Prayer to St. Jude

Most holy Apostle, St. Jude, faithful servant and friend of Jesus, the church honors and invokes you universally, as the patron of hopeless cases, of things almost despaired of. Pray for me, I am so helpless and alone. Make use, I implore you, of that particular privilege given to you, to bring visible and speedy help where help is almost despaired of. Come to my assistance in this great need that I may receive the consolation and help of heaven in all my necessities, tribulations, and sufferings, particularly (your request) and that I may praise God with you and all the elect forever. I promise, O blessed St. Jude, to be ever mindful of this great favor, to always honor you as my special and powerful patron, and to gratefully encourage devotion to you. Amen.

1. Student Loan - Annual Percentage Rate (APR) - Immediate Repay: The APR reflects the estimated total cost of the loan, including origination fees ($0), accruing interest, and the effect of capitalized interest. Interest begins accruing after each loan disbursement. The rate shown is for a 5-year loan, including the 0.25% interest rate reduction for using the auto-pay feature and RI Advantage Discount. 2. RI Advantage Discount: applies to any Rhode Island resident students attending school in any state or non-Rhode Island resident students attending a school in Rhode Island.

Thanksgiving Novena to ST. JUDE
O Holy St. Jude Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ. Faithful intercessor of all who invoke this special patronage in time of need. To you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg you, to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. Say three Our Fathers, three Hail Marys and three Glory Be's. Publication must be promised. St Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. This novena has never been known to fail. It helped me. Thank you St. Jude for answering my prayers.

By JENNIFER COATES

“A ‘life coach’ is a results-oriented mentor who helps clients develop important skills, set goals, cultivate good habits and change their lives.” The emphasis here is on results which improve or enhance a life — step by step and “specific, measurable, achievable, relevant and time-based” goal by goal at a time.

It takes a special kind of person to be an effective life-coach because true, lasting and meaningful change is hard. The best kind of coach is the one who has been where you are and has overcome similar challenges to get to where he or she wanted to go.

This is why Amanda Spencer, a Certified Master Trainer and owner of AS Private Coaching, LLC., is so good and impactful at what she does. She has been where you are — feeling lost and out-of-control, seeking direction and self-mastery, striving for inner-peace and purpose. Amanda Spencer embarked upon her own personal journey of transformation when she hit a personal impasse in her own life. Though her life was not out of control, she felt out of control, and this made every decision seem daunting and incapacitating.

It was her own “ah-ha” moment that instigated

some life-altering decisions, enabling her to better cope with those times when she felt overwhelmed and hopeless. She began to see how small but tangible goals impacted her day-to-day life. In time, a sense of purpose was restored along with a sense of self-worth that emboldened her to take chances. The kind of chances that led her to pursue professional training as a life coach.

Amanda focuses on life, health and nutrition coaching. She is also certified in “trauma informed” coaching, a segment of life coaching that sees an increased sense of urgency. Amanda understands it all because, in some way or the other, she has lived it all.

She can help you. She has such a strong desire to help people because she knows how hard the climb is, and that it is impossible to do it alone.

Throughout her journey, Amanda learned the importance of accountability. She has nurtured an informal group of individuals who are seeking to become more accountable — to others and to themselves. Again, an arduous journey that teaches us to take responsibility for both our actions and the way we let the actions of others shape us. This is a life-long process. She will help you towards this worthwhile, life-altering practice.

If you feel as though your life has gone off track, has left you disorganized, lacking self-control and needing genuine change, please contact Amanda Spencer. She will meet you physically, emotionally and mentally where you are — and leave you a changed person.

Amanda’s initial consultations are free. To learn more about AS

Signs it might be time for a room addition project

No one enjoys being in cramped quarters. Whether a person battles a legitimate case of claustrophobia when confined in tight spaces or simply prefers a place to stretch out, there's no denying the appeal of a little extra room. That's particularly so at home, where cramped spaces can make it hard to unwind.

When homeowners feel their walls are closing in on them, many choose to build space via a room addition. Room addition projects are extensive and expensive undertakings, with the home renovation experts at Angi estimating the average add-on costs $48,000. But Angi estimates such projects can cost as much as $72,600, or even more depending on the size of the space and the features chosen.

The financial commitment when adding a room is significant, but homeowners and residents also will need to prepare for a potentially lengthy disruption to their daily routines. Various online resources, including Angi, suggest room addition projects typically take around three to four months. With so much at stake, homeowners who think they might benefit from a room addition can look for various signs to help them determine if such a project is right for them.

Increasingly cluttered spaces: Cramped quarters without much space for people are perhaps the most notable sign that residents can benefit from some additional space in a home. Cluttered spaces suggest homeowners may have run out of room for their stuff, and a custom addition can provide that extra room while contributing to a more calming ambiance in common spaces that may no longer be overwhelmed by papers, toys and other items that can quickly take over a home that lacks space.

Lifestyle hurdles: Millions of homeowners like to entertain friends and family, and that's more manageable for some than it is for others. If interior or exterior spaces do not accommodate hosting, a room addition that expands an existing kitchen or living room might be the ideal renovation project.

