For Pete's sake

Pete Holmes as seen in "Crashing"

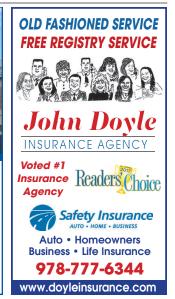

HBO's "Crashing" is currently enjoying its sophomore season, with a new episode airing Sunday, Feb. 4. Writer, creator and star Pete Holmes ("Ugly Americans") has drawn humor from some of his deepest memories and most personal life moments. He plays a fictionalized version of himself in the dark comedy — a character who struggles with the realities of adulthood, such as the disollution of his marriage and the difficulties of carving out a place for himself in the comedy world.

Divine comedy: HBO's 'Crashing' explores faith

By Sarah Passingham

ike many comedians, Pete Holmes ("Ugly Americans"), writer, creator and star of HBO's "Crashing," has drawn humor from some of his deepest memories and most personal life moments. The concept of the series was formed from Holmes' experiences as he rededicated himself to the pursuit of a standup comedy career. The comedy is currently in its sophomore season, with a new episode airing Sunday, Feb. 4, on HBO.

The show's lead — also named Pete, and played by Holmes himself — struggles with the realities of adulthood, such as the dissolution of his marriage to Jess (Lauren Lapkus, "Orange Is the New Black"), questioning his faith, and reimagining his dreams when confronted with the difficulties of carving out a place for himself in the comedy world.

As the series is semi-autobiographical, many of Holmes' comedy contemporaries appear as themselves in the show, including Artie Lange ("The Artie Lange Show"), T.J. Miller ("Silicon Valley"), Hannibal Buress ("Broad City") and Sarah Silverman ("I Love You, America"). Other comedians, such as Jermaine Fowler ("Superior Donuts") and Aparna Nancherla ("Inside Amy Shumer"), feature as well, albeit in more fictional roles.

This is not the first endeavor for which Holmes has combined his personal and professional lives for compelling content. He has long been the host of the popular podcast "You Made It Weird," in which he welcomes friends, guests and other comedians into conversations that explore complex ideas. Between the podcast, the confessional nature of standup comedy and the series inspired by events from his own life, Holmes has honed his skill of oversharing until it becomes art.

Holmes attended Gordon College, an Evangelical Christian college in Massachusetts, and his faith has been challenged and broadened since those formative years. Following his upbringing in Christianity, Holmes explored Buddhism as an adult, and he brings his knowledge of and experience with faith with him in his everyday life, including in his creative projects. As Holmes told the New York Times, spirituality is "not just a Sunday-only thing for me. It's something I'm constantly reading and thinking about." So. naturally, it's a driving force of the plot of "Crashing." Confronting divorce and a new career pushes Pete to question what his faith means to him, and he is not the only character in the show who contemplates his spirituality.

Lange, playing himself in the finale of the first season, engages in a discussion about the place of spirituality in a world where people seek logical meaning for life's events. Artie comes out of the conversation giving himself a sort of baptism as a new believer. For Lange, getting out of New Jersey and finding a home in New York City as a successful standup comedian was its own spiritual experience. Speaking to Exclaim! about leaving his home state, he said he "became more enlightened than my friends by going into show business." The passion that Lange has for comedy is felt by audiences and critics, as his turn playing a fictional version of himself in "Crashing" has gifted him with the most wellreceived performance of his career.

Holmes shared with Paste magazine that in creating "Crashing" as a dark comedy, he felt that he was "playing catch-up with other great artists like Lena Dunham and Ricky Gervais." It is not a surprise then that Judd Apatow, who famously executive produced "Girls" for HBO, would settle into the same role for "Crashing." Holmes shared with The Hollywood Reporter that what inspired him to need Apatow as a mentor was the "serious heart and warmth" he felt the characters of "Girls" had and which he wanted in the characters of his own show.

pitched the concept of "Crashing" to Apatow, the latter told Vulture he felt it was "too sad." Holmes, however, was motivated and certain about the show, and after writing a series of episodes, the partnership with Apatow became a match made in heaven, and they got to work. The series leans into the adulthood malaise that Apatow is known for producing not only in his television series, but in his film career as well. In "Funny People" (2009), a comedian deals with a terminal illness with signature Apatow humility as he develops a quick friendship with a green comic. So, while it is a story told many times before, it may be told best with "Crashing," as Holmes and Apatow have practiced and are at their best.

