Grittier 'Grantchester': Murder mystery gets heavier in season 3

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

There are a few things I've learned from British television: You should always offer your guests tea, hats are essential ladies' wedding attire, and clergy folk have much more thrilling jobs than I thought they did.

I can't immediately name a priest- or vicar-centric American TV series, but at least half a dozen British ones come to mind with minimal effort. Oddly enough, a respectable number of these involve the lead clergyperson moonlighting as a detective. Are men and women of the cloth particularly suited to solving crimes? If "Father Ted," "Cadfael" and "Grantchester" are anything to go by, then yes, they sure are. The latter of these, another fine "Masterpiece Mystery" offering, has proved to be a hit on both sides of the pond, thanks to its appealing leads and excellently written storylines. Catch a new episode of "Grantchester" when it airs Sunday, July 2, on PBS.

The series is a detective drama that airs on ITV in the U.K. Based on a collection of short stories by James Runcie, it takes place in the 1950s in the titular Grantchester, an arcadian village in Cambridgeshire.

London native James Norton ("Happy Valley") leads the cast as Rev. Sidney Chambers, an amiable (and handsome!) young Anglican priest and former Scots Guards officer. He gets drawn into a murder investigation in the first episode, much to the disapproval of overworked local detective Geordie Keating (Robson Green, "Strike Back").

As it turns out, however, Sidney's intuitive, coaxing technique proves the perfect foil for Geordie's gruff, no-nonsense approach when it comes to questioning suspects and witnesses. From there, an unlikely partnership forms, which grows into genuine friendship off the clock. The two have become a favorite duo on TV right now, thanks in part to the fantastic chemistry between the two actors.

"It's a very unlikely relationship," Green said when interviewed by British lifestyle and entertainment program "Lorraine." "It's very offbeat, very endearing, and it's a relationship that many people care about."

Though the mystery-of-the-week format keeps the series chugging along, the ongoing personal storylines are what really give the show its depth. Season 2 (or series 2, as the Brits call it) saw both Sidney and Geordie dealing with dilemmas of the heart, and viewers were keen to find out where the new season would take their respective relationships.

Sidney's case is a particularly complicated one. Throughout the series, he's been in love with Amanda Kendall (Morven Christie, "The A Word"), an heiress whose marital future lies in her wealthy father's hands, though she returns Sidney's affections. She left her husband at the end of last season, and gave birth to his child in the ensuing Christmas special.

Now, since openly declaring their (very obvious) feelings for one another, she and Sidney have been living in a sort of limbo; they're enjoying spending time together, but they know that, Sidney's position being what it is, they can't ultimately end up together.

"They're living in denial. They're having a lot of fun, but they are aware that they're star-crossed, because they can't really be together," Norton explained during a visit to "The One Show." "It's love vs. duty … in the '50s, a vicar wasn't allowed to marry a divorcée, so if she is going to separate from her previous marriage, she becomes unavailable to him."

Geordie may also cause some pursed lips this season. We know he's been happily married to his wife, Cathy (Kacey Ainsworth, "EastEnders"), but there's an obvious attraction to Margaret (Seline Hizli, "Land Girls"), his office secretary, who, you may recall, had a brief relationship with Sidney last season, before he ditched her for Amanda. I won't give away any details, but if you've watched the season thus far, you'll have witnessed certain Geordie-centric activities that have drawn outrage from audiences in Britain, where the full season has already aired.

"The whole series is a lot darker and grittier," Robson told Huffington Post U.K. "Geordie is a father and husband in denial about his situation, but that can only go on for so long. Both he and Sidney are being reckless with matters of the heart."

Of course, there's still as improbable a number of crimes and murders as ever in bucolic Grantchester, so mystery buffs still get their fix. This season more than ever, however, sees the cases of the week mixed in with the main cast's personal lives and internal conflicts.

You'll notice some new faces this season, both among the recurring cast and in one-off roles. Erstwhile "EastEnders" star Gary Beadle joins the series as Gabriel Atubo, the new Archdeacon who twists Sidney's moral knife when he reminds him that a clergyman must put duty above his own needs and lead by example (which is precisely the opposite of what Sidney wants to do right now). Peter Davison, whom "Doctor Who" fans may recognize as the fifth Doctor, appeared in last week's episode as Geoff Towler, a village solicitor and cricket captain who rules his family with an iron fist. Charlie Higson ("Broadchurch") appears later this season as Ronnie Maguire, the husband of Sidney's irascible housekeeper, who's been missing for 10 years.

