'The X-Files' returns to Fox after almost 14 years

By Brian Craddock
TV Media

It's been almost 14 years since "The X-Files" last aired a new episode. Series stars David Duchovny and Gillian Anderson have gone on to success in other shows, such as "Californication" and "The Fall," respectively, but fans are clamoring to see the two reprise the roles that made them famous: special agents Fox Mulder and Dana Scully.

Now it's finally happening: "The X-Files" returns to the small screen in the form of a six-part miniseries, premiering in a two-night event Sunday and Monday, Jan. 24 and 25, on its old home network, Fox. After this two-night premiere, it slips into its Monday time-slot for the remainder of the series' run.

Considering how long it's been since we've seen a new episode (not including the film "The X-Files: I Want to Believe" in 2008), it's understandable that some changes have been made to the series, but it should still be largely the same show we saw almost a decade and a half ago. The main cast members are (mostly) returning; besides Duchovny and Anderson, viewers can expect to see Mitch Pileggi ("Dallas") as the FBI's Walter Skinner, as well as William B. Davis ("Continuum") as the conspiratorial Smoking Man. Even the Lone Gunmen are back: Bruce Harwood ("MacGyver"), Tom Braidwood ("Amazon Falls," 2010) and Dean Haglund ("Bones") all reprise their roles as John Fitzgerald Byers, Melvin Frohike and Richard Langly (who also appeared in their own spinoff in 2001). Annabeth Gish's ("Sons of Anarchy") Monica Reyes also returns, but absent will be John Doggett, the character played by Robert Patrick ("Scorpion").

There are some new faces as well: Joel McHale of "Community" appears as Tad O'Malley, anchor of an online news show in the same vein as controversial real-life radio host Alex Jones; Annet Mahendru ("The Americans") plays Sveta, an alien abductee. Noted "X-Files" superfan Kumail Nanjiani (who in addition to his acting work in shows such as "Silicon Valley" also produces an "X-Files" fan podcast) is also slated to appear in an as-yet-unspecified role in the third episode (though in a photo posted on Twitter, Nanjiani is seen wearing an animal control officer jacket, flanked by Duchovny and Anderson).

So just how are cast members of the original series feeling about jumping back into roles they haven't played in years? Well, when he first got the script for the opening episode, Duchovny says he cried:

"I just read it about an hour ago, and I started crying reading the first page," Duchovny told Entertainment Weekly in May. "It was just so strange to see the names on the page. ... We'd been planning it for a long time."

For Davis, it was an easy decision to return. "As an actor it's good for me, it's good for my career and it's stimulating," he said in an interview with Den of Geek. "I had no hesitation. I would have been quite disappointed if the show had been done without me, and I think a lot of fans would have been disappointed as well."

Millions of fans are wondering how this season will play out. Major details are scant, even as the show is about to air, but creator Chris Carter has managed to drop one significant bombshell, revealing to the Hollywood Reporter in September that Mulder and Scully are no longer a couple. "We put some of the tension back in that was relieved by them being together," he said. "It added to the storytelling opportunities."

Carter also revealed his amazement at how it felt finishing up the show for a second time. "I look [at the original series] and I see that we did 202 episodes of the show. I honestly don't know how we did it. I was exhausted by the end of these six episodes."
