The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

OK. It's 2026 and we have some breaking election news coming out of the great state of North Korea, because with all precincts reporting, we're ready to call North Korea's Supreme People's Assembly election and incumbent madman Kim Jong-un has won with 99.93% of the vote. Congratulations to a friend of the show. He has done so many cold opens for us. Thank you, sir. We may have our differences, but you got to hand it to him. He really rallied support with his stirring campaign slogan, "I have your family."

The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon

March Madness kicks off this week, and I read that 100 million brackets are expected to be filled out. We actually have an office pool here, and the stakes are pretty high. This year, the winner gets one gallon of gas.

Today [March 16], [President] Trump claimed that a former U.S. president recently told him that he wished he had taken action against Iran but didn't say which one. Trump was like, "I won't say who, but we had a great conversation in my bathroom mirror."

I read that the Justice Department just ditched their requirement that prosecutors have one year of experience and can now hire them right out of law school. Yeah, no experience necessary. It's not good when being a federal prosecutor has the same requirement as a cashier at Lids.

Jimmy Kimmel Live!

We are directly across the street from the Dolby Theater where last night [March 15] the stars were out for the 98th Academy Awards. Monday after the Oscars is one of the weirdest days of the year around here. It's like Cinderella when the clock strikes midnight. Everything turns into rats and rags. That's how I would describe our neighborhood. It's raggy and ratty out there.

I'm not sure how many people know that the Oscars are held in a mall. You guys know the Dolby Theater is in a mall. There's a Foot Locker. There's a Johnny Rockets. Last night [March 15], Barbra Streisand was like this close to a Hot Topic store.

Late Night With Seth Meyers

The Los Angeles subway system recently unveiled the most unusual items from its lost and found, including a case filled with VHS tapes. "I forgot those even existed," said residents about L.A.'s subway trains.

A couple featured on the Real Housewives franchise was arrested last week after they allegedly stole over $3,000 worth of items from a Publix grocery store in Florida. In their defense, that's like seven eggs right now.

The U.S. Postal Service has unveiled new forever stamps that feature five different lowrider cars. So if you love lowriders and you collect stamps, you might be the only one.

Expanding the roster: Romano joins Season 2 'Running Point'

By Dana Simpson
TV Media

In October 2019, the NBA.com news site ran a piece titled "Women impacting NBA now more than ever." The article, written by Associated Press journalist Kyle Hightower, shines a spotlight on the "recent trend" of seeing more women who are "directly impacting every aspect of the game — from broadcasting booths, to officiating, coaching on the sidelines, front-office executives to ownership."

In the article, basketball hall-of-famer and former NBA/WNBA coach Nancy Lieberman makes a point of noting that women in professional basketball is "not a fad" or a fluke, rather "it's opportunities going to very accomplished women who have given their life to the game."

The Netflix series "Running Point" amplifies this desire that many women have for success in the sports industry while also signaling the sexist and assumptions-based hurdles she must jump on her way to the top. Created by "The Studio" actor and "Celebrity Jeopardy!" champion Ike Barinholtz, six-time Emmy nominee Mindy Kaling ("The Office") and "Only Murders in the Building" producer Elaine Ko, the comedy series led by Kate Hudson ("How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days," 2003) returns Thursday, April 23, for a second season on Netflix.

As a televised tale about the unlikely success of a newcomer leading a sports team or franchise, "Running Point" has a debt to pay to the success of the Apple TV series "Ted Lasso." The story of an American football coach, played by Jason Sudeikis ("We're the Millers," 2013), who is hired to run an English football (aka soccer) team in the U.K., "Ted Lasso" paved the way for "Running Point" in much the same way that the NBA paved the way for the WNBA (although it took Netflix only five years — not 50 — to introduce a sports comedy with a female counterpart to the kooky mustachioed coach).

"Running Point," as a series, follows Isla Gordon (Hudson), who, "overlooked her whole life, is appointed [p]resident of the LA Waves basketball team, a family business, when her brother enters rehab. She aims to prove she is the right choice despite skepticism."