Functionally challenged: A home that no longer has enough space to meet your needs is another sign a room addition might be in order. This very issue emerged for millions of professionals during the COVID-19 pandemic and has remained a challenge ever since. Indeed, an increase in days spent working remotely has left many homeowners grateful to work from home but desirous of a designated remote work space. A room addition to accommodate a home office can be just what remote workers need to restore fully functional status to their homes.

Cost: While the sticker price of a home addition may (or may not) raise an eyebrow, the project is almost certain to prove more cost-effective than moving. According to data from the U.S. Census Bureau and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the average sale price of a home in the United States reached $503,800 in January 2025. While that marked a roughly $16,000 decrease from a year earlier, it's still a high figure that many homeowners aren't willing to pay. A cost comparison detailing the price to move versus the price to build an addition may indicate that the latter option is a homeowner's best bet.

A room addition could be the perfect renovation project for homeowners who need more space but still prefer to stay put.

How to navigate today’s challenging real estate market

Real estate has long been touted as a worthy long-term investment. With that conventional wisdom in mind, young adults often make buying a home one of their first big-ticket purchases. Though real estate remains a potentially lucrative investment, the market for homes has been difficult to navigate for several years running.

High mortgage interest rates and low inventory have left many buyers feeling priced out of the real estate market. Others may find the competitive nature of the modern real estate market too stressful. No one can predict if or when the real estate market might be less challenging, but the following are some ways those looking for a house can navigate that process.

- Ready your finances. It goes without saying that prospective buyers must get their financial affairs in order before they begin shopping for a house. But finding a home in the current market takes time, and some buyers might have let their mortgage preapproval letter expire without realizing it. Others might have experienced a dip in their credit rating as they turned to credit cards to confront inflation. That means buyers who began looking for a home months or even years ago might not be positioned to buy now should they find a home to their liking. Revisit your finances if it's been awhile. Pay off any consumer debt that has accumulated in recent months and reapply for mortgage preapproval if necessary.

- Be ready to pounce. Data from the National Association of Realtors found that the average home spent 32 days on the market before being sold in November of 2024, which was a full week longer than a year earlier. That's good news for buyers, but it still means buyers must be ready to pounce if they find a home and home price to their liking.
- Hire a real estate agent. The hectic pace of the modern real estate market can be difficult for anyone to keep up with. But real estate agents keep up with the market for a living, and they can be invaluable resources for buyers whose commitments to work and family are making it difficult to keep pace.

- Emphasize long-term growth and value when assessing properties. According to Zillow, the median list price of homes in the United States was just under $387,000 by the end of January 2025. But buyers must also recognize that 22.4 percent homes sold above list price in that month, according to a Redfin analysis of MLS data and/or public records. Buying a home is more than an investment in a property. It's also in some way an investment in the town where the home is located and in a home-owners' future. So while it can be tempting to buy a home with the lowest asking price, home buyers should also seek homes that figure to experience the best long-term growth in value. Homes situated in safe and welcoming towns with good schools are arguably a better investment than homes with lower sticker prices but no such amenities.

The real estate market has been challenging for buyers over the last several years. Various strategies can help buyers find a home that suits them and their budgets.

Tips to find a job in the modern market
Some useful points to help talented professionals find their next job

Professionals know that standing out in a crowded field of applicants has long been a challenge when seeking a new job. But that challenge grew significantly more difficult in the internet era, when it became vastly easier and quicker to apply for a new opportunity but simultaneously more difficult to stand out from the many other applicants who could apply in a few minutes or less.

The modern job market certainly requires a different approach to finding a job than in years past. However, some useful points can help talented professionals find their next job.

- Hone your networking skills. Networking is a vital skill for modern professionals, including those looking for a new job. Though internet reports suggest as much as 85 percent of job openings are now filled through networking, that data has been debunked and characterized as a myth. Still, networking can help professionals learn about openings before they're listed (if they're even listed at all) and also provide insight into a company's culture.
- Create a visible online profile. LinkedIn was long considered the go-to platform for professionals to establish an online profile, and that's largely still the case. Though some LinkedIn users complain that jobs advertised on the site are not removed even weeks after they've been filled and others feel the site has become a more traditional social networking site and less a professional networking platform in recent years, it's still a go-to platform among human resources professionals and recruiters. In fact, a recent report from Jobvite found that 87 percent of recruiters utilize LinkedIn to identify candidates. So while some may view LinkedIn as less useful than it used to be, HR professionals continue to value it.
- Create an informative online profile. It's important to have an online profile in the modern professional world and equally vital to make that profile as informative as possible. Avoid lengthy sentences that HR professionals and others are unlikely to read in favor of bullet points of relevant experiences and skills. It's possible to be both concise and informative, and professionals should aspire to be both when crafting their online profile.
- Keep looking. Though it's hard to confirm various online claims regarding how many applications the average job seeker submits before landing a new job, various sources indicate a person can expect to apply for as many as 200 jobs before successfully finding new work. That's a lot of leg work and frustration, but it's vital that professionals avoid waving the white flag. A new opportunity will eventually arise, particularly for those who fully commit to finding a new job.

The modern job market can be difficult to navigate. But diligent and dedicated professionals who commit to the process can land a fulfilling job.

A new opportunity will eventually arise, particularly for those who fully commit to finding a new job.
