

Your Weekly Guide to TV Entertainment for the week of December 30, 2017 - January 5, 2018

Captain Dave (Dylan McDermott, "The Practice") and his crew depart on witty weekend flights from "L.A. to Vegas," premiering Tuesday.

High-flying hilarity: Winners abound in 'L.A. to Vegas'

By Kat Mulligan TV Media

hina's Great Wall, Rome's Coliseum, London's Big Ben and India's Taj Mahal — beautiful locations, but so far away, hence the appeal of some of North America's nearby attractions. If you like your fun and thrills presented with a side of glamour and a dash of luck, there's only one place to go: Las Vegas. Though, as anyone who's traveled there can tell you, the fun begins the moment you board the plane. A new comedy is set to take viewers on this trek, with flights from "L.A. to Vegas" set to commence Tuesday, Jan. 2, on Fox.

The crew of Flight 1610 transports excited — often intoxicated individuals from LAX to Vegas for 48 hours of entertainment, gambling and memories. Fictional passenger and comedic actor Ed Weeks ("The Mindy Project") summed up the plot nicely while visiting Breakfast Television Toronto with fellow castmate Kim Matula ("The Bold and the Beautiful"). According to Weeks, the series depicts a diverse group of passengers, "stuck on a plane every weekend, L.A. to Vegas and then Vegas back to L.A.," who start off full of "hopes and dreams going into the weekend," only to return with "shattered hopes and dreams, rings under the eyes [and] alcohol poisoning."

The plane is helmed by Captain Dave, played by Dylan McDermott ("The Practice"), an overconfident, brash pilot with a soft spot for his passengers' well-being. His co-pilot, Alan (Amir Talai, "The Pursuit of Happyness," 2006), does his best to appease Dave's eqo. Other notable crew members include flight attendant Bernard (Nathan Lee Graham, "Zoolander," 2001) and head flight attendant Ronnie (Matula), both of whom juggle the needs and demands of passengers all while trying to navigate the destination of their own lives.

With the series format being centered around a weekly flight, be prepared to see a combination of fresh narratives and ongoing story arcs, with many passengers becoming regulars. Actors Peter Stormare ("Fargo," 1996) and Weeks both appear to be potential repeat riders. In fact, Stormare's character, Artem, an avid gambler, seems convinced that he'll only win at the tables if he sits in a particular seat during the flight. Meanwhile, Weeks's character, Colin, develops quite an attraction to Ronnie, though it's currently unclear skybound — relationship. The hype for "L.A. to Vegas"

stems not only from the stellar casting of the series, but from the comedic powerhouse that's producing it. Gary Sanchez Productions has ioined forces with 20th Century Fox Television to develop this mashup of "The Love Boat" meets "Anchorman" (2004) on a plane. Gary Sanchez Productions is run by Will Ferrell ("Daddy's Home," 2015) and producer Adam McKay ("Step Brothers," 2008). The pair works with the company's head, the fictional Gary Sanchez, a Paraguayan investor whose gifts to the globe most notably include comedic video website "Funny or Die." While this isn't the first foray into television for the production company, known also for "Drunk History" and "Com-

whether this is just a one-time — or mander Chet," the partnership with Fox will provide "L.A. to Vegas" with perhaps the company's broadest small-screen reach ever, letting the laughs land in millions of living > rooms across North America. As for the on-screen talent, Mc-Dermott is a seasoned professional, possessing a wealth of versatility within his CV.A harrowing, tumultuous childhood like his may have stunted the development of others, but thanks to the encouragement of his stepmother (playwright Eve Ensler), McDermott took a gamble on himself, for which both the small and big screen alike are ever grateful. Iconic roles in television series such as Bobby Donnell in "The Practice" and both Dr. Ben Harmon and Johnny Morgan in "American Horror Story" have helped McDermott secure his presence as a skilled character actor, though often with a more dramatic and serious lean. "L.A. to Vegas" allows McDermott to explore his quirkier, zanier side, playing a suave pilot with a penchant for sarcasm and a minimal filter.