Saturday, April 18, 2026

Justin Theroux in "Running Point"

And while the woman-must-prove-herself narrative is a dime a dozen in film and television (even the highly lauded HBO series "Succession" had an ongoing arc about the rise and fall of the Roy family's only female heir, Shiv, played by "All Her Fault's" Sarah Snook), the women of "Running Point" are empowering in that they are not asking to be included; they are taking space, whether the men around them like it or not.

Unfortunately, in Season 2, it appears that one man in particular, Isla's newly rehabilitated brother Cam (Justin Theroux, "The Mosquito Coast"), is doing everything he can to interrupt his sister's unexpected success.

"Isla Gordon is no longer the surprise choice to lead the Los Angeles Waves, she's the one everyone is watching," reads the series' official synopsis. "With the franchise finally rebounding after last year's scandal, Isla is determined to prove she's not just keeping the seat warm for her brother Cam. What she doesn't know is that Cam is quietly maneuvering behind the scenes to reclaim his post, turning every misstep into ammunition."

As she tries to balance the pressure of running a franchise with devoting time to her personal life, every decision on and off the court counts."

The feminist bend to the series is no surprise, given the involvement of co-creator Kaling, who has positioned herself as a feminist throughout her career, particularly with regard to "The Mindy Project," which she deemed an "unconsciously feminist" series. This does not mean all the women in "Running Point" are perfect, of course. Instead, the show is simply focused on creating a world where the same access to opportunities is provided to all genders — both on-screen and behind the scenes.

"I'm incredibly grateful for [Mindy]," series co-star Brenda Song ("The Social Network," 2010) shared in a March 2025 episode of TheWrap.com's podcast, "UnWrapped." "She really goes out of her way to create opportunities for women like me, women like you — women whose stories need to be told. She wants those stories to be out in the world."

Song returns to "Running Point" Season 2 as LA Waves chief of staff Ali Lee, who also happens to be Isla's best friend. Also returning from the main cast are Drew Tarver ("The Other Two") as Isla's younger half-brother and Waves CFO Sandy Gordon; Scott MacArthur ("The Righteous Gemstones") as Ness Gordon, Waves GM and Isla's older brother; Fabrizio Guido ("Mr. Iglesias") as Jackie Moreno, the Gordons' newest half-brother; Chet Hanks ("Your Honor") as Waves point guard Travis Bugg; and Toby Sandeman ("The Game") as Waves star player Marcus Winfield.

Uche Agada ("Rise," 2022), who plays Waves rookie Dyson Gibbs, returns as a main character in Season 2, while comedic actor Ray Romano ("Everybody Loves Raymond") joins the show's recurring cast as Coach Norm. Other new recurring characters include Ken Marino ("The State"), Tommy Dewey ("Casual"), Jake Pickering ("Hollywood"), Richa Moorjani ("Never Have I Ever"), Blake Anderson ("Workaholics"), Duby Maduegbunam ("Caught Up") and Aliyah Turner ("Power Book III: Rising Kanan"). Max Greenfield ("New Girl"), Jon Glaser ("Inside Amy Schumer") and Scott Evans ("Barbie," 2023) also return for the sophomore season.

Don't miss your shot to see a brand-new season from the jump. "Running Point" Season 2 premieres Thursday, April 23, on Netflix.

Coming in for a Landry: Time-traveling family reunites one last time in 'The Way Home'

Andie MacDowell, Sadie Laflamme-Snow and Chyler Leigh in "The Way Home"

By Sarah Passingham
TV Media

Wishing to turn back time is a dream for many. Revisiting events of your own past or experiencing family history from your own perspective is the stuff of fantasy. For one family, the ability to step back into the past is a reality. The beloved time-traveling Hallmark family drama "The Way Home" returns to the network for its fourth and final season premiere Sunday, April 19. Stream episodes the next day on Hallmark+.

