Three years hence

Consequences are dealt with in new season of 'The Affair'

By Cassie Dresch
TV Media

If you're a fan of Showtime's psychological drama "The Affair," you are no doubt itching for some more episodes. In a brief departure from the norm, the show premieres in November this year, instead of its regular early-October slot, and after the events of last season, there are plenty of questions that need answers, and answers that still leave questions. Season 3 of "The Affair" premieres Sunday, Nov. 20, on Showtime.

This season picks up about three years after the events of the season 2 finale. Noah (Dominic West, "The Wire") has just been released from prison after serving his sentence for (spoilers!) falsely admitting to vehicular homicide; Helen (Maura Tierney "ER") and her children have all but seemingly moved on; and Cole (Joshua Jackson, "Fringe"), Luisa (Catalina Sandino Moreno, "American Gothic") and Alison (Ruth Wilson, "The Lone Ranger," 2013) are trying to raise Joanie together.

In typical "The Affair" fashion, though, things are never as straightforward as they appear — with regards to both the storylines and the timeline. "When season 3 starts, it's three years later, so quite a bit of time has passed," Tierney said in an interview with Entertainment Weekly. "We go back and forth — sometimes it's a year and a half later, sometimes it's three years later. So everyone has moved on quite a bit, and Helen's in a new relationship and Noah is sort of beginning a new relationship."

Despite many of the characters moving on (and some not moving on), Scotty's (Colin Donnell, "Chicago Med") death has had a lasting impact on the characters. The big reveal at the end of season 2 — that Helen was driving drunk with Noah in the passenger seat when Scotty was hit — affects everyone involved in Montauk.

"The season will sort of be about ... all of them kind of dealing with the consequences once again of their actions in the previous season," Tierney said. "Everybody did it, not just Helen. Because Alison pushed him and Cole wouldn't let them be apart. Everybody played a role. Noah wouldn't drive, so we all did it. It's not only Helen's fault."

While the big four characters all try to come to terms with their roles in Scotty's death, series co-creator Sarah Treem says that season 3 will also try to answer some burning questions that many of us ask ourselves in the real world. "We're always asking ourselves, what is love?" she said in an interview with EW. "Is love a product of time and place and circumstance? Or is love something true that can't be undone? This season we kind of tried to answer those questions."

An answer to one of those questions — if love can be undone — may come in the form of Noah and Alison's relationship. Spoilers being floated around seem to indicate that Noah wants nothing to do with Alison anymore, and, as Tierney mentioned, he's getting involved with a new woman. That woman is Juliette Le Gall, played by French actress Irène Jacob ("Three Colors: Red," 1994). Juliette is described as a woman with her own secrets, but she helps Noah better understand himself and deal with his past trauma.

Jacob won't be the only new face joining the series this season. Brendan Fraser ("The Mummy," 1999) has been tapped for a recurring role, as has Jonathan Cake ("Desperate Housewives"). While Fraser's role has been mostly kept under wraps, Cake is slated to play Whitney's (Julia Goldani Telles, "Bunheads") boss and love interest. Jennifer Esposito ("Blue Bloods") returns for season 3 after appearing in three episodes last year as Noah's sister, Nina.

"The Affair" is a compelling drama, something that both fans and critics agree on. The series premiered in 2014 to a little more than 500,000 viewers in the U.S., but it has steadily picked up more eyeballs since that first episode. By the end of season 1, more than 950,000 people were tuning in, and the season 2 finale, which aired around Christmastime last year, picked up the series' first million-plus viewership (1.111 million, to be exact).

If ratings aren't enough to convince "The Affair" showrunners that they have something good on their hands, the accolades that keep pouring in should be. In its first season, Ruth Wilson took home the Golden Globe for Best Actress in a Television Drama, beating out Robin Wright ("House of Cards"), Julianna Margulies ("The Good Wife"), Claire Danes ("Homeland") and Viola Davis ("How to Get Away With Murder"). The series also took home the Globe for Best Drama Series over HBO juggernaut "Game of Thrones" and Netflix's "House of Cards." For season 2, Tierney took home the Globe for Best Supporting Actress in a Television Drama, and was nominated in similar categories at the Emmys and the Critics' Choice Television Awards.

