John Lithgow stars in "Trial & Error"

"Trial & Error" wraps up its freshman season with a verdict for Larry Henderson (John Lithgow, "3rd Rock From the Sun"), a hapless, small-town professor accused of murdering his wife by flinging her through a plate-glass window. The season finale also introduces the crime that will be the focus of the second season, which will feature the same setting and oddball cast of characters. Catch the season finale of "Trial & Error" when it airs Tuesday, April 18, on NBC.

‘Trial & Error’ wraps up a hilarious first season

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

Mockumentaries, when placed in the right hands, wield a very special power in that they can take decidedly unfunny subject matter and make it hilarious. From the multiple Christopher Guest-created offerings on the big screen (“This Is Spinal Tap,” 1984; “Best in Show,” 2000) to “The Office,” “Parks and Recreation” and “Modern Family” on the small, it’s a genre that’s seen a lot of success over the years.

Pair it with the true-crime format that’s so hot right now and Bob’s your uncle. “Trial & Error” is a wonderfully goofy freshman comedy that’s murder mystery-meets-mockumentary, and has gleaned mostly favorable reviews so far. The season finale airs Tuesday, April 18, on NBC.

Drawing from recent documentary hits such as “Making a Murderer” on Netflix and HBO’s “The Jinx,” “Trial & Error” is a comical whodunit story led by the much-lauded John Lithgow (“3rd Rock From the Sun”), fresh off his stint as Winston Churchill in “The Crown.” The five-time Emmy winner stars as Larry Henderson, a small-town poetry professor accused of murdering his wife by flinging her through a plate-glass window.

It certainly doesn’t sound like comedy fodder but, what can I say, it’s funny. The ubiquitous Lithgow is a masterful vehicle for the hapless Larry, who is completely clued out to the seriousness of his situation. Even when it starts to really, really sound like he’s the guilty party (his first wife also met her end with a plate-glass window — coincidence?), he still manages to come across as affable, if a bit buffoonish. His head is perpetually in the clouds, and his priorities are all over the place; for instance, he seems to put as much import on the cable guy showing up as he does on the violent murder of his wife. The challenge, for Lithgow, was portraying someone who could be a killer, or who could end up being totally innocent.

“He had to be likable, along with scary and potentially murderous. It was a curious cocktail,” Lithgow said of his character during a BUILD interview. “Of course, you’ve got comedy on your side. If somebody is funny, then you’re crazy about him.”

Coming to Larry’s defense — and straight-man to his goofball — is fresh-faced young lawyer Josh Segal (Nicholas D’Agosto, “Masters of Sex”), who travels from New York City to the small South Carolina town of East Peck, eager to take on his first major case. Though hopeful and well-meaning, the naive Josh is totally out of his element as he tries to work not only with the eccentric Larry, but also the oddball locals who make up his (mostly useless) defense team.

This consists of redneck lead investigator Dwayne Reed (Steven Boyer, “The Wolf of Wall Street,” 2013), whose bumpkin status is cemented in the revelation that his brother is also his cousin, and assistant Anne Flatch (Sherri Shepherd, “The View”), who allegedly suffers from an ever-lengthening string of rare and improbable medical ailments, including face blindness. The main cast also includes Carol Anne Keane (Jayma Mays, “Glee”), the ambitious and aggressively flirtatious prosecutor who has her eye on the title of district attorney and wants to see Larry hang, and Larry’s daughter, Summer (Krysta Rodriguez, “Smash”), who also becomes a murder suspect.

Though the series pulls elements from true-crime shows in general, this first season is specifically inspired by “The Staircase,” a documentary that hit Sundance channel in 2004. The doc examines the case of Michael Peterson, a man suspected of the mysterious murder of his wife, Kathleen, in their North Carolina home.

“[‘Trial & Error’] is shot in exactly the same way. We rigorously observe all the rules and rituals of that genre,” Lithgow told E! News, “and yet everybody in it is completely ridiculous.”

Neither viewers nor the majority of the cast of “Trial & Error” will learn the truth of Larry’s guilt or innocence until the finale, which additionally serves as an introduction to next season’s crime. If all goes according to plan, showrunners are banking on seven seasons, with each one focusing on a different case, but with the same cast and setting.

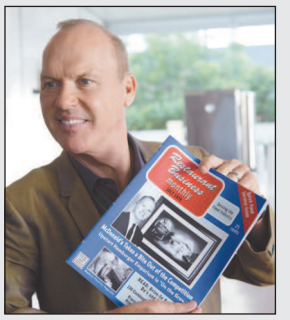

“Every year is a different crime. The main characters in the town will stay the same,” co-creator and executive producer Jeff Astrof told the Hollywood Reporter following a Television Critics Association press tour panel. “This year was inspired by ‘The Staircase,’ maybe [if we get a second season] we’ll be inspired by ‘The Jinx’ or ‘Making a Murderer.’ Thankfully, people have killed a lot of people!”