Set in the fictional Canadian farm town of Port Haven, New Brunswick, "The Way Home" follows three generations of a once-estranged family brought together again by circumstance and bonded through the discovery of magical abilities. The Landry women each have their own stories of unfinished business that only a dip in an enchanted pond with a portal to the past can resolve.

Kat (Chyler Leigh, "Grey's Anatomy") had the rug pulled out from under her, finding herself facing divorce and unemployment when the series began. After spending more than two decades without any contact with her mother, Del (Andie MacDowell, "Maid"), Kat took her daughter, Alice (Sadie Laflamme-Snow, "Slasher"), to meet her grandmother for the first time and settle into a new life back in the place where she started.

Uprooted from her life, expelled from her school and processing the news of her parents' split, Alice stumbled across the forest magic that propels the rest of the series. A jump into a special pond nearby her grandmother's farm sent Alice back to 1999, where she befriended her mother's teenage self (Alex Hook, "I Am Frankie"). Her trips back in time — secret at first but quickly discovered by Kat — help her family heal the broken bonds from years of estrangement and even lead to some supernatural mending.

Over the first three seasons of the time-hopping series, the three Landry women developed a deeper understanding of each other, a long-lost family member returned to the present and Kat ignited a spark between herself and one of her childhood best friends. Elliot (Evan Williams, "Versailles"), who grew up next door to the Landry family, remained a family friend while Kat lived her life far from Port Haven. A physics teacher at the local high school, Elliot is the only one outside of the family who knows the secret of the pond.

However, he may not be outside the family for much longer. In last season's finale, Kat and Elliot had a conversation about the future. The couple decided they would just love each other as they are for the time being, until Elliot had fine-tuned the perfect proposal.

This season on "The Way Home," per Hallmark, "Alice is about to graduate high school, Kat and Elliot dream of the next steps for their relationship while Del realizes she will soon be an empty-nester again."

The series was co-created by mother-daughter team Heather Conkie ("Road to Avonlea") and Alexandra Clarke ("MsLabelled") with producer Marly Reed ("V.C. Andrews' Heaven"). Executive producers Conkie and Clarke, who both worked on the long-running Canadian family drama "Heartland" — Conkie as showrunner and Clarke as a writer — spoke to People about what's coming next for fans of "The Way Home."

The upcoming season "is all about new beginnings and uncertain futures," the co-creators explained. Conkie and Clarke added, "on the cusp of Alice's high school graduation, our three strong-willed Landry ladies face more independent next chapters." Viewers can also expect to see another new time jump. The pond has already taken members of the Landry family to integral points in its history from the 1990s, 1970s and the 1800s.

This time, the time-hoppers are welcomed by the Roaring Twenties. In the official first look of the upcoming season, Kat takes a dip in the pond and breaks through to the 1920s to meet a member of the Landry family who "is waiting to propel our characters into harrowing new adventures in their quest to seek answers to mysteries still unsolved," according to Conkie and Clarke.

Coloring in family stories with trips to the past have deepened the Landry women's relationships with each other, but going back in time has also brought the family closer together in a literal sense. In the second season, Kat visited the 1800s to bring back her brother, Jacob (Spencer Macpherson, "School Spirits"), who had been missing and presumed dead in the present day for over 20 years.

It was his disappearance, coupled with the death of her father, that sent Kat out on her own, away from Del and Port Haven all those years ago. Jacob has returned to his present-day family, easing some of Del's heartbreak, but the trailer suggests he needs his own space again. Just when everyone had finally made their way back home, it might be time for everyone to set out again. "You need to let me go," Jacob tells Del in the trailer, standing next to a bus that looks like it's heading out of town.

Don't miss the start of the final season of "The Way Home" when it premieres Sunday, April 19, on Hallmark. Stream episodes the next day with Hallmark+.