The slightly extended wait for more thrilling episodes of Showtime's "The Affair" is now over. With many questions left unanswered and more undoubtedly on the horizon, you won't want to miss the premiere of the critically acclaimed series when it airs Sunday, Nov. 20, on Showtime.

I.T.

Life has been good to Mike Regan (Brosnan). The successful businessman has a gorgeous mansion sporting all the latest technology, a stunning wife (Friel) and a wonderful daughter (Scott). With his company on the brink of signing a deal that will change the aircraft business forever, though, Mike's relationship with his I.T. consultant, Ed (Frecheville), sours. When Mike's technology starts to turn against him and his family, uncovering hidden family secrets and stalking his teenage daughter, he begins to suspect that the estranged I.T. expert is hacking his life. Director: John Moore. Stars: Pierce Brosnan, James Frecheville, Anna Friel, Stefanie Scott, Adam Fergus. 2016. 95 min. Crime.

Kubo and the Two Strings

A young, one-eyed boy named Kubo (Parkinson) charms villagers with his magic, which he uses to bring origami to life. One day, he ignores his mother's (Theron) warning to never stay out after sunset, and, just as she had warned, her evil sisters appear and try to pluck out the boy's remaining eye. His mother manages to fight off her evil sisters (Mara), losing her own life, and Kubo sets out on an epic quest. Director: Travis Knight. Stars: Art Parkinson, Charlize Theron, George Takei, Matthew McConaughey, Rooney Mara. 2016. 101 min. Animation.

Modern music

Music's biggest stars perform at the 2016 American Music Awards

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Modern music: Buckle up, music fans, Sunday, Nov. 20, is going to be a wild night. The American Music Awards have been a fixture on ABC since their creation by Dick Clark in 1973, and with some of today's biggest music industry titans lined up to perform at this year's event, it promises to be a night to remember.

Pop star Lady Gaga, R&B singer Bruno Mars and punk rock band Green Day take to the stage to perform. Although none of the stars have their own nominations this year, they're not strangers to the AMAs. Lady Gaga has earned nine nominations in past years (taking home one trophy), Bruno Mars has seven nominations (with one win) and Green Day has a whopping 11 nominations and three trophies.

Unlike the Grammys, the American Music Award winners are determined by music fans who can vote for their favorite nominees online, and the nominees were announced in October by industry veterans Joe Jonas and Rachel Platten. Even the choice of nominees is crowdsourced: record sales, radio airplay time, online music video streaming and even social network activity are all used to determine which artists, songs and albums get nominated in the various categories.

Other performers slated to perform include indie rocker James Bay, girl group and former "The X-Factor" contestants Fifth Harmony, British rocker Sting, musical duo Twenty One Pilots, Latin pop sensation Shakira, electropop singer Halsey and Colombian dance-pop star Carlos Vives.

It may be too late to vote for this year's best music, but it isn't too late to watch the winners receive their well-deserved recognition. The American Music Awards air Sunday, Nov. 20, on ABC.

Books, artifacts and adventure: A library might not be the most obvious place to find high-stakes adventure, but when the library in question is also a centuries-old depository for ancient and powerful magical artifacts, adventure, it seems, is never hard to find.

The third season of "The Librarians" kicks off Sunday, Nov. 20, on TNT, with new adventures and a new villain set to match wits with the titular bookkeepers.

Vanessa Williams joins the cast in a recurring role as the tough and brilliant General Rockwell, the head of a secretive government department. Her goal is to take over the library and gain control of the magical artifacts kept within; apprehending the Librarians at the same time would just be the icing on the cake.

Williams is no stranger to playing a villainous character. She famously starred as the nasty magazine creative director and former supermodel Wilhelmina Slater in "Ugly Betty." The multi-talented actress, fashion designer and singer has also starred in "Desperate Housewives," "666 Park Avenue" and had a successful arc in "The Good Wife."