The Zookeeper's Wife

During the Second World War, Jan Zabinski (Heldenbergh), head of the Warsaw Zoo, and his wife, Antonina (Chastain), risk everything to save as many of the city's Jewish residents as they can during the Nazi occupation. While the couple uses what resources they have to try to save their neighbors and friends, Dr. Lutz Heck (Brühl), the director of Berlin's zoo, pillages the Warsaw Zoo and takes the most valuable animals back to Germany, killing those that remain.

Director: Niki Caro. Stars: Jessica Chastain, Johan Heldenbergh, Daniel Brühl, Timothy Radford, Efrat Dor, Iddo Goldberg. 2017. 127 min. Biography.

Awakening the Zodiac

A couple purchases the contents of an abandoned storage locker, sight unseen, only to find it filled with useless junk, including a bunch of old home movies. Once Mick (West) and Zoe (Bibb) watch them with their friend Harvey (Craven), they discover that the films were made by the infamous and never-caught Zodiac serial killer. Convinced that the films, if they're real, would be worth a fortune, the trio sets out to prove their authenticity, which draws the attention of the still-at-large killer.

Director: Jonathan Wright. Stars: Shane West, Leslie Bibb, Matt Craven, Nicholas Campbell. 2017. 100 min. Crime.

Orphan Black

Sarah (Tatiana Maslany) continues her quest to free herself and the others from tyranny in a new episode of "Orphan Black," airing Saturday, July 1, on BBC America. One of many clones, Sarah and her allies attempt to stop a nefarious organization determined to control the future of human evolution.

Making a mockery: Andy Samberg riffs on cycling doping scandals

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Making a mockery: With the world's most recognized and most prestigious cycling event, the Tour de France, currently underway in Europe, it's a perfect time to look back at one of the sport's biggest scandals — even if that scandal is entirely made up.

At least, that seems to be the thinking behind HBO's new mockumentary, "Tour de Pharmacy," premiering Saturday, July 8. In a sport that's had more than its fair share of doping scandals, it was only a matter of time before the quick wit of a comedian was brought to bear against it.

The comedian in this case is "Brooklyn Nine-Nine" star Andy Samberg. The hilarious wise guy both stars in the special and serves as an executive producer for the not-at-all-serious look at a fictitious doping scandal that supposedly engulfed the cycling world in 1982.

This is the second sports mockumentary that Samberg has created for HBO, after 2015's tennis-focused "7 Days in Hell." For "Tour de Pharmacy," the former "SNL" star landed some serious talent.

Among those who join Samberg on screen are pro wrestler John Cena ("Trainwreck," 2015), Orlando Bloom ("Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Men Tell No Tales," 2017), Freddie Highmore ("Bates Motel"), Danny Glover ("Lethal Weapon," 1987), Jeff Goldblum ("Jurassic Park," 1993), Julia Ormond ("The Curious Case of Benjamin Button," 2008), James Marsden ("Westworld"), Kevin Bacon ("Mystic River," 2003), Maya Rudolph ("Bridesmaids," 2011), Daveed Diggs ("The Get Down") and many others.

The specific doping scandal examined in "Tour de Pharmacy" may be entirely made up, but in a sport that's had its share of controversy, even the silliest scenes don't seem far from the truth. The new mockumentary from the mind of Andy Samberg is off to the races Saturday, July 8, on HBO.

Get rich quick: Most of us could use a bit more money, but getting too much extra moolah can be life-altering, and not necessarily in good ways.

AMC's new summer series "Loaded," premiering Monday, July 17, is a look at just how life-changing a huge windfall can be.

The comedy-drama is an import from the U.K.'s Channel 4 and is based on Israeli series "Mesudarim." The Daily Telegraph called "Loaded" a "brasher and more blokey version of [HBO's] 'Silicon Valley,'" and the similarities are definitely there — both are comedies about a group of young techies trying to navigate the high-stakes world of business.

