Action, drama and comedy abound in 'Lethal Weapon'

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

These days, the television landscape is peppered with all sorts of shows, but drama and comedy are still the meat and potatoes of prime time. Many series attempt to mix the two genres, but few of them do it with the ease of Fox's "Lethal Weapon."

Damon Wayans ("In Living Color") and Clayne Crawford ("Rectify") star as Roger Murtaugh and Martin Riggs, respectively, in the second season of "Lethal Weapon," airing Tuesday, Dec. 5, on Fox. Based on the popular film series from the '80s and '90s, the show follows L.A. cops assigned to a crime-ridden beat.

The original "Lethal Weapon" franchise brought the buddy movie formula to a whole new level, and Fox's TV version offers fans the same mix of action, drama and humor. When the TV version premiered last September, Wayans and Crawford quickly won over viewers with their chemistry and earned the show an early season 2 renewal. Fox executive David Madden had high praise for the series when the early renewal was announced in February.

"'Lethal Weapon' continues to fire on all cylinders," Madden said. "Every week, it delivers a big fun roller-coaster ride, but also remains touchingly human and genuinely emotional."

While there were plenty of naysayers who doubted that the television reboot of the films could recreate the action-packed fun of the original, which starred Mel Gibson ("Braveheart," 1995) and Danny Glover ("The Color Purple" 1985) as Riggs and Murtaugh, Fox's "Lethal Weapon" has held its own. That is in large part due to the aforementioned chemistry between Wayans and Crawford.

As Murtaugh, Wayans is the proverbial straight man to Crawford's loose cannon as Riggs. A husband and father of three, Murtaugh recently returned to the force after a heart attack, only to find himself paired with out-of-control new hire Riggs. With everything to live for, Murtaugh found himself struggling to rein in his self-destructive partner lest he put them both at risk.

On the flipside, Crawford's Riggs lives a very different lifestyle with his trailer on the beach and 1977 Ford F-350. The antithesis of his partner, former Navy SEAL Riggs has a blatant disregard for safety as he pursues criminals. His destructive tendencies seem to stem from the loss of his wife and unborn child in El Paso, Texas.

It's typical buddy comedy fodder, but Crawford and Wayans manage to keep the show from slipping into cliché with their chemistry, which has been almost universally praised by critics. Their connection may be, in part, due to the fact that Crawford grew up watching Wayans in his groundbreaking sketch comedy series "In Living Color." In an interview with collider.com, the actor claimed the show was at least partially responsible for his sense of humor: "For me, everything those guys wrote made me laugh out loud," Crawford said.

Unlike a lot of recent television reboots, the "Lethal Weapon" TV series has remained fairly faithful to the original, at least when it comes to the key players. Keesha Sharp ("Girlfriends") stars as Murtaugh's wife, Trish, a lawyer. In the "Lethal Weapon" film series, the character was played by singer Darlene Love. Murtaugh's two teenage children also play prominently in the TV series. Riana Murtaugh, known as Rianne (Traci Wolf, "In the Heat of the Night") in the film series, is now played by Chandler Kinney ("Girl Meets World"). Roger Jr., named Nick (Damon Hines, "Chicago Hope") in the movies, is now portrayed by Dante Brown ("Mr. Robinson").

"Mad Men" alumnus Kevin Rahm takes on the role of Capt. Brooks Avery, which was based on the character of Capt. Ed Murphy (Steve Kahan, "Conspiracy Theory," 1997) in the film franchise. Jordana Brewster ("The Fast and the Furious," 2001) appears as police department psychologist Dr. Maureen Cahill, a character based on the movies' Dr. Stephanie Woods, a role originated by Mary Ellen Trainor ("The Goonies," 1985).

Fox's television series has also added medical examiner and forensics technician Scorsese (Johnathan Fernandez, "Bull"), and Det. Sonya Bailey (Michelle Mitchenor, "Chi-Raq," 2015).

The recurring cast includes Thomas Lennon ("The Odd Couple") as ambulance-chasing attorney Leo Getz, Hilarie Burton ("One Tree Hill") as DEA Agent Karen Palmer, and Richard Cabral ("American Crime") as Det. Alejandro Cruz. Season 2 welcomes Michelle Hurd ("Law and Order: Special Victims Unit") as Gina Santos, and Andrew Creer ("Barracuda") as young cop Zach Bowman.

All of these characters come together to entertain audiences in the second season, which finds Murtaugh navigating rough waters at home, while also trying to steer Riggs away from his demons. For all of his growth last season, Riggs is still a wild spirit.

