, which responds to the green foliage, changing it to pink and red. It has a hallucinatory feel, heightened with magical realism." But for all the adjusted filming schedules, location scouting and new actors, Thorne says it will all be worth it if it generates a newfound interest in the source material.

"I hope it takes people back to the book," Thorne told Tudum, "and I hope it allows people to lean into what the book really is, in my opinion: a difficult and dangerous account of who we are and what we're capable of."

After Elizabeth: New series picks up where 'Pride and Prejudice' left off

Laurie Davidson and Ella Bruccoleri in "The Other Bennet Sister"

By Sarah Passingham
TV Media

Love is eternal and comes in many forms. Unrequited, hard-won, star-crossed or felt at first sight, the act of falling in love is a tale as old as time. A new miniseries adaptation follows a familiar, underdeveloped character from one of the most enduring classic novels in the history of literature, as she goes on her own journey of self-discovery and learns to love herself. If she happens to find a husband along the way, then that's just a bonus that also satisfies her match-making-obsessed mother.

The 10-episode period drama miniseries "The Other Bennet Sister" premieres Wednesday, May 6, on BritBox. The first three episodes will be available to stream on premiere day, with new episodes dropping weekly after that. "The Other Bennet Sister" is part of BritBox's "Austen Forever" programming, a six-month celebration of the author's 250th birthday on Dec. 16, 2025.

The series is based on the 2020 novel of the same name from author Janice Hadlow, which is itself a sort of sequel to the 1813 Jane Austen novel, "Pride and Prejudice." A beloved book for many generations since its initial publication, "Pride and Prejudice" has been adapted a number of times for film and television, in addition to several continuations of the story and revamped retellings of Lizzie (portrayed in the series by Poppy Gilbert, "Stay Close") and Mr. Darcy (relative newcomer Victor Pilard) from authors inspired by Austen. This series, however, imagines the life of an overlooked Bennet sister.

Ella Bruccoleri ("Down Cemetery Road") stars as Mary Bennet, the middle child of five sisters whose dominant quality in "Pride and Prejudice" is her serious plainness. In "The Other Bennet Sister," Mary gets a more sympathetic characterization as she leads the series. Now less judgmental and moralistic and more headstrong and pragmatic — not unlike her sister Lizzie, really — Mary steps out of the confines of her family and discovers who she truly is on a transformational trip from Longbourn to London.

In the official trailer for the upcoming miniseries, it seems that, with the exception of her genial father, the other members of her family go to great lengths to confirm for Mary her outsider status. An uncomfortable conversation at the dining table over her new spectacles and a disappointed look from her mother as she sets her sights on Mary's very beige attire for an outing make it clear that Mary must overcome her family's low expectations of her and seek a kinder perspective of herself.

Richard E. Grant ("Can You Ever Forgive Me," 2018) is Mary's father, Mr. Bennet, and Ruth Jones ("Gavin & Stacey") stars as Mrs. Bennet. Alongside Gilbert as Lizzie, the rest of the sisters are Maddie Close in her first on-screen role as the eldest Bennet sister, Jane; Molly Wright ("The A Word") as Kitty; and Grace Hogg-Robinson ("Miss Scarlet") as the youngest, Lydia.

Also starring in the miniseries are Indira Varma ("The Night Manager") as Mary's aunt, Mrs. Gardiner; Richard Coyle ("The Chilling Adventures of Sabrina") as Mr. Gardiner; Tanya Reynolds ("Emma," 2020) as the well-connected social darling Caroline Bingley; Donal Finn ("Young Sherlock") as Tom Hayward, a fast friend of Mary's in London; and Varada Sethu ("Andor") as Ann Baxter, another of Mary's friends who has plans for marriage to Tom.

Laurie Davidson ("The Girlfriend") stars as William Ryder, a romantic interest of Mary's. The two meet at a games night set up by the Gardiners before Mary dazzles him with her wit and self-assurance between dances at a ball. A sort of courtship follows, however it is complicated by both Mary's insistence that this visit to London is not explicitly a husband hunt and another suitor with an attractive unavailable quality.

In the trailer, Mary happily accepts a gift of a book from Tom, who promises that it will open her heart. Despite his arrangement with Ann and Mary's connection with William, Tom confesses to Mary, "there is no one I long to talk to like I do you." While Mary navigates the path to her future, her time in London has placed her at a proverbial fork in the road.