Of course, the extent of Lithgow’s presence in a second season will depend on the outcome of Larry’s trial, which we’re about to learn. The show may be comedically driven, but at its heart it’s still a murder mystery, and avid follows are keen to learn the identity of the killer, once and for all. As D’Agosto told E! News, “It’s very funny, it’s very outrageous, but at the end of the day we’re all really trying to solve something very serious.”

Michael Keaton stars in “The Founder”

The Founder

The origins of the global McDonald’s restaurant chain unfold in this biographical drama. When traveling salesman Ray Kroc (Keaton) looks into a California company that’s buying an unusual number of his milkshake makers, he finds a little restaurant owned by Mac (Lynch) and Dick McDonald (Offerman) that’s making a killing. Kroc goes into business with the brothers, handling the franchising of their concept and driving the company’s expansion. Before long, it becomes clear that Kroc’s vision for the future of McDonald’s doesn’t line up with the brothers’ less-ambitious plans.
Director: John Lee Hancock. Stars: Michael Keaton, Nick Offerman, John Carroll Lynch, Linda Cardellini, B.J. Novak, Laura Dern. 2016. 115 min. Biography.

Split

Kevin (McAvoy) kidnaps three teenage girls and locks them up, and over the course of their captivity, the girls realize that their captor possesses multiple personalities, some more benign than others. When one of the girls, Casey (Taylor-Joy), tries to befriend one personality, she learns of a dangerous, as-yet unseen personality lurking within him. Meanwhile, Kevin’s psychiatrist (Buckley) begins to suspect that her patient is behind the recent kidnappings.

HBO vet joins 'The Leftovers' for its final season

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Swan song: HBO's hit psychological thriller may be coming to an end, but its third and final season is the start of something new for an HBO veteran.

Lindsay Duncan joins the cast of "The Leftovers" in time for the series's third and final season, premiering Sunday, April 16. This isn't the "About Time" (2013) star's first role with the specialty channel; she played the cruel Roman matron Servilia of the Junii in HBO's award-winning series "Rome."

She joins "The Leftovers" as it comes off a critically acclaimed second season. The series opens three years after a global happening with shades of the rapture, when an incredible two percent of the world's population suddenly disappeared at the exact same moment. It stars Justin Theroux ("The Girl on the Train," 2016), Christopher Eccleston ("Doctor Who"), Amy Brenneman ("Private Practice"), Liv Tyler ("Armageddon," 1998) and Chris Zylka ("The Secret Circle").

While the first season was set in the town of Mapleton, New York, season 2 of "The Leftovers" moved the action to a small town in Texas that holds the distinction of being the only known place on the planet that didn't lose anyone to the Sudden Departure. The third season finds the characters relocating yet again, this time to Australia.

The change in location also comes with a change to the show's credits. Besides Duncan's arrival, returning cast members Scott Glenn ("The Bourne Ultimatum," 2007) and Jasmin Savoy Brown ("Stitchers") have received promotions to series regulars, while Ann Dowd ("Collateral Beauty," 2016) has bowed out for this season.

Its third season may be its last, but if "The Leftovers" lives up to the standard set by its first two seasons, there will be a lot packed into its eight episodes. The final season gets underway Sunday, April 16, on HBO.

Happy times: Jane Lynch is sticking with NBC. The Emmy-winning host of the summertime hit "Hollywood Game Night" has joined the cast of an upcoming comedy pilot with the peacock network.

"Relatively Happy" stars Jon Rudnitsky ("Saturday Night Live") and Genevieve Angelson ("Good Girls Revolt") as a brother and sister who end up living under the same roof for the first time in their adult lives.

Lynch's role is as Henry's (Rudnitsky) boss, a hard-drinking, womanizing attorney. It's a role that was originally written with a man in mind, but casting Lynch in the role should give "Relatively Happy" a unique flavor.

Beyond "Hollywood Game Night," Lynch's roles include villainous cheerleading coach Sue Sylvester in "Glee" (a role that earned her an Emmy and a Golden Globe) and big-screen appearances in "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" (2005), "For Your Consideration" (2006) and "Wreck-It Ralph" (2012), among others.

Of course, "Relatively Happy" is still in the pilot stage, without a full series commitment, but with three Emmys and a Golden Globe to her name, Jane Lynch is a television force to be reckoned with. She can be seen this summer hosting "Hollywood Game Night" on NBC.

Robot in motion: USA Network has moved one of its most decorated shows — but fans needn't worry, it's only a short delay. "Mr. Robot" has been a darling of critics and viewers alike since its premiere two seasons ago, earning two Golden Globes and two Emmys from six nominations. For its third season, the one-time summer techno-drama moves to the fall, with its 10 episodes getting their start in October.