"The Librarians" is a direct spinoff of the three The Librarian TV movies starring Noah Wyle ("ER") that premiered on TNT in 2004 ("The Librarian: Quest for the Spear"), 2006 ("The Librarian: Return to King Solomon's Mines") and 2008 ("The Librarian III: Curse of the Judas Chalice").

Starring Rebecca Romijn ("X-Men: The Last Stand," 2006), Christian Kane ("Leverage"), Lindy Booth ("Dawn of the Dead," 2004), John Harlan Kim ("Neighbours") and John Larroquette ("Night Court"), "The Librarians" follows the adventures of a group of people chosen by the magical library to secure powerful magical artifacts and to keep them safe from outsiders who wish to use their power for their own ends — people like Williams's General Rockwell.

The rollicking magical adventure continues when "The Librarians" returns for a third season Sunday, Nov. 20, on TNT.

Whose line this time?: CW is throwing out the script for next year's summer schedule. The network has renewed the improv comedy "Whose Line is it Anyway?" for a fifth season, which is set to air next summer, along with "Masters of Illusion" and "Penn & Teller: Fool Us," two of its other popular unscripted programs.

"Whose Line is it Anyway?" originally aired on ABC from 1998 to 2007 with Drew Carey ("The Price is Right") as host, and CW relaunched it in 2013 with its original three stars: Colin Mochrie ("Almost Heroes"), Ryan Stiles ("Two and a Half Men") and Wayne Brady ("Don't Forget the Lyrics!").

Comedian and actress Aisha Tyler ("The Talk") serves as the reincarnated version's host, presenting situations and prompts provided by the live audience to the three stars (plus a weekly guest star) that they must then act out — without a script, and without knowing ahead of time just what they'll be asked to do, to hilarious results.

In "Penn & Teller: Fool Us," magicians perform their signature tricks in front of one of the world's most famous magical duos, Penn & Teller, who try to figure out just how the trick was done. It's a fascinating look behind the scenes of magical illusions, with a good dose of the duo's signature humor mixed in. It's a perfect complement to "Masters of Illusion," a classic magic show that showcases some of the most head-scratching acts to ever have happened on stage.

Rachel Platten and Joe Jonas announced the nominees of the 2016 American Music Awards

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I was wondering if the show "Grimm" is going to return any time soon. I love this show and would really be downhearted if it were not to come back.

A: Your heart can stay where it is, because "Grimm" is coming back. Pretty soon, in fact. That's the good news. The bad news is it will be doing so for the last time. The upcoming sixth season, premiering Friday, Jan. 6, on NBC, will be its last.

The network issued a news release about the show's premiere date, and casually mentioned in the text that it's the show's last season. Given the brief and emotionless way NBC dropped the word, we have to look to the strange and barely legible world of social media to see what the people involved thought about the news.

"Well, if I have to end the ride of a lifetime with the most wonderful crew in the biz, it's good to know I'll be doing it with a bang," Claire Coffee ("Franklin & Bash"), who plays Adalind, wrote on Instagram. And actually, she didn't write the word "bang," she used a little explosion symbol, which is how things are done on Instagram.

"Will we go out with a group sob?" wrote David Giuntoli ("13 Hours," 2016), who stars as Nick. "Probs." (That's social media speak for "probably.")

No one is offering much in the way of plot details for the final season, though NBC said the show "will begin its last chapter with the battle fans have long been waiting for — Nick versus Capt. Renard."

Throughout the series, the two have had a sort of will-they-or-won't-they relationship as enemies, working together against assorted demons, monsters and the occasional human, but never trusting each other.

Q: When oh when will we ever get our "Doc Martin" fix on PBS again?

A: It's hard to say, thanks to the Brits' taste for anarchy. Generally, you can count on an American show to premiere about a year after the last time it premiered. The Brits, however, seem to air things any time they like.

The show's British broadcaster, ITV, reportedly held a swanky dinner for the show's cast after season 7 wrapped, at which they announced the season 8 renewal.

Ian McNeice ("DoctorWho"), who plays Bert Large in the show, was at the dinner, and said that the network also announced a (rough) release date. "We will make it in the year 2017, because we always have a break in between."