"Crashing" upends some stereotypes that many autobiographical comedies lean on, and the goodness of Pete is what steers the show into plots less traveled. While comedians are often portrayed as bad people making bad decisions, for "Crashing," Holmes created Pete from a different cloth. He is a thoughtful, if at times naive person whose decency is often what causes problems for him, as well as some of the most enjoyable tension. A key factor in what makes "Crashing" work is the opposing natures of the fictional versions of Holmes and Lange. Lange is the gruff veteran comic to Pete's innocent newcomer, and the two explore parallel problems questioning faith and entertainment. Centering the story from Pete's point of view is what makes "Crashing" a fresh take on a comic's origin story.

Kristen Bell stars in "A Bad Moms Christmas" A Bad Moms Christmas

Moms and best friends Amy (Kunis), Kiki (Bell) and Carla (Hahn) are all looking forward to the coming Christmas season, until all three of them have their own mothers show up unexpectedly to spend the holidays with them and their families. It doesn't take long for the younger women to start butting heads with their intrusive moms, and during a day out Christmas shopping together, they vow to take back the holiday and do things the way that they want to. The souring relationships between them and their moms, however, threaten to ruin the holiday that they're trying so desperately to save. Directors: Jon Lucas, Scott Moore. Stars: Mila Kunis, Kristen Bell, Kathryn Hahn, Christine Baranski, Susan Sarandon, Cheryl Hines, Justin Hartley, Jay Hernandez. 2017. 104 min. Comedy.

Ruff and tumble

Annual event shines spotlight on pet adoptions

By Andrew Warren

TV Media

Ruff and tumble: Every year at around this time, a group of athletes in their prime comes together for an afternoon of sport — a true celebration of the joys of physical play. Oh right, and there's that whole Super Bowl thing happening, too.

For the 14th year, Animal Planet presents the annual "Puppy Bowl" Sunday, Feb. 4, airing opposite that bigger-name sporting event. It's counterprogramming at its cutest, and this year's "Puppy Bowl XIV" is bigger than ever.

A record-smashing 90 adorable puppies take to the field this year, although chances are they won't be following the rules of football too closely. Instead, they're released into a puppy-sized mock football field with toys strewn about, while helpful humans keep a close eve on them to make sure that their play doesn't get too rambunctious. Cameras catch everv tackle, tumble, sniff and lick, and "rufferee" Dan Schachner ("Four Houses") stays on the furballs to provide commentary. As in years past, all of the four-field with

pawed participants come from shelters around the country and are available for adoption. Also featured is "Puppy Bowl's" firstever international participant, Mango, who's coming all the way from Mexico, as well as doggos rescued from areas devastated by hurricanes, including Florida, Houston and Puerto Rico.

Along with the highly anticipated halftime show (which features kittens singing a hit 'N Sync single) "Puppy Bowl XIV" also features a new segment this year: the Dog Bowl. It isn't just puppies sitting in shelters waiting for forever homes, and this new event aims to showcase the older animals who are all too often passed

It may be called Super Bowl Sunday, but there's another big game happening that afternoon. Dog lovers looking for a different sort of sport won't want to miss "Puppy Bowl XIV" Sunday, Feb. 4, on Animal Planet.

Super stars for 'Superstar': NBC's next live musical production has been hammering out its cast in the lead-up to its Easter premiere, and it isn't being stingy when it comes to casting big

Over the past several years, the peacock network has put on live performances of some classic musicals right around Christmastime, and with the huge success of those annual events, it's perhaps not surprising that the musical celebrations have spread to Easter. "Jesus Christ Superstar Live in Concert" premieres live on Easter Sunday, April 1.

Lined up to play Jesus Christ himself is iconic musician John Legend ("La La Land," 2016), with shock rocker and sometimes-actor Alice Cooper ("Dark Shadows," 2012) cast in the role of King Herod. As for the role of Mary

Magdalene, acclaimed singersongwriter and Tony Award nominee Sara Bareilles has been cast, and a news release made it clear that she couldn't be more excited for the opportunity. "To say I'm excited about this performance is the understatement of the century," she said, adding, "this score and this musical have been a part of my life from a very young age, and it will be one of the great thrills of my life to sing these iconic songs."

"Jesus Christ Superstar" debuted on Broadway in 1971 and became an instant hit. It loosely tells the story of the last week of Jesus's life through a contemporary lens, mostly through the point of view of Judas Iscariot, who has not yet been cast.