"L.A. to Vegas" also features soap opera star Matula, who brings with her a unique fanbase that is also more familiar with an actress swept up in the dramatic instead of the comedic. This isn't the actress's first shot at comedy, as 2017 has seen Matula explore her more humorous side, with appearances in the series "Teachers" and the film "Maybe Someday" (2017). While discussing her character on Breakfast Television Toronto, Matula explained that Ronnie is someone with "big dreams ... a lot of hopes for her life, and she has not made the right decisions ... she's an incredibly impulsive person."

The relatability of Ronnie, and the humorous missteps of her life, give her an endearing quality that is entirely relatable to both Matula's soap opera fans and those sitcom lovers who have yet to see her perform. Ultimately, the show's appeal stems from the fact that in such confined spaces, even through the duration of a short flight, people have a way of opening up and revealing themselves, their charms and annoyances in a way that elicits both sympathy and laughs.

Prepare for a weekly weekend getaway, four days in advance, as you board Flight 1610 with Captain Dave and his crew for a fun-filled trip from "L.A. to Vegas." Buckle up for some laughs when the series lifts off Tuesday, Jan. 2, on Fox.

American Made

When Barry Seal (Cruise), a commercial airline pilot in the 1970s, is approached by the CIA to start flying some clandestine reconnaissance missions over Central America, he leaps at the opportunity to make some extra money and serve his country. It isn't long before the CIA has him doing more jobs for them while in Central America, and when he's approached by a drug cartel that wants him to smuggle cocaine back to America, he takes it up on its offer, too. With political events in the region heating up and the call of money stronger than ever, it quickly becomes a tricky balancing act for Seal to stay a step ahead. Director: Doug Liman. Stars:

Tom Cruise, Domhnall Gleeson. 2017. 115 min. Action.

Battle of the Sexes

Two of the world's top tennis players clash in the famous 1973 match. Billie Jean King (Stone) is at the height of her career, but as a female tennis player, she has trouble getting the respect — and the money - that male players receive. Meanwhile, retired great Bobby Riggs (Carell) has developed an addiction to gambling, and he tosses out a challenge: that, even at 55 years old, he can beat any woman, leading to an epic showdown

Networks converge on Times Square for New Year's Eve

By Andrew Warren TV Media

Out with the old: It's been a roller-coaster of a year, but it's time to send off 2017 and welcome in 2018, and everyone knows what that means. It's party time, and as usual, the major TV networks have competing New Year's Eve celebrations that all promise to ring in the new year in style.

Fox is in New York's Times Square for this year's celebration, and a prolific TV host is on hand to host the network's coverage of the festivities. "Fox's New Year's Eve with Steve Harvey: Live from Times Square" may be a mouthful, but the title sums up the special pretty perfectly.

With Fox joining the fray, Times Square sure is going to be packed this year. "Dick Clark's Primetime New Year's Rockin' Eve with Ryan Seacrest" returns to ABC to usher in another year, with Seacrest ("American Idol") and Jenny Mc-Carthy ("The View") returning as hosts, a position that Seacrest took over following Clark's ("American Bandstand") passing in 2012.

Whereas ABC's and NBC's New Year's specials are continuations of a long-running tradition, Fox's move to New York is a change in New Year's plans. For the past three years, the network has aired "Pitbull's New Year's Revolution" from Miami, Florida, but that special was canceled this year in favor of the Harvey-hosted Times Square celebration.

Harvey, of course, should fit perfectly well into his new role — after all, hosting is what the comedian is all about these days. He currently hosts the daytime talk show "Steve," game shows "Family Feud," "Celebrity Family Feud" and "Steve Harvey's Funderdome," variety shows "Little Big Shots" and "Little Big Shots: Forever Young," and will host "Showtime at the Apollo" when that series returns in 2018.