In "Loaded," four friends and business partners — played by Jim Howick ("Hellboy," 2004), Samuel Anderson ("Doctor Who"), Nick Helm ("Uncle") and Jonny Sweet ("Babylon") — sell their gaming company for an astounding amount of money. They become multimillionaires overnight and struggle to adapt their new lifestyles, with hilarious results.

Of course, nothing is ever that easy. Their company, which they're still associated with, is soon targeted by a lawsuit, which alleges that their hit game was based on a concept stolen from their old drug dealer.

Aimee-Ffion Edwards ("Peaky Blinders"), Mary McCormack ("K-PAX," 2001), Scarlett Alice Johnson ("EastEnders") and Lolly Adefope ("Rovers") help round out the cast in this story of ambition and gluttony, and play a part in the transformation of four "guys who play games" into "people who play THE game."

All the money, greed and guilt that any video game maker could ask for comes to AMC in "Loaded," premiering Monday, July 17.

America, celebrated: One day each year, Americans across the nation and around the world gather to celebrate the land of the free and the home of the brave. While every family and social group has its own Independence Day traditions, there's one that's been bringing all sorts of people together since 1979.

As it has for decades, PBS brings the magic of the nation's annual live patriotic concert into homes across the country with "A Capitol Fourth." The annual event attracts over half a million visitors to the west lawn of the U.S. Capitol every July 4, and millions more tune in around the globe.

While the greatest fireworks show in the United States provides a spectacular backdrop, attendees and viewers are treated to a glorious spectacle of music. As is tradition, the National Symphony Orchestra, the U.S. Army Herald Trumpets, the Choral Arts Society of Washington and the U.S. Army Ceremonial Band all provide patriotic tunes, and, as usual, they're joined by a number of big-ticket musical acts.

Emmy-nominated actor John Stamos ("Fuller House") serves as this year's host, with iconic band the Beach Boys, "The Voice" winner Chris Blue, the Four Tops, the Blues Brothers, Nashville icon Trace Adkins, "Hamilton" star Phillipa Soo, singer and "Descendants" (2015) star Sofia Carson and conductor Jack Everly all performing during the Fourth of July celebration on Capitol Hill, broadcast live on PBS.

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I was trying to find the start time for the next season of "APB," and there seems to be some suggestion that it won't return. Sure hope that's not true.

A: Sadly, it's not a suggestion anymore. "APB" has been canceled.

The techno-thriller cop show finished its first season Monday, April 24, and at least Fox was merciful — it officially canceled the show just a few weeks later, on May 11.

Series writer Trey Callaway took to Twitter to deliver the news to fans, and the eulogy. "I'm very disappointed to announce that 'APB' has been canceled. We had many amazing stories left to tell, but I'm incredibly proud of everything we accomplished ... 'Gideon out.'"

The "Gideon" he's referring to is the show's main character, Gideon Reeves, a tech-industry billionaire who buys control of Chicago's troubled 13th police precinct after witnessing his friend's murder. He transforms the district into a test lab for high-tech crime-fighting tools. Reeves was played by Justin Kirk, best known previously as the scene-stealing Uncle Andy in Showtime's "Weeds."

Q: Do you know if the Beatles and Bee Gees "Grammy Salute" TV specials will ever be released on DVD or Blu-ray?

A: Unfortunately, I don't know, and neither does the Recording Academy (a.k.a. the Grammys).

In 2014, CBS aired "The Night That Changed America: A Grammy Salute to The Beatles," and it followed that up earlier this year with "Stayin' Alive: A Grammy Salute to the Music of the Bee Gees." Both specials were ratings hits, but neither has been released on home video.

As is so often the case with music programming, the problem is apparently with publishing rights. Though the specials only featured songs by two bands, they included performances by literally dozens of major artists, all with their own publishing deals to navigate.

The people at the Recording Academy discussed the difficulties related to releasing the Beatles special in a Q&A section of their website (a very handy format, if I do say so myself). They say, in a statement loaded down with Beatles puns, that it's basically out of their hands.

"If this historic show was released on CD or DVD, we'd be listening and watching eight days a week. But, a release is subject to many artist approvals and rights clearances. Our hope is that it eventually will happen, so here's hoping we can work it out."