"If you are incapable of finding a match, then you shall remain here with me, instead," Mrs. Bennet tells Mary in the trailer, reminding her of the reality of her standing and the high stakes of marriage. With relatively little money to their name and a succession of daughters, the best the Bennets have to offer their children is a chance to marry into wealth. With an unexpected love triangle at her feet, it is up to Mary what her next step will be.

"The Other Bennet Sister" was written by Sarah Quintrell ("The Power") with the exception of the fourth episode, which was written by Maddie Dai ("We Were Dangerous," 2024). Asim Abbasi ("The Famous Five") and Jennifer Sheridan ("Extraordinary") each directed five of the series' 10 episodes.

Don't miss the premiere of "The Other Bennet Sister" when it releases Wednesday, May 6, on BritBox. Catch the first three episodes on premiere day, with the remaining episodes dropping weekly on the streamer.

Attenborough revisits 1976's 'Life On Earth' in retrospective documentary

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

A century of conservationism: Airing in celebration of conservationist David Attenborough's 100th birthday, the feature-length documentary "Life On Earth: Attenborough's Greatest Adventure" airs Wednesday, May 6, on PBS.

Having first appeared on our television screens more than 70 years ago, the great David Attenborough has become one of the most well-known and widely recognized nature broadcasters of all time. With shows such as "Planet Earth," "Prehistoric Planet," "Zoo Quest" and more, Attenborough inspired countless generations of future conservationists by popularizing in-depth, educational nature documentaries.

One of these many endeavors, 1976's "Life on Earth," proved to be one of Attenborough's most ambitious undertakings. Over three years, Attenborough and his team traveled to 40 countries and documented 600 species, utilizing cutting-edge camera technology and techniques — including time-lapse, microphotography and filming speeds of up to 10,000 frames per second — to capture animal activity in ways never seen before. "Life on Earth" sets out to "tell the greatest story in all the world: how life on our planet evolved," says PBS.

Featuring behind-the-scenes insights, interviews with Attenborough and his crew and never-before-seen footage, this newly released, hour-long retrospective hopes to document how the team captured some of the original series' most unforgettable moments — including "a lioness ferociously taking down a wildebeest, the rare moment a male Darwin's frog 'gives birth' by mouth and Attenborough's unforgettable encounter with mountain gorillas in Rwanda, often voted one of the greatest television moments of all time," according to PBS.

"Few series have made an impact the way 'Life on Earth' did, truly reshaping our understanding of the natural world," said Paula Kerger, president and CEO of PBS. "Sir David Attenborough's vision set a standard we're still reaching toward 50 years later. We are so proud to share this new film and to celebrate his unparalleled contribution to our shared understanding of the planet we call home."

Jack Bootle, head of specialist factual commissioning at the BBC, adds: "It's impossible to overstate what Sir David Attenborough has given us. His programs have not only defined science and natural history broadcasting, but they have also changed how we see our planet and our place within it."

"Life On Earth: Attenborough's Greatest Adventure" premieres Wednesday, May 6, on PBS.

Gym, tan, goodbyes: Since its premiere in 2009, "Jersey Shore" has cemented itself as one of the most iconic and quotable reality franchises. Now, after 300 episodes and countless spinoffs, the decades-long cycle of gym visits, tanning trips and laundry loads ends with Season 9 of "Jersey Shore Family Vacation," making its debut Thursday, May 7, on MTV.

Pauly D ("The Pauly D Project"), Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi ("Jersey Shore"), Mike "The Situation" Sorrentino ("Marriage Boot Camp: Reality Stars"), Ronnie Ortiz-Magro ("Ex on the Beach"), Jenni "JWoww" Farley ("Snooki & JWoww"), Vinny Guadagnino ("All-Star Shore"), Deena Cortese ("Jersey Shore"), Angelina Pivarnick ("Couples Therapy") and Sammi "Sweetheart" Giancola ("Snooki & JWoww") are all set to appear.

"This farewell season marks the culmination of a franchise that entertained millions with major life milestones, laugh-out-loud chaos and the unfiltered chemistry that defined an era of reality television," reads a description by MTV's parent company, Paramount. "The 'Shore' family is going bigger than ever, celebrating the moments that made this franchise a cultural phenomenon."

This upcoming season follows the Jersey stars as they embrace sobriety, parenthood, career changes, benchmark birthdays, new relationships, sold-out shows and more — including, of course, a few outrageous parties.