All three New Year's specials broadcast from New York's Times Square on New Year's Eve, Sunday, Dec. 31.

Still searching for truth: Ten seasons and two movies in, the truth is still very much out there. For nine seasons, from 1993 to 2002, "The X-Files" was television's premiere science fiction drama, and in 2016 it staged a tentative revival with six new episodes that were met with mixed reviews.

There are still plenty of unanswered questions, though, and Mulder and Scully are still on the case. David Duchovny ("Californication") and Gillian Anderson ("Hannibal") return as newly reinstated FBI agents Fox Mulder and Dana Scully in a new season of "The X-Files," premiering Wednesday, Jan. 3, on Fox.

The 10-episode season picks up not long after season 9's shocking conclusion, with the horrific plan whose foundations had been laid over the course of the entire series finally coming to fruition. Luckily for them, Mulder and Scully aren't working alone to stop the threat to humanity itself and uncover the truth behind it, with a cast of old faces and new ones helping them — and hindering them — in their investigations.

Mitch Pileggi ("Dallas") returns as assistant FBI director Skinner, a powerful and reliable ally for the two leads, while William B. Davis ("Continuum") also returns to his role of the enigmatic Cigarette Smoking Man, Mulder and Scully's nemesis. Annabeth Gish ("Brotherhood"), Lauren Ambrose ("Six Feet Under"), Robbie Amell ("The Flash") and Karin Konoval ("War for the Planet of the Apes," 2017) also return throughout the season to their original roles.

There've been plenty of revivals over the past few years, but with so many unanswered questions remaining, the new season of "The X-Files" may finally get close to the truth. The new season premieres Wednesday, Jan. 3, on Fox.

Child's play: Anyone with kids knows that they can sometimes say the most unpredictable things, but often enough there's a nugget of truth inside what comes out of their mouths. At least that's the premise behind a new game show from British comedian and actor Ricky Gervais ("Derek").

The creator and star of the original British version of "The Office" co-hosts "Child Support," which premieres Friday, Jan. 5, on ABC. He shares hosting duties with former child actor Fred Savage ("The Wonder Years") in the new game show, with the pair splitting up duties in the unique take on the quiz show genre.

In "Child Support," contestants must correctly answer 10 questions to earn the biggest possible prize, but if they get one wrong, they have a lifeline: a panel of five kids who have been asked the very same questions by Gervais. It definitely smacks of Fox's "Are You Smarter Than a 5th Grader?," right down to also being hosted by a comedian, but with trivia questions that aren't limited to an elementary school curriculum.

"Child Support" premieres Friday, Jan. 5, on ABC.

> Steve Harvey hosts "Fox's New Year's Eve with Steve Harvey: Live from Times Square"

By Adam Thomlison TV Media

Q: Is the show about the Busby quints coming back?

A: Yes, but considering how open Adam and Danielle Busby are about every other aspect of their lives in the course of their hit TLC show, "OutDaughtered," they're being surprisingly secretive about when.

Fans have been crying for more episodes, particularly on social media. The Busbys are pretty active Twitter users themselves, and so Adam responded to a fan asking for a return date: "Our story is much bigger than we are and there is still so much more to tell. You will just have to wait and see!"

As you can see, I use the term "respond" loosely here. He at least seems to be confirming that they will be coming back at some point.

While relieving, perhaps, this isn't particularly surprising. The show's first three seasons, which follow the Busbys as they raise their five quintuplet daughters, with the help of their slightly older daughter Blayke, have been big hits for the network.

Of course, it's not just the children who go through growing pains — the show is as much about the evolution of the parents' relationship. For example, in the third-season finale, which aired in September, Adam and Danielle clashed over her desire to return to work at the family fitness club business.

Q: The show "Yukon Men" is still on air but only seems to show reruns. Are they ever going to begin showing new content?