"Jesus Christ Superstar Live in Concert" is still working out its cast, but with the likes of John Legend, Alice Cooper and Sara Bareilles front and center, it's shaping up to be nothing short of spectacular. The live musical premieres Sunday, April 1, on NBC.

Sheldon stays: It looks like Sheldon is staying put, and that really shouldn't be a surprise to anyone who's been paying attention to the ratings. CBS has renewed freshman comedy "Young Sheldon" for a second season. ensuring that the preguel series stays around for at least one more year.

Of course, it's likely that its lifespan will be even longer than that. The preguel to 'The Big Bang Theory" is the most watched new comedy in 18 years, with its massive number of loyal viewers making it the secondmost watched comedy currently on television, behind only its parent series.

Those are some impressive accomplishments. The show stars Ian Armitage ("Big Little Lies") as child genius Sheldon Cooper, played by Jim Parsons in the parent series (he also narrates each episode of the spinoff). Zoe Perry ("Scandal") and Lance Barber ("It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia") star as Sheldon's parents, with Raegan Revord ("Modern Family") and newcomer Montana Jordan playing his siblings.

It's a hard world out there for a child genius, but apparently not for a TV show about one. The first season of "Young Sheldon" is currently airing on CBS.

Q: I would like to know more about "A Place to Call Home" — is there a new season in the works? I hope I'm not the only one addicted to this show.

A: You certainly aren't the only viewer hooked on the Australian prime-time soap "A Place to Call Home," which has become an international smash. Unfortunately, no North American network has shown the same enthusiasm. Regardless, though, there will be new episodes coming for quite a while.

As usual, it's the PBS "network" supplying fans of foreign dramas with their fix. But I put network in quotes there for a reason: The various PBS affiliates across the U.S. are given a great deal of freedom with their programming, and as a result, their schedules aren't as consistent as those of the more centrally controlled big four networks (ABC, NBC, CBS and Fox).

The various PBS affiliates are airing "A Place to Call Home" at their own paces, and all are airing it behind the show's original Australian broadcaster, Seven Network.

That, believe it or not, is the good news. Seven has already finished airing the show's fifth season and has renewed it for a sixth, which means American viewers have lots more of the period drama to look forward to.

O: I don't recall ever seeing Doug McKeon, who played the grandson Billy in the movie "On Golden Pond," in any other movies. Did he continue a career as an actor?

A: Doug McKeon's doing all right for himself, all things considered — those "things" being the child star curse, basically.

He's doing well enough that he just appeared in a pretty high-profile role in an even higher-profile film: The somewhat lost and resentful little boy in "On Golden Pond" grew up to become the vice-president of the United States of America.

McKeon's most recent role, in 2016, was playing Hubert H. Humphrey in "LBJ," the Rob Reiner-directed biopic of Lyndon B. Johnson, which starred Woody Harrelson in the title role.

It was McKeon's biggest role in quite a while — perhaps since "On Golden Pond" in 1981. Otherwise, they've been a lot of guest spots on TV and in the occasional big-screen film, some a little less prestigious than "On Golden Pond" or "LBJ." Prior to "LBJ." he had a role in 2015's "I Spit on Your Grave: Vengeance Is Mine," the third installment in the modern slasher-film franchise.

He's had an odd little career trend recently, playing a number of religious men on TV. It started in an episode of "House" in 2009, when he played an unnamed priest, but in 2013 he repeated it twice in prestigious Showtime dramas, playing Rev. Peter Mayfair in an episode of "Masters of Sex" and Father Lonas in "Ray Donovan."

Q: I love the movie "12 Angry Men." Was it a book or anything first? What was the source material?

A: If it's the movie "12 Angry Men" you love, then it was based on something. Technically, it was based on a TV show.

Three years before it became a critically beloved cinematic classic in 1957, "12 Angry Men" was a live TV event. It began life as a 1954 episode of the prestigious live anthology series "Studio One" on CBS.

Indeed, the credits made that clear, saying "Written especially for Studio One by Reginald Rose."

Rose was a prolific, lifelong TV writer, and he wrote a total of 16 episodes of "Studio One."

The final episode he wrote was the two-parter "The Defender" in 1957. A few years later, he was given the opportunity to adapt that episode into a series of its own, "The Defenders." That series ran from 1961 to 1965, also on CBS, and, after "12 Angry Men," it's Rose's most significant contribution to television.