While ratings have taken a dip so far this season, averaging about four million live viewers per episode compared to more than eight million last season, "Lethal Weapon" is still faring well in the grand scheme of prime-time television. Recent talk of a possible reboot of the film franchise could raise the show's profile even more. That's right, Gibson and Glover may reunite on the big screen in a new "Lethal Weapon," or so rumor has it. In October, deadline.com reported that the actors and director Richard Donner ("Superman," 1978) had been considering a new film version.

With plans for a new movie still up in the air, fans of the series can get their weekly dose of "Lethal Weapon" Tuesday, Dec. 5, on Fox.

Lights on: Christmas light competition returns for fifth holiday season

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Lights on: It's finally December, and that means Christmas is just around the corner. The days may be getting shorter, but that doesn't mean that the nights are any darker — especially not with all the Christmas lights going up in neighborhoods across the country. Of course, while some folks are content with just a single string of monocolored LEDs, other families go all out with displays impressive enough to be jaw-dropping.

It's the latter sort of holiday decorators that ABC's "The Great Christmas Light Fight" is interested in, and for a fifth year, the annual competition series is pitting the best of the best light-stringers against one another. Premiering Monday, Dec. 4, the new season airs back-to-back episodes every Monday evening from now until the week before Christmas.

Each episode of "The Great Christmas Light Fight" shows off four of the most over-the-top Christmas light displays that families from across America have put together to help celebrate the season. "Trading Spaces'" Carter Oosterhouse and frequent "Rachael Ray" guest Taniya Nayak both return for a third year to judge the competition.

In each episode, once all four displays have been showcased, Oosterhouse and Nayak get to judging. The pair evaluates each display in a variety of categories, including just how much Christmas spirit has been included, and rewards the winner with the coveted Light Fight trophy. But of course, that's not all: the winners also get a huge $50,000 prize — merry Christmas, indeed!

This season also features an extra holiday surprise: neighbors! In one episode, next-door neighbors team up to build a double-sized display that they hope will beat other neighboring pairs doing the same.

There are more bulbs than ever before when this year's "Great Christmas Light Fight" premieres Monday, Dec. 4, on ABC.

Anniversary antics: Five decades ago, a little variety show popped up on the CBS schedule that would go on to achieve 11 laughter-packed seasons and become a cultural phenomenon. It was "The Carol Burnett Show," and CBS is celebrating the anniversary of the groundbreaking series with "The Carol Burnett 50th Anniversary Special" on Sunday, Dec. 3.

The special two-hour event was filmed at the series' original soundstage in Los Angeles, and reunites much of the team from the classic show. Burnett ("Mad About You") welcomes back original cast members Lyle Waggoner ("Wonder Woman"), Vicki Lawrence ("Great News") and iconic costume designer Bob Mackie, along with a huge number of special guests whose own sketch comedy was influenced by the legendary series.

Comedy heavyweights Stephen Colbert ("The Late Show with Stephen Colbert"), Bill Hader ("Saturday Night Live"), Jay Leno ("The Tonight Show with Jay Leno"), Martin Short ("Mars Attacks!," 1996) and Maya Rudolph ("Bridesmaids," 2011) are just a few of the big names slated to appear, along with actors Jane Lynch ("Glee"), Bernadette Peters ("The Good Fight") and Kristin Chenoweth ("Bewitched," 2005).

For folks who may not remember a series that went off the air four decades ago, "The Carol Burnett Show" may not seem like such a big deal, but it was a sketch comedy heavyweight in its heyday. Its combination of music, dancing and sketches enraptured a generation of TV audiences, and it was Burnett's hilarious characters and spot-on comedic timing that really made the show what it was.

"I can't believe how fast the time went, and what makes me the happiest is that so much of the funny stuff we did still holds up today, and we can share it with generations to come," Burnett said in a statement announcing the special. And she's right — a lot of the humor still holds up after all these years, and it's being celebrated in "The Carol Burnett 50th Anniversary Special" Sunday, Dec. 3, on ABC.

Cops and authors: Nathan Fillion is sticking with ABC. The long-running dramedy "Castle," in which he played the titular bestselling novelist who solved real-life crimes, was suddenly cancelled by the network in 2016, but the actor has landed a straight-to-series order for a new drama.

"The Rookie" is inspired by a true story, and stars Fillion as a middle-aged man who upends his cozy small-town life to pursue his dream of being a big-city cop. Now a rookie in the LAPD, he's surrounded by other newly minted police officers 20 years his junior, making him an "old" man in a young person's world.

The drama also reunites Fillion with "Castle" showrunner Alexi Hawley, who is writing and producing the new series, with Fillion also serving as an executive producer.