A: There's no official word on whether "Yukon Men" will be picked up for an eighth season, and the signs are mixed: the cast members are pretty active on social media (Twitter especially) and haven't indicated any change in their TV-star status, but the ratings aren't promising.

It started out back in 2012 as a golden-boy show, pulling in big numbers for Discovery. They've been sinking since, and they suffered a particularly big drop from season 6 last year to season 7 this year.

That said, there's no reason to panic yet, because it's not overdue or anything — the seventh season just ended in July and the show only airs a single season per year.

That, of course, means that in the interim you will see a lot of reruns — that's the specialty-channel trap.

Strongly branded channels such as Discovery and Animal Planet (both of which air "Yukon Men" repeats, though it originates on Discovery) are in a tough spot. Their success is based on the fact that you know what you're getting when you turn to them ----Animal Planet, for instance, is only ever going to give you a non-fiction show that's at least loosely about animals. The problem is, of course, they're just about the only ones making those types of shows, and no channel can afford to make new content 24-7 (except the cable news networks).

Broadcast networks can fill their extra time with "Seinfeld" reruns or just about anything else, and less strictly themed cable channels (such as Turner Classic Movies or TVLand) can fill up on a still broad range of shows, most or all of which they didn't produce for themselves.

Q: I remember seeing a sitcom in the early '80s about a rich girl stuck in the army. What was that called?

A: You've stumbled upon the mostly forgotten history of Nancy Meyers' flirtation with television.

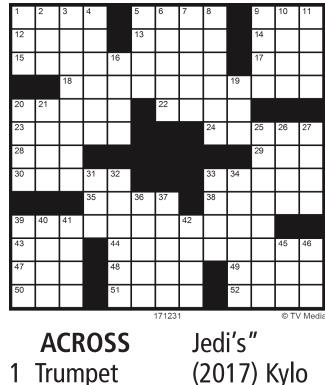

The show you're thinking of is "Private Benjamin," a sitcom adaptation of her 1980 big-screen hit of the same name, starring Goldie Hawn in the title role. The TV version lasted a surprising three seasons on CBS, from 1981 to 1983.

The film was the first of many big-screen successes by future mega-writer Nancy Meyers. Lately she's become known as a romantic-comedy guru, whose more recent hits have included the smashes "Something's Gotta Give" (2003), "The Holiday" (2006) and "It's Complicated" (2009).

Though three seasons doesn't qualify the "Private Benjamin" show as a "hit," it was successful enough, apparently, to inspire Meyers to try again.

Late Laughs

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

I saw that Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip are celebrating their 70th anniversary by getting new portraits together. It was a big day for them — and a huge day for the photographer at Sears. CBS just fired Charlie Rose after allegations of sexual harassment. Yeah, they told him to clear out his desk, put on some pants and leave.

I read that Atlanta, Los Angeles and Chicago were expected to have the busiest airports today. While LaGuardia hung a sign outside that said, "Abandon all hope, ye who enter."

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

You might remember that, while he was in China, Trump asked China's President Xi Jinping to release three UCLA players who had been arrested for shoplifting from a Chinese mall — easily the most scandalous thing to happen in a mall that didn't involve Roy Moore.

The Late Show With James Corden

This weekend, President Trump lashed out at NFL running back Marshawn Lynch after photos showed Lynch at a game in Mexico where he was standing during the Mexican national anthem, but sitting during the U.S. national anthem. By the way, "Marshawn Lynch stood for the Mexican anthem" is also the sentence that will start 70 per cent of your Thanksgiving fights this year.

Late Night With Seth Meyers

Happy Thanksgiving everybody! It's now about 12:30 on Thanksgiving night, which means any minute now you should be done entering your parents' Wi-Fi password.

An Alabama pastor expressed his support for accused Senate candidate Roy Moore in a recent interview and said, quote, "There are some 14-yearolds, who, the way they look, could pass for 20." He is the pastor of The First Church of the Virgin Mary According to Her Anyway.