Amazingly, the film reel of the second half of "12 Angry Men" was lost shortly after CBS aired it, and a copy wasn't found again until 2003 — fittingly, it was in the personal collection of New York attorney Samuel Leibowitz. Leibowitz's children gave the complete reels to the Museum of Television & Radio in New York (now the Paley Center for Media).

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

I saw that Princess Charlotte went to her first day of nursery school yesterday. It was a little intimidating for the other kids. Like for "show and tell," she brought Scotland.

Steve Bannon is leaving Breitbart — but he said he's proud of what they've accomplished in a short period of time. For example, in just a few months, they managed to fire Steve Bannon.

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Congratulations to the Alabama Crimson Tide, who last night beat the Georgia Bulldogs to win the college football championship. It's the best thing to happen to Alabama since not electing Roy Moore. Good for you! That's two in a row!

Today, President Trump held a bipartisan meeting on immigration reform, focused mainly on reforming our policy of having immigrants. The stakes are high. If the two sides can't find a compromise, the federal government is going to shut down on Jan. 20, or as historians call it: one year too late.

The Late Show With James Corden

This is our first show of the new year after the holidays. We're very happy to be back. We actually would have come back last week but marijuana was just legalized here in California so, you know.

Two major Apple investors wrote an open letter to the company pressuring it to study the addictive effects of iPhones and iPads on children. This seems a little bit late. Addressing this problem now is like your drug dealer telling you, "Hey, man, be careful with that. It's not good for you. I'll see you Monday."

Jimmy Kimmel Live

With Trump's approval rating right now, I'm not sure he could beat Maury Povich for president, never mind Oprah.

Trump has reportedly been rolling into the Oval Office at around 11 a.m. and heading out at 4:15 p.m. It's reassuring that the president of the United States has the same hours as a Venice Beach skateboard shop.

The Blacklist

WBTS 10 8:00 p.m.

Red (James Spader) and the task force launch a new investigation when a number of bodies are found in the woods in a new episode of "The Blacklist," airing Wednesday, Feb. 7, on NBC. Their questioning leads them to The Invisible Hand, a group that targets individuals whose actions it deems morally reprehensible, even if they are entirely legal.

In a quiet and peaceful neighborhood in the 1950s, Gardner Lodge's (Damon) life is thrown into disarray after two robbers break into his home and murder his wife. In the aftermath of the violent home invasion, his dead wife's twin sister Margaret (Moore) moves in to help look after his son Nicky (Jupe). As the investigation into the crimes pushes on, both the boy and a charismatic insurance agent (Isaac) looking into the death begin to suspect that both the break-in and the murder may have been planned by Gardner and Margaret all along. Director: George Clooney. Stars: Matt Damon, Julianne Moore, Oscar Isaac, Noah Jupe, Glenn Fleshler. 2017. 105 min. Crime.

Real talk

By Kat Mulligan

Back in 1993, even RuPaul likely could not have foreseen where the future would take him. While his single "Supermodel (You Better Work)" was soaring up the charts, one wonders if Ru had always had the world's most beloved drag queen series in mind. Thanks to his persistence, determination and fierce drive, a generation of us has grown up with knowledge of "spilling T," "throwing shade," and that if you want to succeed, "you better work."

"RuPaul's Drag Race" has been a staple of reality TV since 2009, and born from its legacy in 2012 was an elevated competition: "RuPaul's Drag Race: All Stars." A new cluster of fan favorites is ready to bring their best looks and talents in an allnew episode of season 3, airing Thursday, Feb. 8, on VH1. Season 3 of "RuPaul's Drag Race: All Stars" was ushered in with glitter and gold, featuring more fan favs than ever before.

Unlike the previous two seasons, there are no runners-up competing, perhaps making for a diverse yet balanced group of competitors. Chi Chi DeVayne, Kennedy Davenport and BenDeLaCreme all nearly graced the top three in their original seasons, snagging fourth and fifth place. Thorgy Thor and Trixie Mattel were both widely adored for their unique, signature looks and seemingly endless amounts of drive, but never made it beyond sixth place.

For Aja, Milk and Morgan Mc-Michaels, perhaps it was a case of bad timing or just plain bad luck, with each girl ousted from her respective season far earlier than their talents would have predicted.