That's not the only change in store for season 3: Two-time Emmy winner Bobby Cannavale ("Boardwalk Empire") joins the cast as a series regular. He plays a used car salesman, joining series stars Rami Malek ("Night at the Museum," 2006) and Christian Slater ("Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves," 1991).

In another casting change, albeit a somewhat minor one, B.D. Wong ("Law & Order: Special Victims Unit") has been promoted to series regular. Since the first season, he's recurred as Whiterose, the leader of a shadowy Chinese-based organization known as Dark Army.

The rest of the cast is also slated to return, including Carly Chaikin ("Suburgatory"), Portia Doubleday ("Carrie," 2013), Martin Wallstrom ("Ego," 2013), Michael Cristofer ("Die Hard With a Vengeance," 1995), Grace Gummer ("American Horror Story") and Stephanie Corneliussen ("Legends of Tomorrow").

Malek headlines "Mr. Robot's" cast as a cybersecurity expert and hacker who gets swept up in a massive conspiracy by a mysterious anarchist who calls himself Mr. Robot (Slater). Malek's performance in particular has been noted by critics for its depth, earning him an Emmy in 2016 in the category of Outstanding Lead Actor in a Drama Series.

It may not be getting a summertime premiere, but fans of "Mr. Robot" only have to wait a few extra months for its third season. "Mr. Robot" returns in October.

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: Why does Chris Evans appear on the cast list for "Ant-Man"? I've seen that movie a dozen times and Captain America was not in it. There's even a scene in the subsequent film "Captain America: Civil War" in which Steve and Scott meet for the first time.

A: Did you stick around for the whole movie? While you're right that Captain America and Ant-Man don't meet in the latter's 2015 feature, Cap does appear on screen.

Marvel's movies have now become famous for their post-credit scenes — short scenes that are shown during or after the credits at the end, usually to hint at a future crossover event in the shared Marvel-movie universe (though occasionally they're just for fun, as with the scene of the whole Avengers team eating shawarma sandwiches after 2012's "The Avengers").

One of "Ant-Man's" two post-credits scenes features Captain America in a dungeon-like room with Falcon, where they've imprisoned the Winter Soldier. They're trying to figure out what to do with him, when Falcon says, "I know a guy." The "guy" he's referring to seems to be Ant-Man, who Falcon met earlier in the film, but Cap did not.

Q: I'm a big fan of the show "Three's Company." I've been thinking of going to California on a vacation, and would love to visit where they filmed the show in Santa Monica and Venice. Could you tell me some info about the area and what restaurant they used for The Regal Beagle?

A: Hopefully you're a big enough fan to remember the opening credits, because they contain the only locations you'll be able to find. The rest of the show (including, unfortunately, the Regal Beagle) was filmed on studio sets.

There is one significant piece of good news, though: Diligent Internet nerds have, only recently, found the actual apartment building that served as the (external) set of "Three's Company." Given that the show's entire premise was the hijinks that ensue when a straight, single man shares an apartment with two straight, single women, the apartment is arguably the most important location.

The building, discovered by film-location blogger Lindsay Blake of IAmNotAStalker.com, is at 2912 4th St. in Santa Monica. Apparently knowledge of the location had been lost for a long time — even Chris Mann, author of a book about the show (called "Come and Knock on Our Door," released in 1998), could never find it.

There are a couple of other locations from the intro that can still be found as well. The boardwalk scenes along the beach were shot at nearby Venice Beach, and the scenes of them goofing around on bumper cars and buying T-shirts together were filmed at the Santa Monica Pier.

Q: Any idea when "The American Bible Challenge" and "Are You Smarter Than a 5th Grader?" are coming back on?

A: Sadly, it looks like never for both shows. But I can only say "looks like" because you can never count Jeff Foxworthy out.

Foxworthy, who hosted both shows, has already given us an unlikely revival of "5th Grader" in 2015 (not to mention a number of "revivals" of his Blue Collar Comedy franchise). However, neither "5th Grader" nor "Bible Challenge" has produced a new episode in years, which is generally a bad sign.