One highlight of the season is said to be Sammi's upcoming wedding to boyfriend Justin May, as the 39-year-old can be seen preparing for her nuptials alongside her friends in a recently shared sneak peek.

"I could cry right now," Sammi tearfully says, before sharing one more surprise with her housemates: "I'm pregnant."

However, her ex-boyfriend, Ronnie, seems to be far less than thrilled about his former girlfriend's new relationship. Ronnie and Sammi shared an on-again, off-again romance from 2009-16, but Ronnie's pain rears its head at the most inconvenient of times, as Sammi plans to say her "I do" on her ex's birthday.

"It's kinda f— up," Ronnie says in the trailer. "I don't wanna get out of bed."

Acting as a tribute to the friendships, relationships, inside jokes, dramatic conversations and unforgettable moments brought to us by "Jersey Shore," the epic, 18-episode final season of "Jersey Shore Family Vacation" premieres Thursday, May 7, on MTV.

"Remarkably Bright Creatures" (2026)

An adaptation of Shelby Van Pelt's debut novel, "Remarkably Bright Creatures" arrives Friday, May 8, on Netflix. Tova Sullivan (Sally Field, "Forrest Gump," 1994) keeps to herself, working long nights at the Sowell Bay Aquarium, where mopping floors and caring for sea creatures briefly dull the pain of losing her son, Erik (Brandon McEwan, "Alter Boys"), after only his boat washed ashore 30 years ago. During her late shifts, she forms a close bond with Marcellus (voiced by Alfred Molina, "Spider-Man 2," 2004), a perceptive octopus who watches those around him with surprising insight. But when Tova meets Cameron (Lewis Pullman, "Top Gun: Maverick," 2022), a drifter who lands a job at the aquarium, she soon begins to suspect their lives, as well as Marcellus', may be intertwined in more ways than one — with all roads leading back to her son's 1989 disappearance. Also starring Colm Meaney ("Star Trek: Deep Space Nine"), Joan Chen ("The Last Emperor," 1987), Kathy Baker ("Picket Fences"), Beth Grant ("Little Miss Sunshine," 2006) and Sofia

Set in the early 1990s, Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is fighting a losing battle against the brutal drug cartels flooding Britain's borders. Desperate times birth a radical solution as ordinary civil servants are plucked from their desk jobs, given new identities and are sent on a top-secret mission to infiltrate the country's most notorious drug gangs. Starring Steve Coogan ("Stan & Ollie," 2018) as Don, the seasoned head of operations, and Tom Burke ("The Souvenir," 2019) as Guy, "Legends" tells the remarkable true story of ordinary people plunged into the criminal underworld. As they're forced to balance their double lives, they must earn the trust of ruthless traffickers, where one slip-up means certain death. With episodes directed by Brady Hood ("Top Boy") and Julian Holmes ("The Boys"), the cast also features Hayley Squires ("I, Daniel Blake," 2016),

Tom Burke, Jasmine Blackborow, Steve Coogan, Aml Ameen and Hayley Squires in "Legends"

"Worst Ex Ever" - Season 2

Blumhouse's "Worst Ever" franchise continues with the Season 2 premiere of "Worst Ex Ever," streaming on Netflix Wednesday, May 6. Exploring the many ways that relationships can turn, from insidiously slow-building issues to shocking betrayal and violence, this series explores the real-life stories on individuals on the other side of truly terrible relationships. Through testimonials, bodycam footage and animated reenactments, viewers witness shocking and horrifying stories of betrayal, violence and deceit that are at the center of monstrous past relationships. From Blumhouse Television and ITV America, "Worst Ex Ever" is produced by executive producers Jason Blum ("Get Out," 2017), Chris McCumber ("Totally Killer," 2023), Gretchen Palek ("Chefs vs. Wild"), Jordana Hochman ("Queer Eye") and Cynthia Childs ("The Real L Word"). "Song of the Samurai" - Season 1

Based on the Japanese manga series written by Shinya Umemura ("Record of Ragnarok"), Season 1 of "Song of the Samurai" premieres Saturday, May 9, available on Prime Video via the HBO Max channel. Set in Kyoto during the final years of Japan's shogunate, the series follows the rise of the Shinsengumi, a samurai force assembled to maintain order across the city. At the center of the story is Toshizo, played by Yuki Yamada ("Tokyo Revengers," 2021), tracing his journey from street brawler to legendary leader of the swordsman group, where he meets Isami Kondo (Nobuyuki Suzuki, "The Shadow Strays," 2024) and Soji Okita (Kanata Hosoda, "Bullet Train Explosion," 2025) and forms a brotherhood that will be tested through loyalty, betrayal and war as the old shogunate crumbles. Directed by Kazutaka Watanabe ("Showtime 7," 2025), the cast also includes Ayano Go ("The Light Shines Only There," 2014) and Kento Nakajima ("Concordia"), with Akira Morii ("Kill Bill: Vol. 1," 2003) serving as a producer.