Henry Winkler returns for Season 2 of 'Hazardous History'

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Hazards in hindsight: Relive the so-called "good ol' days," as "Happy Days" star Henry Winkler returns for Season 2 of "Hazardous History With Henry Winkler," premiering on History this Sunday, April 19.

Once upon a time, kids cooked creepy crawlers in melting ovens. They twisted their ankles, stubbed their toes and defied gravity with moon shoes. They spent afternoons tossing lawn darts and they drove around in wood-paneled station wagons all piled in the back — without seatbelts, of course. Led by Winkler, this lighthearted docuseries revisits a time when safety was often a second thought.

As Winkler himself puts it in the newly released promo, it was a time when "thrill came before safety."

Last season, "Hazardous History" explored everything from dangerous toys and daredevil playground antics to disastrous methods of transportation, whether it be by exploding cars or blown-up blimps. To kick off this second season, Winkler discusses over-the-top fads from the past, reminiscing on oddball fashion trends, unexpected pets and more.

As History's description reads: "Remember when 'everybody's doing it' was reason enough to dive in headfirst? From gravity-defying flagpole sitting and phone booth cramming, to pet skunks and goldfish gulpers, we reveal the wildest crazes that once swept the nation. These over-the-top obsessions were risky and impossible to resist. It's a jaw-dropping, head-shaking trip back to the fads that pushed the limits and made our hazardous history a must-see mayhem."

In a trailer released for the upcoming premiere, Winkler lists off a few memories of his own. "Nobody wore helmets when cramming into a phone booth," he says. "Kids weren't wearing any gloves when their toy ovens burned them. Why would they?"

Later in the trailer, Winkler even references "ostrich riding," saying: "Yes, that's a real thing we did."

Executive produced by Steve Ascher ("The Unbelievable with Dan Aykroyd"), Chet Fenster ("Love Island USA"), Richard Foster ("Secrets Declassified with David Duchovny"), Jim Pasquarella ("The Mega-Brands That Built America") and Matt Pearl ("Mysteries Unearthed with Danny Trejo"), alongside Winkler himself, Season 2 of "Hazardous History With Henry Winkler" premieres this Sunday, April 19, on History.

All-star castaways: Superstar survivalist Bear Grylls — known for series such as "Man vs. Wild," "The World's Toughest Race" and "Running Wild With Bear Grylls" — is back for more, taking celebrities on unforgettable treks through the wilderness in "Bear Grylls Is Running Wild," premiering Tuesday, April 21, on Fox.

This star-studded series — which first premiered as "Running Wild With Bear Grylls" on NBC in 2014 before returning to National Geographic as "Running Wild With Bear Grylls: The Challenge" — is ready to make its return once again, finding the legendary British adventurer sharing life-saving survival tips with celebrity guests as they brave it in the wild for an uninterrupted 48-hour period, share vulnerable parts of themselves and face their fears along the way.

According to Fox, the upcoming season will take Bear and his guests to "Norway's glacial wilderness, the legendary mountains of Eryri in Wales, the Arctic rainforest, vast canyonlands and brutal desert terrain."

"The celebrities will be pushed to the limits tackling glacier crossings, canyon descents, high-risk extractions and an adrenaline-charged freefall from 11,000 feet, into an adventure along the Irish Sea," the synopsis promises.

These celebrities, according to the network, will include Elizabeth Banks ("The Hunger Games," 2012), Rhys Darby ("Flight of the Conchords"), Colman Domingo ("Sing Sing," 2023), Tiffany Haddish ("Night School," 2018), Matthew McConaughey ("Dallas Buyers Club," 2013), Colson "Machine Gun Kelly" Baker ("Bad Things"), Michelle Monaghan ("The White Lotus") and Uma Thurman ("Pulp Fiction," 1994).

The president of Fox Television Network, Michael Thorn, says: "Bear has a rare ability to push people beyond their comfort zones in ways that are both visceral and emotionally revealing, and this new season raises the bar — from breathtaking locations to the remarkable guests joining him on these unforgettable journeys."

