WELCOME

We are fortunate to have a wide array of shops and services in the Quad-Cities who are not only committed to bringing us the best, but being good neighbors and giving back to the community they serve.

Many of our local businesses contribute to our local schools, sports, and future of our community. This section is filled with many of your favorites, as voted by residents from across the region.

We hope you will continue to choose local for your goods and services, because they are the fabric of our community. We want to celebrate every single one, not only for being some of your favorites, but also for their dedication, commitment, and eagerness to support our community.

Here's to the best of the Quad-Cities' best.

◆ MEET ONE OF YOUR FAVORITE NEW CAR DEALERS! ◆

Cars are in his blood

Tom Pospisil, owner of Eriksen Chevrolet

Story and photos by Todd Mizener

Tom Pospisil, the owner of Eriksen Chevrolet, may not be the showman that the dealership’s founder, Bob Eriksen, was, but they both share one driving principle - do the right thing for the customer.

“I started in the car business in 1976. I was 15 years old washing cars at the Chevrolet dealership in Berwyn, Illinois. I was on a learner’s permit driving new Corvettes, so that’s how the car business got in my blood.”

It may have started long before getting behind the wheel of those Corvettes while growing up in Chicago’s south suburbs. Pospisil’s father was in the car business but advised young Tom to do something else after graduating from Northern Illinois University with a degree in finance. But it was too late. Tom was hooked.

“I’ve probably done every job in a car dealership. Between junior and senior year I worked in the parts department of an Oldsmobile dealer, then I wrote service at the dealership. Between my junior and senior years of college, I was selling cars in the summertime. They even tried to convince me not to go back (to school),” said Pospisil.

He got his degree anyway, and after working in the Chicago area and running a few dealerships, he was recruited to the Quad-Cities in 1995 to help run day-to-day operations at LuJack in Davenport.

After LuJack was sold he came to work for Darrell Reynolds at Eriksen.

“Darrell Reynolds and I just shared the same values. Darrell wasn’t the big corporate guy, he was the local guy, with his fingers in everything. His guidance was always ‘do what’s right.’ We carry that on today with our slogan, ‘You’re number one,’” said Pospisil. “It’s all about the customer.

“We take care of them when they’re buying a car, or when they’re in service or the body shop or whatever. You have to treat them right. Sometimes that means going the extra mile by doing something another dealer wouldn’t do, or a corporate bean-counter would flip-out over. You do the right thing.”

Pospisil takes great pride in his dealership’s community outreach. He donates the space for the Vietnam Veterans of America - Quad Cities Chapter 299 to meet every month in the dealership’s community room. “We probably have 75 veterans attend. We’re shut down for the night, so we give them the run of the place and they make themselves at home.”

The local Corvette Club also meets at Eriksen. One of the dealership’s most well-known philanthropies is turning their lot over one weekend each year to the Milan Improvement Project’s MIP Arts and Craft Fair. Seemingly by magic, an entire lot of cars disappear and space is turned into a wildly popular bazaar. The secret is that Eriksen sits on 14 acres of land so the cars are just tucked away in the back. “I don’t know of another dealership in the area who has 14 acres in one spot.”

The most visible of the dealership’s outreach is its “Three Degree Guarantee” partnership with Channel 8. “It’s not about the money,” he said. “It is a partnership that gives recognition to people who are doing good things in the community.”

He cited the example of a local food pantry that received a donation from the program. The pantry was down to just two elderly volunteers, in their mid-70s. The recognition from the sponsorship helped spark three new people to come, volunteer, helping to secure the pantry’s future.

Customer Service

Eriksen’s Milan location means they can take full advantage of their 14 acres. They can spread out a little and give customers breathing space and make the shopping experience more relaxing.

“You can get here from anywhere in the Quad-Cities in ten minutes,” Pospisil said.

Pospisil is proud of his dealership’s high level of customer service. If you treat the customer right, they will come back even if they have moved out of the area. “They call us up and ask us if we ship cars. We work the deal out on the phone and ship the car out to them.”

Pospisil firmly believes what separates his dealership from the rest is customer service.

“For us, it’s the personal touch, the caring touch. It’s not a bean-counter environment, it’s not a big corporate environment. It’s not some big out of town investor, it’s all local, we’re all local, I am local. It’s all about taking care of the customer and understanding that’s what we’re here to do.

“Why does somebody set foot on our lot? They’re here because they need help. They need help with service or the body shop or maybe it’s time for something new. We lay out the options.”

Pospisil leaned back in his office chair and proudly recounted the story of an elderly customer who came into the dealership during the depths of the 2019 polar vortex. She was desperate for a car with a remote start. The cold was just too much for her to wait for her car to warm up.

Tom Pospisil, the owner of Eriksen Chevrolet, started in the car business when he was 15-years-old. He has been the owner of Eriksen since January 2016.

She picked out a new car and handed the salesman the keys to her trade-in so it could be appraised. The salesman noticed that her car (purchased from another dealer) already had a remote start. Pospisil instructed the salesman to show the customer how to use her remote start, essentially scuttling the sale. He said the woman was so touched by the gesture that she was almost in tears. The staff at Eriksen took the woman under their wing and showed her all the features of her car, including the Bluetooth capabilities.

They lost that sale, but they gained a customer for life. When spring came, the woman returned to buy a new car from Eriksen.

The customer told Pospisil, “You guys could have sold me a new car and I wouldn’t have known the difference. You did the right thing. I’ll never go anywhere else.”

Bob Eriksen would be proud.