"M.I.A." - Season 1

Revenge knows no limits in Peacock's new series, "M.I.A.," premiering Thursday, May 7, and available on Prime Video via the Peacock Premium Plus channel. The series stars Shannon Gisela ("Strip Law") as Etta, a young woman who has long been tied to her family's drug-running operation in the Florida Keys. But when a devastating tragedy destroys the business and leaves most of her family dead, Etta is forced into Miami's neon-lit criminal underworld. Driven by revenge, she sets out to hunt the men responsible for the attack, even as they close in on her. By Etta's side are her new friends, Lovely (Brittany Adebumola, "4400") and Stanley (Dylan T. Jackson, "City on Fire"), bringing together Latinos and Haitians, two of the largest communities in Miami. "M.I.A." hails from writer and executive producer Bill Dubuque, who previously co-created the Netflix series "Ozark." Karen Campbell ("Outlander") will serve as executive producer and showrunner, with "High Potential's" Alethea Jones directing the season.

"Citadel" - Season 2

Three years after the debut of its first season, "Citadel" returns with seven brand-new episodes, premiering on Prime Video this Wednesday, May 6. After Season 1's shocking twist ending, this second season now finds Mason (Richard Madden, "Game of Thrones"), Nadia (Priyanka Chopra Jonas, "The Matrix Resurrections," 2021) and Bernard (Stanley Tucci, "Spotlight," 2015) in the process of finding fresh recruits as a terrifying new threat emerges. Together, they launch a globe-spanning mission to end a powerful conspiracy — one that holds the power to reshape humanity. "With blockbuster action, shocking betrayals, and an expanded ensemble of mysterious agents, the stakes have never been higher — and anyone could be friend or foe," reads Amazon's official synopsis. Will Mason's regained memories put a strain between him and Nadia? Can fledgling agents be trusted with long-held secrets? From creators Josh Appelbaum ("Heads of State," 2025), Bryan Oh ("The Recruit") and David Weil ("Citadel: Honey Bunny") — and with episodes directed by Joe Russo ("Avengers: Endgame," 2019) and Greg Yaitanes ("House of the Dragon") — "Citadel" also stars Lesley Manville ("Phantom Thread," 2017) and Ashleigh Cummings ("The Goldfinch," 2019), alongside Season 2 newcomers Matt Berry ("What We Do in the Shadows"), Jack Reynor ("Transformers: Age of Extinction," 2014), Gabriel Leone ("The Secret Agent," 2025), Lina El Arabi ("Furies"), Merle Dandridge ("The Electric State," 2025) and Rayna Vallandingham ("Cobra Kai").

Pair of pitmasters

Culinary couple Flay and Williamson keep the romance hot in new season 'BBQ Brawl'

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Before the series makes its return to Food Network on Monday, May 11, join chefs Bobby Flay ("Beat Bobby Flay") and Michael Symon ("Symon's Dinners Cooking Out") as they search for the country's best barbecue cooks in seasons 1-6 of "BBQ Brawl," now available to stream on HBO Max.

Led by the aforementioned celebrity chefs, this saucy, summer-loving series joins Flay and Symon as they mentor teams of respected pitmasters, leading their mentees through a myriad of increasingly difficult, barbecue-centred challenges. Together, they lead their team through regional menus, rib-eye challenges, fish-forward feasts, international favorites and even "barbecue of the future," sharing their creations with all-star judges such as Brooke Williamson ("Bobby's Triple Threat"), Jet Tila ("Tournament of Champions"), Carson Kressley ("RuPaul's Drag Race") and more.

Throughout the seasons, fans are introduced to new captains — like Maneet Chauhan ("Chopped") — new locations, new teammates and more as "BBQ Brawl" keeps the fires of competition burning from episode 1 to episode 52.