From starting fires and sanitizing water to tackling falls from 1,000

storeys high, see celebrities tackle it all in "Bear Grylls Is Running Wild," an all-new take on Bear's beloved series, airing Tuesday, April 21, on Fox.

Written by Jeremy Robbins ("The Purge"), with executive producers Theron, Peter Chernin ("Rise of the Planet of the Apes," 2011) and Jenno Topping ("Hidden Figures," 2016), "Apex" also stars Eric Bana ("The Time Traveler's Wife," 2009), Caitlin Stasey ("I, Frankenstein," 2014), Bessie Holland ("Wakefield") and Zac Garred ("Bring Him to Me," 2023).

"Stranger Things: Tales From '85" - Season 1

Just when life in Hawkins seems to return to normal, a new nightmare stirs below the surface when Season 1 of "Stranger Things: Tales From '85" premieres Thursday, April 23, on Netflix.

This animated "Stranger Things" spinoff returns to Hawkins, Indiana, in the winter of 1985 as snow blankets the town and the horrors of the Upside Down are finally fading. Town heroes Eleven (Brooklyn Davey Norstedt, "We Crashed"), Mike (Luca Diaz, "Erin & Aaron"), Will (Benjamin Plessala, "Wylde Pak"), Dustin (Braxton Quinney, "You Can't Take My Daughter," 2020), Lucas (Elisha "EJ" Williams, "The Wonder Years") and Max (Jolie Hoang-Rappaport, "Watchmen") have settled back into a normal life of Dungeons and Dragons, snowball fights and quiet days. But beneath the ice, something terrifying has awakened. Now, this misfit group of teens must race to uncover the darkness beneath the town's surface before their world turns upside down once more. Created by Eric Robles ("The Grim Adventures of Billy and Mandy"), "Stranger Things: Tales From '85" is written and executive produced by Matt and Ross Duffer ("Stranger Things").

"From" - Season 4

As the town's darkest secrets begin to surface, uncovering them comes with a deadly price. From creator John Griffin ("Crater," 2023) and showrunner Jeff Pinkner ("Lost"), "From" returns Sunday, April 19, with Season 4 on MGM+, available on Prime Video. Directed by Jack Bender ("Game of Thrones"), the new season continues to follow the residents of a nightmarish town that traps all those who enter. Last season took a darker turn with the arrival of the Man in Yellow (Douglas E. Hughes, "The Fight Machine," 2022), who brought new horrors, including Jim's (Eion Bailey, "Once Upon a Time") death, while Julie (Hannah Cheramy, "The Hollow Child," 2017) struggled to change her father's fate through her newfound ability to time travel. Season 4 follows the residents as their search for answers unlocks even darker, more dangerous secrets that threaten to make their nightmare even worse. Returning this season are Catalina Sandino Moreno ("Ballerina," 2025) as

Lobster with Longoria

Actress Eva Longoria eats through France in brand-new series

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Join award-winning actress, producer and activist Eva Longoria ("Desperate Housewives") as she embarks on an epic culinary journey through France in "Eva Longoria: Searching for France," airing Sunday, April 19, on CNN. "A devoted Francophile whose career has taken her to France countless times, Longoria now goes deeper, savoring the traditions, innovations and regional flavors that have defined French cuisine for centuries," the network's description reads. "Along the way she uncovers the history that shaped it, from royal courts and monastic vineyards to the regional communities that turned local ingredients into enduring culinary traditions."

Following Longoria's series set in Mexico and Spain, this latest endeavor aims to highlight France's culinary history, regional specialties and fine dining traditions. According to CNN, Longoria will try flavorsome bouillabaisse in Provence, fluffy frog legs mouseline in Alsace, braised boeuf bourguignon in Burgundy, buttery blue lobster in Brittany, beefy Bordelaise sauce in Bordeaux and more.

During a two-episode extravaganza in Paris, Longoria samples

fresh oysters, indulges in a decadent meal beside the River Seine and even samples creations by star chefs like Nina Metayer, Cedric Grolet and Mickael Reydellet of La Parisienne.