Although nowadays he's best known for his starring role in "Castle," the Canadian-born and raised Fillion first rose to prominence for his role in the soap opera "One Life to Live," for which he was nominated for a Daytime Emmy Award. His leading role in the science fiction series "Firefly" earned him a devoted fan base, which his time starring in "Castle" only bolstered.

"The Rookie" is still in early production, with no release date or episode count announced yet.

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: What happened to the Kyra Sedgwick show "Ten Days in the Valley"? It hasn't been on in a while.

A: Focus on the good news: "Ten Days in the Valley" is coming back soon! And with a double episode! (It seems it's trying to make up for the lost time — the show, as you point out, has been off the air since Oct. 22.)

Now hang on to that good news while I tell you the rest: It's moving from Sundays to Saturdays, where it will air for a few more weeks before most likely being canceled.

Star Kyra Sedgwick herself announced the news of the move on her Twitter account, with just a hint of sarcasm, saying that "the good people at ABC" had moved it, and that fans should "stay tuned for details!!"

As for the likelihood of cancellation, that's usually what follows a move to Saturday night — it's the night with the lowest average viewership, so networks often treat it like a dumping ground for shows they don't want to air in the more lucrative spots.

Hollywood Reporter TV correspondent Kate Stanhope pointed out that "the news is not surprising given the drama's low ratings thus far."

The "thus far" is interesting here. ABC let it have just four episodes before more or less giving up on the show, which tells the story of a crime-TV producer whose own daughter goes missing.

Q: What can you tell me about the Australian TV show "Doctor Doctor"? I caught the first season by chance and loved it and want to know more.

A: The first thing you might like to know is that it may not be restricted to Australia forever.

The series, about a big-city surgeon whose life takes an unexpected turn that leads him to a practice in a small town, was produced by Australian indie firm Essential Media.

Essential was purchased this past fall by the international conglomerate FremantleMedia, a company known in North America for picking up global shows and either importing them unaltered (such as the Australian soap "Neighbours") or remaking them for American TV (most notably "American Idol," which started as "Pop Idol" in Britain).

Though Fremantle has announced no definite plans to export "Doctor Doctor," the deal could still spell good news for fans on this side of the world who, like yourself, have had trouble finding the show.

It's a good candidate for export — its first season was a runaway hit in Australia, earning a second-season renewal after just two weeks on the air.

"We are delighted with how Australian audiences have fallen in love with 'Doctor Doctor,' an incredible cast and a story full of heart," said Jo Rooney and Andy Ryan, execs at the show's Australian broadcaster, in an official statement. The network, known simply as Nine, just finished airing the show's second season.

Q: I love the movie "Topkapi," but only recently found out it was based on a book. Has the author done any other movies?

A: That's actually a trickier question than it sounds. Author Eric Ambler has done quite a few movies, but most of them were not based on his books.

England-born Ambler, considered one of the godfathers of the literary thriller, was also a successful screenwriter in Hollywood in the 1950s and '60s.

He wrote original scripts for a number of films, including "A Night to Remember" (1958), which told the story of the sinking of the Titanic (39 years before James Cameron got around to it). In fact, most of Ambler's original screenplays were nautical stories — he even wrote the first draft of the screenplay for the 1962 classic "Mutiny on the Bounty" (which was actually based on another author's book), but star Marlon Brando reportedly rejected it.

His novels, on the other hand, were mostly spy stories. Among the other films based on his books are "The Mask of Dimitrios" (1944), "Journey Into Fear" (1942) and "Background to Danger" (1943).

Late Laughs

Conan

Last Friday, Dr. Phil hit a skateboarder with his car. Dr. Phil was overheard yelling, "Quick, somebody, get a real doctor!"

In the past week, several prominent men have been fired for sexual harassment, and it's being called "The Harvey Effect." Of course, none of them will see any jail time, and that's being called "The Cosby Effect."

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

Developers are working on a Hyperloop that could get you from Washington, D.C., to New York City in just 29 minutes. And once you're here, you can take a subway from Penn Station to Times Square in just four hours.

The Late Show With James Corden

Snoop Dogg has taken aim at the president once again in his new single called "Make America Crip Again." A representative of Snoop explained that with "Make America Crip Again," Snoop's intention is to, quote, "unite, not divide." Because what organization could be more unifying than the South Central L.A. street gang, the Crips.

Jimmy Kimmel Live

According to the latest Fox News poll, President Trump has a 38 per cent approval rating — and only six per cent on Rotten Tomatoes. Turns out, bringing the country to the brink of nuclear war while golfing every day isn't playing as well with the voters as he'd hoped.

Late Night With Seth Meyers

A new study has found that a person's brain is still active for about 20 seconds after death, and a person may be aware that they have died. This according to a eulogy that had really gone off the rails.