Bobby Flay and Michael Symon of "BBQ Brawl"

For those interested in what comes next, the upcoming return of "BBQ Brawl" kicks off the series' seventh season, seeing the return of captains Flay and Chauhan as they lead an impressive group of 12 pitmasters through nine weeks of challenges at Star Hill Ranch in Austin, Texas.

Formerly a judge on the series, Williamson will return for Season 7 as well, working alongside newly minted boyfriend Flay — who announced her role while chatting with People at the South Beach Wine & Food Festival in February.

"Brooke has been a judge since almost the beginning, the second season, and she's always wanted to be one of the mentors and cook on the show, and there was never sort of an opportunity for that," Flay said.

"But now, our rule between us is that we can't judge each other, because how can we judge each other?" he continued. "We can compete against each other in friendly ways. She's becoming one of the captains on 'BBQ Brawl,' so I have to actually compete against her. And she, as you might imagine, is very competitive, so she's tough to beat."

Watch the couple's "slow burn" romance sizzle — and familiarize yourself with the best of the best in the world of 'cue, with seasons 1-6 of "BBQ Brawl" now available to stream on HBO Max.

Wuthering Heights

In 18th-century England, a mysterious orphan, Heathcliff (Cooper), is brought to live at Wuthering Heights. He forms a deep, almost inseparable bond with Catherine (Mellington), aka "Cathy," but their relationship becomes strained by class differences and ambition. As they grow older, Cathy (Robbie) chooses to marry the wealthy Edgar Linton (Latif) for security and social status, even though she is deeply connected to Heathcliff (Elordi). Heartbroken and believing himself rejected, Heathcliff leaves. Years later, he returns rich and determined to take revenge. He buys Wuthering Heights, manipulates those around him and rekindles a toxic, obsessive affair with the married Cathy. Director: Emerald Fennell. Stars: Margot Robbie, Jacob Elordi, Hong

Clean and mouthwatering, the finish carries persistent citrus and green apple with a dry, mineral-tinged close. It lingers at moderate length without any bitterness or excess weight. On entry, the palate is immediately zesty with lime zest and crisp Granny Smith apple. The mid-palate broadens into green papaya and white nectarine, layered over pink grapefruit pith and a subtle sedimentary minerality. White peach rounds out the profile with a juicy, textured mouthfeel that stays vibrant throughout.

“We Bury The Dead” (2025)

When the detonation of an experimental weapon brings the dead back to life, who will be left to clean up the mess? Written and directed by Zak Hilditch (“These Final Hours,” 2013), “We Bury The Dead” makes its streaming debut on Hulu this Friday, May 8, starring Daisy Ridley (Daisy Ridley, “Star Wars: Episode VII - The Force Awakens,” 2015) as volunteer Ava Newman. When news first spread that victims of a deadly blast in Tasmania were slowly coming back to life, Ava’s first thought was of her husband, Mitch (Matt Whelan, “Narcos”), whose business trip put him right in the line of fire. In order to find him – alive, dead or undead – Ava agrees to join a military crew sent to retrieve and dispose of the countless corpses, only to start a mission of her own alongside a fellow volunteer, Clay (Brenton Thwaites, “Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Men Tell No Tales,” 2017), and a soldier, Riley (Mark Coles Smith, “Last Cab to Darwin,” 2015). Chloe Hurst (“Andi Mack”), Kym Jackson (“Born to Lose,” 2026), Dan Paris (“The Heights”), Deanna Cooney (“Love Me Lex”), Nicola Bartlett (“Parallax”), Kingsley Judd (“Hounds of Love,” 2016) and Salme Geransar (“Mystery Road: Origin”) also star.

Daisy Ridley stars in “We Bury the Dead”

“Hallow Road” (2025)

Starring Rosamund Pike (“Gone Girl,” 2014) and Matthew Rhys (“A Beautiful Day in the Neighborhood,” 2019), the gripping family drama, “Hallow Road,” is now available on Hulu. In the middle of the night, paramedic Maddie (Pike) and her husband, Frank (Rhys), receive a frantic phone call from their 18-year-old daughter, Alice (Megan McDonnell, “The Rainmaker”). Alice – who had run off with her father’s car earlier in the night – was in an accident, having struck another girl while driving down the remote and winding Hallow Road. Alice needs her parents’ help to keep the girl alive – but as the night goes on, Maddie and Frank only get more and more involved in their daughter’s mistake. Eventually, secrets are revealed that threaten to tear the family apart once and for all. Directed by Babak Anvari (“Under the Shadow,” 2016), and with a screenplay written by William Gillies (“Shoal,” 2020), “Hallow Road” also stars Tadhg Murphy (“The Running Man,” 2025), Stephen Jones (“Northern Lights”) and Paul Tylak (“Harry Wild”).