"France has defined how the world approaches fine dining, and its commitment to craft, paired with a relentless spirit of innovation, has kept its cuisine at the forefront of modern gastronomy," Longoria claims. "With 'Searching for France,' we had the chance to spend real time with the chefs, artisans and families that both safeguard and evolve that extraordinary legacy. We're proud to continue our partnership with CNN to explore France's culinary heritage at the scale it commands, and to bring audiences inside the history and vision shaping how the world understands taste."

"This is my dream job: traveling the world and eating. To be able to do it in one of my favorite countries — how can life get any better?" Longoria says in a series' sneak peek.

With two new episodes premiering weekly, "Eva Longoria: Searching for France" airs a new episode Sunday, April 19, on CNN.

28 Years Later: The Bone Temple

Spike (Williams) is a young survivor who is captured and drawn into a bizarre and violent cult led by the unhinged Sir Lord Jimmy Crystal (O'Connell). Within his group, which is known for its ritualistic and sadistic behavior, Spike is forced to navigate a world in which the infected are no longer the only threat as human savagery has become just as dangerous. At the same time, Dr. Ian Kelson (Finnes), a grief-stricken former doctor, is building a haunting memorial known as the "Bone Temple" to honor the dead. His work takes a strange turn when he forms an unexpected connection with Samson (Lewis-Parry), a powerful "Alpha" infected, hinting at the possibility of understanding, or even changing, the virus itself. As Spike's path within the cult and Kelson's experiments with the infected move toward a collision, notions of belief, power and survival intertwine.

Director: Nia DaCosta. Stars: Ralph Fiennes, Jack O'Connell, Alfie Williams, Erin Kellyman, Chi Lewis-Parry. 2026. 109 min. Horror.

"Nikki Glaser: Good Girl" (2026)

Nikki Glaser is proving that a "good girl" is just a bad girl who hasn't been caught yet, and her confessional begins Friday, April 24, when "Nikki Glaser: Good Girl" arrives on Hulu. Filmed at the Fabulous Fox Theatre in front of a sold-out crowd, Nikki takes the stage in her hometown for her most unapologetic hour yet. The special finds Nikki turning aging, beauty and fame into a brutally honest set that confronts "what it means to stay relevant, desirable and real in a culture that never looks away" (per Hulu). "I'm 41," Nikki says in the trailer, "[m]y career's going great now, but I know eventually Hollywood is going to kick me out because I'm going to do something horrible, like age naturally." From career-ending anxiety to shocking beauty standards, Nikki strips away the facade of perfection with the help of director Hamish Hamilton ("Nikki Glaser: Someday You'll Die") and producers Chris Convy ("MTV Unplugged"), Alex Murray ("Lights Out with David Spade") and David Jammy ("Yearly Departed"), telling Deadline recently that her special "was developed and honed for two years on the road at over 250 shows, and it was one of the best nights of my life to get to perform this show for the very last time in my hometown of St. Louis in front of family, friends and fans."

"Farmer Wants a Wife" - Season 4

Plow those fields and plant those seeds as a new season of this reality series sees three new bachelor farmers — Braden Pridemore, Brett

Maverick and Sean Cavanaugh — try their luck at finding true love. Kimberly Williams-Paisley ("Father of the Bride," 1991) returns as host for Season 4 of "Farmer Wants a Wife," premiering on Hulu this Wednesday, April 22. This new season follows three farmers and their dates as they come together for mixer events, including speed dating and a glamorous gathering at Laurel Park Racetrack. "But this season doesn't stop at romance," says Deadline, "it raises the emotional bar with unexpected twists." As one bold woman makes a shocking decision to leave her matched farmer to pursue another, the farmers must also decide whether to welcome another woman into the mix, adding even more pressure and potential for heartbreak. With more women than ever vying for their attention, Braden, Brett and Sean face a series of difficult choices in order to find love. Season 4 of "Farmer Wants a Wife" reunites producers Wesley Denning ("The Floor"), David Emery ("The Voice") and Lauren Taylor Harding ("The Masked Singer"), along with showrunner David Tibballs ("The Mole"), for a fresh season unlike any other.