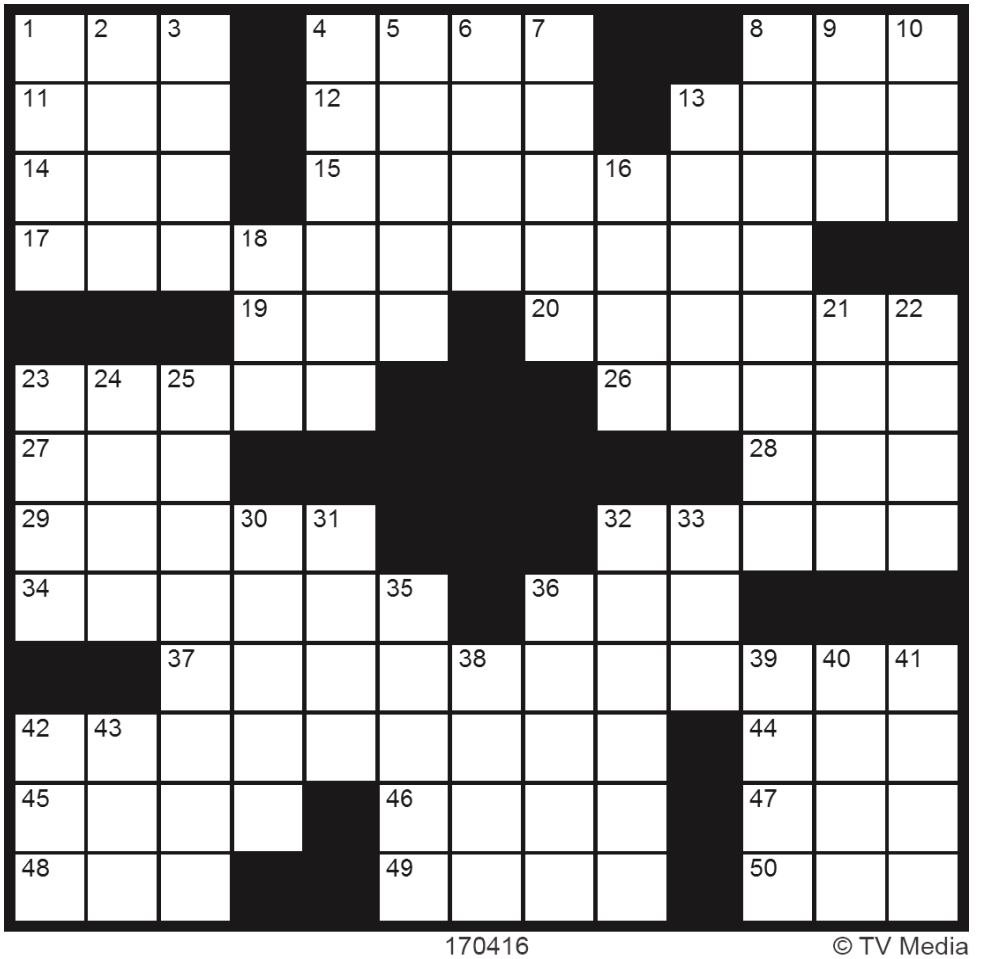

"The American Bible Challenge" aired for three seasons on the Game Show Network, from 2012 to 2014, and hasn't been heard from since. The series featured Foxworthy testing contestants on their Bible knowledge.

"5th Grader" had a higher profile than "Bible Challenge," airing on the Fox broadcast network rather than on cable, and it also lasted longer. It debuted in 2007 and was first canceled in 2011. It was revived in 2015, but failed to do any better in the ratings, and so was dropped from the schedule again.

Chicago P.D.

WBTS (10) 10:00 p.m.

The team catches a disturbing case when a woman is murdered while jogging in the park in this rebroadcast of "Chicago P.D.," airing Wednesday, April 19, on NBC. Atwater (LaRoyce Hawkins) and Rixton (Nick Wechsler) are quick to respond, and see two suspects fleeing the scene. The chase ends at a church, where a priest blocks the police from entering the building.

Jason Beghe from "Chicago P.D."

Real talk

By Mary Fournier
TV Media

Family matters: We're all a little curious about what happens in the personal lives of our favorite celebrities, so when they invite us into those lives and there are cameras involved, we line up for the great TV it makes.

Which is why fans are thrilled that T.I. and Tiny are back for a sixth and final season of "T.I. and Tiny: The Family Hustle," premiering Monday, April 17, on VH1.

The show chronicles the life of famous hip-hop artist T.I. and his wife, Tameka "Tiny" Cottle-Harris, and follows their personal and professional lives as they pursue their careers and raise their seven children. Previous seasons have focused on T.I. being released from prison and rebuilding his relationship with his wife and children, as well as the struggles the Harrises face as their children grow.

This season takes a different turn, focusing on the events that take place after Tiny has filed for divorce from T.I. However, there is a possible reconciliation on the horizon. The show also documents the business lives of the couple once more, as T.I. deals with the release of his new album, "Us or Else: Letter to the System," along with his political activism and support of new artists signed to his record label, Grand Hustle. Meanwhile, Tiny balances the reunion of her girl group, Xscape, while managing another girl group, OMG Girlz.

As for the kids, Zonnique and Domani make new music, Messiah is in the final process of moving to college, and King and Major are no longer the babies of the family, as newborn sister Heiress has taken their spot.

Don't miss out on the Harris family's drama when "T.I. and Tiny: The Family Hustle" returns for its final season, Friday, April 17, on VH1.