“The Other Boleyn Girl” (2008)

Based on the eponymous novel by author Philippa Gregory – and brought to life by director Justin Chadwick (“Brothers Under Fire,” 2026) – 2008’s “The Other Boleyn Girl” is now available to stream on Hulu. This star-studded period drama transports viewers to 16th-century England, where King Henry VIII (Eric Bana, “King Arthur: Legend of the Sword,” 2017) sits on the royal throne. Desperately in need of a male heir, Henry finds himself a match in Mary Boleyn (Scarlett Johansson, “Lost in Translation,” 2003), who is quick to become pregnant. All seems well, until Henry finds himself enchanted by Mary’s tantalizing sister, Anne (Natalie Portman, “Black Swan,” 2010), who seeks to earn the king’s affections for herself. With a screenplay written by Peter Morgan (“The Crown”), “The Other Boleyn Girl” also stars the likes of Jim Sturgess (“Across the Universe,” 2007), Kristin Scott Thomas (“The English Patient,” 1996), David Morrissey (“The Walking Dead”), Benedict Cumberbatch (“Star Trek Into Darkness,” 2013), Ana Torrent (“The Nest,” 1980), Eddie Redmayne (“The Theory of Everything,” 2014) and Juno Temple (“Ted Lasso”), among others.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Kelly Reilly guest starred in "Poirot"

before-they-were-stars spotting.

The series, which started in the U.K. but aired over here on both PBS and A&E, aired 13 seasons across 24 years. In that time, it gave a huge number of actors an early leg up in their careers — stars of today such as Michael Fassbender ("Prometheus," 2012), Emily Blunt ("Edge of Tomorrow," 2014) and, yes, future "Yellowstone" lead Kelly Reilly.

When her episode, titled "Sad Cypress" (adapting the Agatha Christie novel of the same name), aired in 2003, Reilly had only appeared in a bunch of similar projects — guest roles in British TV shows. It's worth noting at this point that she is, herself, English — this may surprise people who only know her as "Yellowstone's" hard-as-nails Montana rancher Beth Dutton.

Reilly had just done a supporting role in her first major film a year earlier — and that was still a relatively unknown European art-house dramedy, 2002's "The Spanish Apartment."

She was still a couple of years away from real, mainstream exposure, first in the 2005 big-screen adaptation of "Pride & Prejudice," then a few years later in the 2009 blockbuster "Sherlock Holmes," playing Mary Morstan, future wife of the legendary detective's (Robert Downey Jr., "Iron Man," 2008) companion Dr. John Watson (Jude Law, "Closer," 2004).

Q: When is Martin McDonagh's next movie coming out? I loved "The Banshees of Inisherin."

A: Though it might seem like a long time for fans, Irish auteur Martin McDonagh ("Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri," 2017) would argue that his next film is coming out right on time.

When his next movie, "Wild Horse Nine," is released this November, it will have been four years since his last, critical darling 2022's "The Banshees of Inisherin."

If anything, McDonagh is actually getting more prolific. There were five-year gaps between his three previous films, with "Inisherin" coming out in 2022, "Three Billboards" in 2017 and "Seven Psychopaths" in 2012.

This new one promises to be just as buzzy as those. Indeed, the trailer had only been out for a matter of hours when GoldDerby.com, a website devoted to tracking screen awards, referred to "Wild Horse Nine" as "McDonagh's next Oscar contender."

It certainly has the cast for it. It stars famed actor's actor John Malkovich ("In the Line of Fire," 1993) and frequent collaborator Sam Rockwell ("Moon," 2009), the latter of whom won the supporting-star Oscar for "Three Billboards." "Wild Horse Nine" also continues McDonagh's penchant for setting his films in rare locations. Having previous gone from old Europe (2008's "In Bruges"), to rural America ("Three Billboards"), to even-more-rural Ireland ("Banshees"), he now drops his stars all the way out on Easter Island in the southeastern Pacific Ocean, with Malkovich and Rockwell playing CIA agents dispatched there on a case in the early 1970s.