"No Other Choice" (2025)

A pink slip ignites a deadly job hunt in director Park Chan-wook's ("Oldboy," 2003) 2025 crime thriller "No Other Choice," arriving on Hulu this Friday, April 24. An adaptation of Donald E. Westlake's bestselling novel, "No Other Choice" stars Lee Byung-hun ("G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra," 2009) as Man-su, a veteran employee of Solar Paper who descends into madness when he's abruptly laid off following an American corporate buyout. After three months of exhausting job interviews, mounting bills and now facing eviction, his search leads him to Solar Paper's rival company, Moon Paper. Desperate to provide for his family, Man-su places a fake job advertisement to identify his competition, eventually targeting other applicants such as Beom-mo (Lee Sung-min, "The Man Standing Next," 2020) and Si-jo (Cha Seung-won, "Night in Paradise," 2020), as well as manager Seon-chul (Park Hee-soon, "The Scam," 2009). Armed with his father's gun, Man-su descends into a dark, twisted nightmare of botched murders and grisly cover-ups ... turning his backyard into an eerie cemetery for the over-qualified. With a screenplay by Lee Kyoung-mi ("The School Nurse Files") and Don McKellar ("Last Night," 1998), "No Other Choice" is produced by Alexandre Gavras ("Custody," 2017) and Jisun Back ("Decision to Leave," 2022).

Amber Pike and Matt Barnett in "Love Is Blind" seasons now and yielded dozens of couples — to varying amounts of success.

To borrow the language of the show, two couples from the first season are still proving that "love truly is blind," six years after broadcast: Lauren and Cameron, and Amber and Barnett.

If you're interested in keeping up with them, it might not surprise you to hear that they're all active on social media. Amber and Barnett are regular Instagram posters (they announced the birth of their daughter there last April), and Lauren and Cameron have an ongoing YouTube series, "Hangin' With the Hamiltions," as well as a podcast called "The Love Seat." (Guess who were the guests on the show's first episode? Amber and Barnett. There's no shortage of ways to keep up with these four.)

The show's still producing couples to this day. Season 10 was just released a couple of months ago and there are already whispers about the 11th — which, based on the rhythm of the show so far, would release in the fall.

Netflix actually keeps a running list of all the couples who are still together on its website, and the cynics out there might be surprised at the success rate — nine couples are still together, according to the site.

Q: Is Christopher Meloni still doing "Law & Order: Organized Crime"? I haven't seen it in a while.

A: "Law & Order: Organized Crime" is a bit like the troubled younger brother of the franchise. And, at the moment, we don't know if it's still in the family or not.

It started on NBC like the other "Law & Order" shows still on the air (the original "Law & Order" and its now-more-successful spinoff, "Special Victims Unit"), but it didn't quite fit in there, so it was sent off to the Peacock streaming service for its most recent fifth season, debuting there in last spring. But then NBC changed its mind and aired the season on the broadcast channel in the fall.

So, technically, it has been a while since it released a new episode — since June.

It did fairly well on broadcast — averaging about 2.5 million viewers per episode. Considering those were technically reruns (for Peacock subscribers, at least), that's not bad at all. But we still don't know if it was enough to get Christopher Meloni ("Wet Hot American Summer," 2001) and his show a renewal.

In the meantime, Meloni has been moonlighting on a number of other projects.

He's already wrapped filming on a pair of movies — ensemble comedy "Little Brother," slated for release on Netflix later this year, and the indie drama "Chop Cheese," written and directed by his daughter Sophia (no release date so far).

And he's currently working on a pair of TV series: coming-of-age sitcom "I Suck at Girls," set up at Netflix, and football-themed drama "The Land" for Hulu.