Rest assured that, whenever they get it, we won't be far behind. Season 7 aired in the fall of 2015 in the U.K., and was on TV in North America by winter.

Q: How does Christian Bale appear so skinny in "The Machinist"? Is it computer graphics like when they made Chris Evans look so small in "Captain America"?

A: No CGI there: Bale did it all through an almost terrifying dedication to the craft. He dropped 63 pounds to take the part of an insomniac machine worker who is slowly losing his mind in 2004's "The Machinist."

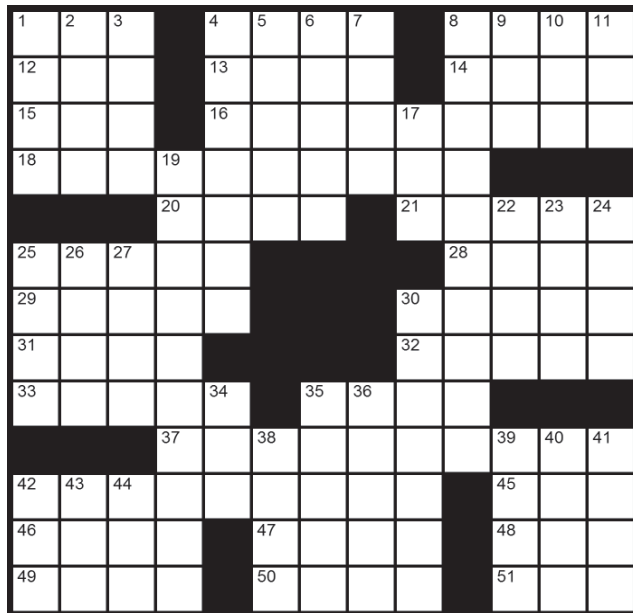

The wild stories that circulate about his transformation make it almost legendary. Bale reportedly lost it all by eating only a can of tuna and an apple per day. And co-star Michael Ironside ("Top Gun," 1986) said it was all due to a typo: The scriptwriter estimated the character's target weight based on someone several inches shorter than Bale, and never got the chance to correct it.

Bale himself has been reluctant to indulge in the legend-building. For example, when asked by the BBC why he decided to starve himself for a role, he replied: "It just didn't enter my head that it could be done any other way."

As impressive as his loss was, Bale has become something of a hero in the weight-gain community as well. His next movie was "Batman Begins" (2005) for which he had to gain 109 pounds of muscle in under a year. A number of fitness websites use Bale as an example of the right way to put on muscle without putting on fat.

Late Laughs

Conan

During a campaign event at a Florida pumpkin patch, Donald Trump met with pumpkin farmers. There was an awkward moment when one of the pumpkin farmers tried to carve Trump's head.

Over the weekend, in Gettysburg, Donald Trump told a crowd that, as soon as the election ends, he will sue the women accusing him of sexual misconduct. It's being called the "second greatest Gettysburg Address in history."

A new report in Indiana has found that thousands of dead people are still registered to vote. Which explains why, today, Donald Trump held four rallies and three séances.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

Hillary Clinton is out there campaigning through the home stretch, still trying to win people over. In fact, yesterday, she did an interview with a hip-hop radio station, and said she loves to dance any chance she gets. Then the DJ was like: "Well, that's all the time we have!"

The Late Late Show With James Corden

Hillary's voters are now more excited to vote for Hillary than Trump voters are to vote for Trump. Which is crazy because getting excited about Hillary is like getting excited about taking your car in for an oil change. It's not fun, but the alternative is your car bursting into flames.

Jimmy Kimmel Live

Bill Clinton is trying to figure out what his official title will be if his wife becomes president. Hillary has said she likes the term "First Gentleman." She hasn't been able to say it without laughing, but she likes it. Bill has suggested "First Volunteer," "First Dude" and "First Laddie." If I had a vote, I would go with "First Lady's Man."

If I was Hillary, I would hold my election party at a Trump Hotel, just to confuse him. I would host the party at the Trump Hotel and I would leave on the Access Hollywood bus.