These rights issues haven't prevented CBS from making the Bee Gees special available in full on its website (though the same kind of rights issues means it's only viewable in the U.S.).

Q: Why isn't "The Sopranos" being rerun?

A: There are a couple of reasons why Tony Soprano and company don't show up on television much these days, but what it seems to come down to is the fact that regular TV just can't handle that show.

The groundbreaking mob drama's violence was famously casual, and its characters famously foul-mouthed — two things that broadcast and basic cable can't abide. There are standards for this sort of thing.

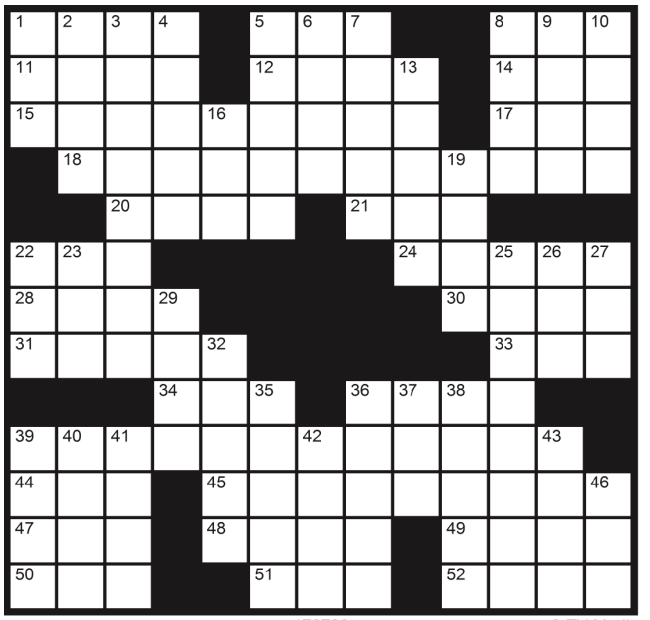

Indeed, when it was still airing new episodes on HBO in the early 2000s and getting all sorts of buzz, the consensus was that the show could only work on HBO, because as a premium-cable channel, it isn't subject to the same rules.

The show got particularly big headlines in 2005 when it sealed a rerun deal with basic cable channel A&E. The headlines needed to be big to capture two big pieces of news: It earned the highest per-episode price in history ($2.5 million), and HBO agreed to edit out most of the swearing and some of the more brutal killing.

Many reviewers argued that "The Sopranos" wasn't quite the same without the naughtier bits. That and the fact that episodes are particularly expensive means networks had a lot of reasons not to shell out for the reruns.

Late Laughs

Conan

In protest of President Trump abandoning the Paris Climate Accord, the CEO of Disney has resigned from Trump's Business Advisory Council. It's not a good sign when a company led by a giant talking mouse is telling the president to be more realistic.

The "Wonder Woman" movie shattered the glass ceiling, breaking $100 million in box office sales. In fact, the only way Wonder Woman could have done better is if she had campaigned in Wisconsin.

Not everyone is happy about "Wonder Woman." Several panelists on Fox News accused Wonder Woman of not being American enough because her costume isn't red, white and blue. They're also saying to really be American, it should be a double XL.

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

The White House announced today that they're kicking off "Infrastructure Week." It's like Shark Week, except American infrastructure might actually kill you.

The Late Late Show With James Corden

At a Walmart in Minnesota, a customer had to tackle a confused deer after it wandered into the store. The deer is fine and was released back into the wild, which makes this the happiest possible ending to a story of a deer walking into one of America's largest suppliers of hunting rifles.

Jimmy Kimmel Live

Cleveland's chance of winning is a very long shot ... but you can't ever count LeBron James out. He is very competitive. This is a guy who wanted to win so badly, he became the first person ever to move back to Cleveland.

Melania Trump is finally moving into the White House next week. They broke the news to her yesterday. She's taking it pretty hard. She does not seem to be excited about leaving her penthouse in New York to move into what is essentially public housing.

CBS

Zoo

In the year 2027, the future of the human race hangs in the balance as an army of hybrids sets out to take over the planet in a new episode of "Zoo," airing Thursday, July 6, on CBS. Based on the bestselling novel by James Patterson, the series began with a global wave of violent animal attacks against humans.

James Wolk stars in "Zoo"
